AN ANGLER'S ELYSIUM.

According to advertisements all summer resorts are alike. They are the best ever—but if fishing is better anywhere else than it is in "Georgian Bay" we do not know where it is. There is a greater variety of fish in this water than anywhere else, and they are always hungry. No one ever counted the fish in the Georgian Bay, but those that have been caught there have been counted and eaten, and if you read the Government reports on fisheries, you know that Georgian Bay supplies more fish than any other equal body of water in the world. The only place you can afford to fish is where the fish are numerous, big and delicious in flavor, and that place is Georgian Bay—so the fishermen say. Suppose you send for booklet, issued by grand Trunk Railway System free, telling about the home of the bass, pickerel, pike and the noble trout family. Address F. P. Dwyer, 290 Broadway, New York.

"But," replied Mrs. Hiram Offen, "you broke the contract in the first place by representing yourself as a cook."

No Wonder.

"Yes," said the bottle of ginger ale, "I hate these temperance cranks."

"My! You don't say?" exclaimed the lemon-squeezer.

"Yes," said the other, "if I'm ever drunk it will be on account of them."

Maurice Audsley, of East Front street, has received word from New York that his sister has successfully passed through a serious operation and is recovering.

PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS TO MEET HERE MONDAY.

"Marty" O'Loughlin in Contest With Doebel, of Fairfield.

A golf match of more than usual interest will be played at the Plainfield Country Club on Monday afternoon, June 18, between "Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional of the club, and Professional Doebel, of the Fairfield Country Club, Greenwich, Conn. For some time there has been great rivalry between these pros, each claiming superiority over the other. The Plainfield golf enthusiasts know the playing strength of O'Loughlin and he is a strong favorite in the match, being backed to win.

On the other hand Doebel has many friends who will accompany him to Plainfield and fully expect him to defeat the home-bred professional. The following day, June 19, the two pros will meet in a second match at the Fairfield Country Club.

It is almost an assured fact that O'Loughlin will enter the open championship play at Chicago the latter part of the month, but the results of the matches with Doebel will largely help to determine whether he will go or not. If he makes a good showing against Doebel he will undoubtedly take the trip to the Windy City, where he will have the opportunity of meeting the best players in the county. O'Loughlin has improved considerably this year in his play. He is much better on long drives, while in putting and approaching he is more accurate. A large gallery is expected to watch the match at the Plainfield Country Club on June 18, and many friends will accompany O'Loughlin to Greenwich the next day.

MINTURN DECLINES TO ASSIST STATE.

Senator from Hudson Says His Sense of Professional Ethics Forbids Him to Help in Prosecution.

Toms River, June 14.—The latest development in the Brouwer murder case is that State Senator James F. Minturn, of Hoboken, who had been selected by Justice Hendrickson and Prosecutor rBown to assist the State in the preparation of the case and in its trial, has declined the position.

Senator Minturn gives several reasons.

One is that he is the minority member of the Senate committee to probe life insurance business in New Jersey and he cannot tell how much of his time that will take. His chief reason is, however, that he feels he cannot, in deference to his professional honor, accept the case.

Senator Minturn has long been a visitor at Toms River, coming summer and winter, spring and fall. He was at the Riverside House the other day when he received one of the letters that have been written to many of Brouwer's friends urging him to cheer the accused man by making a friendly call at the jail. Senator Minturn did so and while there, Dr. Brouwer persisted in telling Mr. Minturn that he was innocent and outlined the way in which he proposed to prove his innocence.

Senator Minturn accordingly wrote the following letter to Prosecutor Brown, in reply to the latter's communication asking him to assist in the case:

"Dear Mr. Brown:—

"I received your despatch informing me of my appointment by Judge Hendrickson to assist the State in the prosecution of the Brouwer case and I have given the matter careful consideration.

"My acquaintance with Dr. Brouwer extending over a number of years and a conversation had with him since his arrest, in which he reposed a friendly confidence in me concerning his case, make it impossible for me to accept the appointment without violating my conception of legal ethics, and I therefore am compelled to decline it.

"Thanking you and Mr. Judge Hendrickson, however, for the honor you have conferred upon me by making it, I remain,

"Very truly yours,
"JAMES F. MINTURN."

Dr. John Marshall, of the University of Pennsylvania, was yesterday installed at the Genth laboratory, in Philadelphia, to assist in the analysis that Prof. F. A. Genth is making of the parts of Mrs. Brouwer's vital organs.

VIOLATES OWN LAW.

Speeder Allowed to Go After Proving He Fathered Measure.

Metuchen, June 14.—C. A. Goldthwait, chaudeur for M. A. Isaacs, of 911 Park avenue, New York, got his employer into two or three kinds of trouble here Sunday. First he ran the machine down the main street here forty miles an hour and without a number on the front end. He was arrested and fined $25.

After being discharged the man started for New Brunswick and managed to run into the repair wagon of the Public Service Corporation, upsetting the wagon, horse and driver. Isaacs wanted to settle the damage on the spot, but the driver said he had better pay the Public Service Corporation.

F. W. Fisk, of Orange, was also arrested on a charge of automobile speeding. He was one of the framers of the automobile law. He was released. Charles Grant, of 244 Harrison avenue, Jersey City, was also arrested for auto speeding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Newhall, of this city, have gone to Connecticut for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Ayres, of Pittsburg, Pa., are visiting relatives and friends in Plainfield.

TEAMS FROM ALL STATES

THE POSSESSIONS, TOO

Competitions Begin on September 4—War Department to Have Charge.

Washington June 14.—The War Department is making arrangements for the next national rifle match, which is to be held at Sea Girt, N. J., beginning September 4. Unusual efforts are being made to secure the attendance of a team from each State in the Union as well as from Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. It is improbable that there will be any team from the Philippines, however, although at one time it looked as though arrangements had practically been completed for the attendance of a team from our Asiatic territory, but it was believed that the expense of bringing a team from the Philippines to Sea Girt and their return would be so much as to lead to unfavorable criticism.

The War Department, however, is hopeful that every State in the United States will be represented by a team at Sea Girt, and has addressed letters to the adjutants-general of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, urging them to make provisions for the atendance of a team from their States. Accurate rifle shooting is calculated by experts of the department to count as eight and one-half points out of ten in estimating the efficiency of a soldier one the lone of battle, and holds that while the teams from the above-named States may not win the prizes, the members would be brought into contact with the finest military rifle shots in the world and thus be enabled to gather information and ideas relative to shooting which it would be impossible to obtain under any other circumstances. Such information would be disseminated to other members of the national guards of these States. This would undoubtedly cause many others to take an interest in rifle practice and directly promote a greater interest in such practice and incidentally in all other matters relating to the National Guard.

While the War Department understands that the question of sending a team to the national match is largely one of expense money, it is believed that every State and Territory should be able to spare from its apportionment of the annual federal appropriation the few hundred dollars necessary for this purpose. The information gained at these competitions is believed to be worth to the States many times the amount of money it will cost to be represented by a team.

In view of the great interest taken by the newspapers of the country in the matter of rifle shooting and in the coming national match at Sea Girt, the committee on publicity of the national board for the promotion of rifle practice will this year make a new departure, which it is expected will be highly commended. The national rifle match will be followed by the annual matches of the National Rifle Association of America and the committee on publicity has arranged with the National Rifle Association to have this year a "press match." Every year there are a number of newspaper men in attendance on the rifle matches, sending special reports to the larger newspapers of the country. Some teams bring with them newspaper men, who send reports of the shooting done by these teams to the papers in the State from which the team comes. In addition, a number of newspaper men are good shots and members of the National Guard, and frequently a team will have a newspaper man on it. In recognition of these facts and the interest which has been taken in the subject by the press in general, the committee on publicity of the national board offered to give a prize for a "press match" at Sea Girt next September, to be shot in connection with the other matches of the National Rifle Association. The offer was not only accepted by the National Rifle Association, but that organization will add several prizes on its own account, and thus the "press match" will be a very respectable one, although this will be the first time a match of this kind has ever been shot in the United States.

THREATENS TO SUE RUTGERS PUBLICATION.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 14.—George W. Wilmot, who resigned as director of the Rutgers College Glee Club in May, by request, has retained counsel to institute proceedings against the person or persons responsible for an alleged scurrilous article in the "Largum," the college publication.

He says that, while it purported to give the reasons for his resignation, it was really a libelous attack, declaring that he had been compelled to resign, the club having suffered from his incompetence and carelessness.

EATONTOWN WRECK INQUEST BEGINS TODAY.

Coroner Tetley Will Begin Investigation—Debris Burned.

Eatontown, June 14.Coroner John T. Tetley, of Red Bank, will begin today an inquest into the death of George Van Duzer, the man who was killed in the wreck of the Central's Atlantic City flyer Monday, and has empaneled the following jury: Benjamin Eldridge, Oceanport; C. V. Scobey, Scobeyville; A. L. VanWinkle, William Worthley, G. C. Morton and Frank Dangler, of Eatontown.

Late Tuesday Mrs. VanDuzer came here and claimed the body of her husband. She accompanied it to Hackettstown, where it was buried yesterday. She was one the verge of collapse. Examination of the body of VanDuzer discloses the fact that the man died a horrible death by suffocation in the mud. He suffered no broken bones, cuts or fractures, and neither was he rushed.

He was thrown partly through a window of the combination coach in which he was sitting and his face embedded fully in the soft mud of the meadow. He was so pinned down by seats that he could not extricate himself, and he could not be reached in an hour. He was finally taken out, only after hard work digging, sawing and cutting.

Work of clearing up the wreckage was finished yesterday afternoon. Railroad men say that they never saw a train so thoroughly wrecked in New Jersey. The only thing that prevented dozens of deaths was the fact that the train rolled over in a soft meadow.

Nearly all traces of the wreck have been removed. When it was found impracticable to repair the cars, orders were given to burn them. In removing the trucks a workman was badly crushed. The parlor cars, which were not badly damaged, were taken to the company's repair shops at Lakehurst.

DIPLOMAS GIVEN IN PUBLIC AND PRIVATE SCHOOLS

SOME GOOD SPEECHES

Rev. Mr. Herring Addresses 'Plains Pupils—A. H. Clark at Dunellen—Lists of the Graduates.

Commencement exercises were held at John Leal's School this morning and at the Dunellen High School and the Scotch Plains high schools last night.

Leal's School.

The closing commencement exercises of John Leal's School for Boys, occurred this morning, when the pupils of the lower grades took part in a programme consisting of recitations and prize orations and awards were made for proficiency in studies. The exercises were, as usual, attended by a large number of parents and friends and the affair was a pleasing one for all.

The graduating class this year numbers nine young men, although there were fifteen in it one year ago. The others were obliged to give up school for various reasons. Those in the class of 1906 are John Valiant, president; Edward Browne, secretary; William T. Glenney, David Guttierez, Lawrence C. Stryker, Charles P. Lyman, Stanley E. Bates, Lawrence Smith and Charles Chapman. It is expected that a majority of the young men will continue their studies next year in colleges. Those who have decided to do so and have passed their examinations are Stanley E. Bates, Columbia; Charles P. Lyman, Lehigh, and Lawrence C. Stryker, Princeton.

English—Clifford A. Hall, Lyman Campbell, W. W. Wilson, T. M. Day, 3d, Thomas Foote, Donald B. Fullerton, A. F. Randolph, Otis Averill. History—Clifford A. Hall, L. G. Carman, Richard Depew, Lyman Campbell. German—Murray Townsend, A. F. Randolph, Russell Lawrence. Algebra—A. F. Randolph. Geometry—Stanley E. Bates. Arithmetic—Clifford A. Hall, W. W. Wilson. Cicero—A. F. Randolph. Elementary Latin—W. W. Wilson, Lyman Campbell, Thomas Foote, Clifford A. Hall, John Uhler. Prize in penmanship—Donald B. Fullerton.

During the exercises there were mandolin and violin selections by several pupils of the school.

Last night the Class of '06 placed its banner on the front of the school building and the members jealously guarded it. The junior class did not make any attempt to remove the banner.

Scotch Plains.

The annual commencement exercises of the Scotch Plains public school were held in the Baptist church, last night, in all probability being the last of the department to take place in the village. In the future all local pupils who desire to take the higher courses will become members of the Plainfield High School at the township's expense. The arrangements have been perfected by the Boards of Education and will go into effect at the close of the summer vacation.

Music by Suhr's Imperial orchestra opened the programme, the church by that time being filled with graduates of the school, parents and friends. On the platform back of the prettily decorated pulpit were the members of the class of '06, Miss Elsa Mae Cook, Miss Helen Augusta Southard, Miss Maud Octavia Mercier and George Joseph Brick. An immense flag covered the background, the combination of patriotic and floral colors and white graduation gowns forming a pretty picture.

Prayer was offered by Rev. T. Moore-Smith and the first essay of the evening was read by Miss Cook. It was entitled, "Book Friends" and told in an interesting way what an important part books play in the lives of young and old. In another essay George Joseph Brick related important facts in connection with "The United States Postal Service" and Miss Southard reviewed "The Mistakes of a Night" in a well written composition.

Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian Church, delivered the following address:

Matthew Arnold, the English poet and essayist, said: "There is a power not ourselves that makes for righteousness." Someone commenting on that remark added: "It is the power not ourselves that makes for civilization and it is because we have learned to lay hold on that power that we have made progress in the world." From one point of view education is the discovery of self. From another point of view, education is the discovery of the power not ourselves.

Education reveals to us the world that is outside of ourselves. It tells us how we may grapple with that power, and make it subservient to our wills. Ajax of ancient story possessed such gigantic strength he could lift great masses of rock and hurl them at the enemy. But contrast that strength with the great lifting machines the Pennsylvania Railroad is using in New York in the construction of its great tunnel. Man without the strength of the great Ajax lays holds of the power not himself. These machines not only lift great rocks but seem to obey every will of the man in control. It demanded great muscular ability to wield an oar on a Roman galley. It is doubtful if we could find men with similar strength today.

In this sort of strength these men exceed us. But we have added another strength that they knew nothing about, and we can do what they never could do with all their muscular ability. We have laid hold of the power not ourselves; the power of steam and we have so studied its laws and the best way to apply it, that we can drive a twenty-four thousand ton liner across the ocean in a week's time, and not become exhausted with the effort either.

In one of these liners it would take at least twenty strong men to manage the rudder if they had to do that with unaided strength. Yet one man performs this task and performs it with ease. The steam steering gear exactly obeys his thought and will. Think of the soldier in the middle ages clad in the armor such as one finds in the armories of Europe, then add to this armor a sword or spear that men today find difficult even to lift. Think of the strength these men must have possessed, yet we know very well they would have stood no chance against the soldiers of today.

What is the difference? Simply this, that while our natural strength has not advanced beyond that of our ancestors, we have exceeded them in this that we have laid hold of the power not ourselves. The purpose of education, is this, then, to show us the power of mind over matter. Knowledge certainly is power. Power in the broadest meaning of that term.

Education, therefore, trains the mind to grapple with the power not ourselves. And we have grappled with it, and we have harnessed it to obey our wills. We have made gravitation, heat and electricity work for us.

There is a great hue and cry against the desecration of that great national wonder, Niagara Falls, and rightly so. The greed and graft of the age is so great that everything is being estimated in terms of dollars and cents. Yet men have told us of the great loss of power there is in permitting the Niagara to remain simply a spectacle without making it work for us. Years ago, Tesla said he could light Chicago and New York with the power of Niagara.

There is an abundance of unused power in the world. The power that God wills men should discover power to bless the world.

It was a conceit of the ancients that the Pillars of Hercules or the straits of Gibraltar marked the boundaries of the world and that there was practically no more beyond. And even in the days of Columbus men had a very limited view of the extent of things. But Columbus believed there was more beyond, and he had the courage to investigate.

Just before the Columbian Exhibition in Chicago in 1893, there was brought from Spain three vessels or caravels that were exact in size and shape to those Columbus and his sailors used when they sailed to discover India and found America instead.

So small were these vessels and so peculiar in structure that no sailors could be found to follow the example of Columbus and sail them across the Atlantic. I don't suppose the danger of such a voyage in such vessels troubled Columbus, so intent was he in his mission. It was a difficult task in every way for Columbus. But no difficulty deterred him, and he was rewarded.

The power that is not ourselves does not yield to the control of man at the very beginning. There is an instructive story in the life of Edison that preaches a great lesson of perseverance. He was telling a friend of the difficulty he experienced with the phonograph in his efforts to make it repeat an aspired sound. He said from eighteen to twenty hours a day for the last seven months I have

FREEMAN-DANIEL WEDDING

A BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Ceremony at Crescent Avenue Church Largely Attended—Daughter of Leslie M. Daniel.

Miss Genevieve Daniel, daughter of Edwin Moore Daniel, of West Eighth street, and sister of Leslie M. Daniel, and Arthur Fraleigh Freeman, eldest son of Mrs. William A. Freeman, of Sandford avenue, were married in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from this city, New York, Brooklyn and other points.

Miss Daniel was attended by her sister, Mrs. Charles Bush, of Brooklyn, as matron-of-honor, and Mrs. George Geyser, of Easton, Pa., and Mrs. Frederick Green Smith, of Brooklyn, as bridesmatrons. Edith Beers, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Donald Geyser, of Easton, Pa., acted as page and ring bearer. Fred H. Freeman, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Joseph F. Duffy, of Port Chester, N. Y.; Frederick Green Smith and George Tremaine Morse, of Brooklyn; Arthur Killmer, Albert D. Beers and Edwin M. Daniel, 2d, of Plainfield.

The bride was gowned in white embroidered chiffon, over white silk, trimmed with duchesse lace and she carried a bouquet of white orchids. The matron-of-honor and bridesmatrons were gowned in white lace over blue silk. The matron-of-honor carried a bouquet of pink carnations and the bridesmatrons carried white chiffon parasols, over blue silk. The flower girl was dressed in white with pink and she carried a basket of pink roses. The page was also dressed in a suit of white and he carried the wedding ring.

Victor Baier, organist and choirmaster of Old Trinity church, New York, was at the organ. He gave a half-hour recital prior to the arrival of the bridal party and then rendered the wedding marches. Mr. Baier is an intimate friend of the groom and was his musical teacher for a long time.

The ushers led the way, followed by the page, flower girl, bridesmatrons, matron-of-honor and the bride escorted by her father, who gave her in marirage. At the altar the party met the groom, best man and the officiating minister.

After the ceremony the flower girl led the way for the bridal party, strewing roses in the pathway of the bride and groom as they left the church. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's father in West Sixth street, which was attended only by the relatives and a few intimate friends. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Freeman left on a wedding journey. Upon their return they will live at Bretton Hall, New York, where the groom is engaged as manager.

The bride received a large number of costly gifts and in the exchange of remembrances among the bridal party, the groom gave the bride a heart of pearls, and she gave the groom a scarf pin of oriental pearls and diamonds. The bride gave to the matron-of-honor and bridesmatrons blue feather boas and to the flower girl and page gold pins. The groom's gift to the best man and ushers were scarf pins of green and gold leaves and pearls.

Both the bride and groom are well known here in society circles. They have frequently attended social affairs at the Park Club, as well as in this city. Mr. Freeman sang in the choir at Grace church for several years and as often taken part in musicles here and in New York. His wife is a most estimable woman and enjoys the acquaintance of a large circle of friends.

Arcanumites Enjoy Social Evening.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed an informal social time, last night, in its rooms in the Babcock building. The evening was spent in playing whist, euchre and poll and later strawberries and ice cream were served. H. A. Hanaford was chairman of the entertainment committee, and he was assisted by the other members of the social committee.

Attending State Bar Meeting.

S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., of the borough, accompanied by his wife, left this morning for Atlantic City, where he will attend the meeting of the State Bar Association. Mr. and Mrs. Swackhamer will probably remain at the seashore for a few days.

MOTHER RETURNS HOME, CONVINCED "MISS DIEM" IS NOT HELEN.

Mrs. Marie Kuenlen, of West Front street, whose daughter, Miss Helen Kuenlen, disappeared from home on April 21, returned last night from Lancaster, Pa., feeling assured that it was not her daughter that stopped at the home of Mrs. Mary Malbert, a few days ago. The girl thought to be Miss Kuenlen was not seen, but when Mrs. Kuenlen was told that she had blue eyes and a head of light hair, she felt convinced that the woman was not her daughter, because she has brown eyes and a heavy head of hair. In many other respects the woman answered the description.

The result of the trip to Lancaster leaves the searchers exactly where they were a week after the girl's disappearance. They knew then, approximately, in what neighborhood she was likely to be found. She had been seen in Newark, and later in Roselle, and the search was carried on between here and the State metropolis. As the days went on, and it was seen that no further trace of the girl could be found in this neighborhood, the police and the other searchers threw their hands up, and waited for outside information. It was felt that the girl was as likely to be in Germany as Union county, and that feeling has returned.

One day last week Chief Kiely received an anonymous not telling him that the girl was still alive, but not much attention has been paid to it. The chances are that it was written by some crank who has been wrought up over the case.

"This is one of the most puzzling cases I ever handled," said Chief Kiely this morning. "What I would like to know, first of all, to a certainty, is how much money the girl had with her when she left. Mrs. Kuenlen says she doesn't know. The money question is important, because the distance she travels and the amount of time she can keep herself in retirement depends on the sum of money Miss Kuenlen had with her."

Appointee Declines to Serve.

The Scotch Plains school system stands at present without a principal, the recent appointee having declined to serve. Howard White, who had held the position for five years, recently tendered his resignation, and J. B. Stauffer, of Lancaster, Pa., was named as his successor. Mr. Stauffer met the Board of Education a few days ago and when he learned that the High School course was to be eliminated, he decided not to take the place. Several other candidates are under consideration and the position will be filled during the summer.

Alleged Blackmailing Scheme.

Charles Eaton, the colored carpenter arrested on a charge made by Martha Stevens, a fifteen-year-old colored girl, was held for the grand jury this morning by Justice Mosher. The hearing was a long one. S. S. Swackhamer, counsel for the prisoner, made a hard fight to secure a dismissal of the complaint, alleging that it had been made to help a blackmailing scheme. F. J. Blatz appeared for the State. The offense being unbailable, Eaton was committed.

J. E. Flannery's New Location.

J. E. Flannery, the blacksmith and carriage man whose shop on East Third street was recently bought by D. C. Smalley, has decided to locate across the street. He has purchased from the heirs of former Tax Collector John Johnson the property at Church and East Third streets, and will remove the house now on it to the rear of the lot to face the former thoroughfare. He will then build a two-story modern structure for the continuance of his business.

New Council Growing.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., since its institution several weeks ago, has made steady increase in its membership. At every meeting applications for new members have been received and a number have been initiated. Arrangements are being made for initiatory work at the meeting on Monday night. On Monday night, June 25, the council will receive a present of a Bible and an American flag from the wives of the members.

Fire at W. H. Forristel's Home.

While using an oil stove at the home of W. H. Forristel, Belleview avenue, this morning, the oil in the tank caught fire from the blaze and set fire to the shades in the kitchen and scorching the ceilings. The dining room and hallway were damaged by smoke before the blaze was extinguished. The loss will amount to about $150.

—The graduation exercises of the Groszmann School at Watchung Crest will be held tomorrow.

PREPARING A PLATFORM

Colbyites Will Issue Statement of Aims Next Week.

WILL PICK CANDIDAAES

Tucker To Be Endorsed and Runyon Will Be Urged To Run For Nomination—Hall Chairman of Meeting.

The platform on which the reform candidates will run for Republican nominations will be formulated and announced next week. At a meeting of the executive committee of the Equal Taxation League, in Elizabeth, last night, it was decided to make the definite aims of the organization public next Tuesday, through a statement to the newspapers. Chairman Runyon, H. L. Hall and R. Henry Depew were at the meeting.

In connection with the enunciation of principles, the league will make known its choice of candidates for the assembly nominations. One of the three present assemblymen will be endorsed—Everard K. Tucker, of Elizabeth. It is quite certain that Perkins and Tillman will not. Perkins has been of the machine, machinery and Tillmann was "Me, too" to every move of the diminutive leader.

It is also quite certain that John F. Dryden will not be favored for a second term in the United States Senate. No pledge of support to George Record in his candidacy for the Senate will be tacked on the assembly timber.

Judge Runyon will be urged to allow his name to go forth on the assembly slate, but whether he can be prevailed upon to consent is a very open question. The Judge's strength in this city makes him an ideal candidate, and a strong effort will undoubtedly be made to put him on the slate, but he has refused to state whether he will make the run, and may not feel that he ought to. He has not said he won't, however, and his friends in the movement cling to the hope that he will. One of the nominations may come from Summit, and if Runyon does not run, Elizabeth will receive the third nomination.

Plans for the mass meeting to be held at the theatre next Tuesday night have been completed. H. L. Hall has consented to preside, and Fagan, Record and Colby will speak.

Chairman Runyon has extended a personal invitation to Chairman Fisk, of the Republican city committee, to attend the meeting, extends an invitation to every voter.

DROPPED IN THE SOUND.

"Bobby" Leach, the Local Aeronaut, Has a Thrilling Experience.

"Bobby" Leach, the well-known local aeronaut, returned today from Providence, R. I., where he has been filling an engagement. While away he made two single ascensions and one double in company with his wife. The latter was one of the best he has ever done, the balloon rising to a height of 5,000 feet before the parachute was cut away. Mrs. Leach landed safely on the mainland but "Bobby" was dropped into the waters of Long Island sound. He was fished out by the crew of a boat that had been watching him.

While at the park, "Bobby" picked up two twelve foot paper balloons which he brought back with him and will send up from in front of the Hotel Iroquois, probably tonight.

A New Auto Garage.

Excellent progress is being made with the alterations to the property on West Second street, owned by E. M. Laing and his son, Allen B. Laing. The dwelling will be converted into two stores and four flats of six rooms each with bath. The entire front will be of brick, three stories high. A driveway will be provided for on the north side of the building to the rear of the property, where Allen B. Laing will erect a large auto garage. This will be ereected close to the Boice, Runyon & Co. coal and lumber sheds and will be built of brick.

$75,000 Gift to Vassar College.

Vassar College has so many alumnae and friends in this place, and Dr. James Taylor, the college president, and Dr. Henry M. Saunders, of New York, are so well known here that the announcement of Dr. Saunders gift of $75,000, in memory of his wife will be full of interest to Plainfielders.

City Displayed No Flag.

Notwithstanding that yesterday was flag day, th only display of Old Glory on North avenue was at M. C. Dobbins' cigar store. The city being without a flag pole was not able to hoist the Stars and Stripes. In the residential section of the city many flags were to be seen.

JOINT COMMITTEE UNANIMOUSLY FAVORS CONSOLIDATION OF THE CITY AND BOROUGH

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Natural conditions favor the growth of Plainfield and North Plainfield along the lines parallel with the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and with the dividing line between the city and borough, and

Whereas, This dividing line runs close to and parallel with Front street, which is the main business artery of Plainfield; and

Whereas, North Plainfield is the natural overflow from Plainfield; and

Whereas, The interests of both city and borough are identical; and

Whereas, In every respect, except in law, these two places are in fact one; and

Whereas, In the interest of enlarged and stronger schools, for better fire and police protection; in questions of public health and welfare; in economy of government; in the extension and maintenance of streets and sewers; in the influence of the Plainfields in the State and Nation; in the interests of business and in the value of property; in helping to keep down taxes; in the protection of the people against extortion; in the interest of public and municipal progress; it is better that a community should be united and not divided; therefore,

Resolved, That consolidation of the local government is desirable.

Resolved, That this committee recommends to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, and to the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, that a special election be held in accordance with Assembly bill 155, of 1902, now on the statutes of the State of New Jersey, and entitled "An act to unite and consolidate the municipal corporations known as inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, in the county of Union, and the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield."

And this committee further recommends that this election be held in the latter part of September, 1906, and before this election, it be agreed and understood that the plan proposed involves no change of county lines.

And that North Plainfield is to receive a fair and just representation in the Plainfield ommon Council.

That property in the borough is to be assessed and taxed on the same basis as Plainfield property, and that all the details involved in the proposed merger, and the preparation of legislative acts, if such be found necessary, or desirable, are to be placed in the hands of a commission to consist of two citizens of Plainfield, and two of North Plainfield, these commissioners to be elected by the people at the special election referred to, or appointed by the governing bodies, and when so elected or appointed, they shall choose a fifth member, who shall be a citizen of Plainfield.

All the acts of this commission shall be subject to the control of the governing bodies of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

INDICTMENTS FOR FIVE ALLEGED SPEAKEASY MEN.

Plead Before Judge Atwater Today, In Court of Common Pleas.

Chief Kiely has made another descent on the speakeasies. One is due every year at this time, which the police describe as the beginning of the thirsty season.

Indictments have been found against the following: Jules Mastrodanato, of Liberty street; Pete Trainor, Thomas and James Brown, and Dominick Paretti. The Browns are father and son, and run an alleged joint on Netherwood avenue. Paretti's location is on one of the side roads off Johnson avenue.

Deputy Sheriff Weaver gathered the quintet together this morning to bring them before Judge Atwater today, to plead. W. L. Hetfield, Sr., and J. P. Owens will defend them.

The men when arraigned in court this morning were all held under bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

CHAS. J. FISK CHAIRMAN

Representation of Plainfield Common Council, North Plainfield Council and Board of Trade All Speak in Approval of Proposed Union.

With one harmonious voice, the joint committee, appointed to ascertain the feasibility of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield, at a meeting in the City Common Council chamber, last night, expressed their heartiest desire to see the scheme consummated. There was not one discordant note sounded throughout the conference though every member of the respective committees had something to say on the subject. The upshot of the matter was an unanimous agreement to recommend the proposition to the bodies which the delegates represented.

By resolution it was proposed to the governing bodies of the two municipalities that a special election be held during the latter part of September for the people to signify their choice in the matter and, providing they desire to see the union brought about, to elect commissioners to arrange all necessary details. It is proposed to hold the election simultaneously in the borough and city.

In order that the voters may cast their ballots intelligently, it is also proposed to hold a series of mass meetings. These will no doubt be held under the joint auspices of the two municipalities and general invitations will be extended for any taxpayer to voice his views. It is also likely that separate meetings will be held in the two places for free and open discussion.

At last night's conference, the Plainfield Common Council was represented by its public affairs committee, Chairman Herbert Buxton and Councilmen W. L. Gloak, F. W. Randolph and R. I. Tolles, being present. Councilmen Leslie M. Daniel and George P. Mellick were absent. Mayor James F. Buckle was also there ex officio. The entire special committee of the North Plainfield Council, consisting of Chairman Charles A. Lee, Frank Krewson, E. P. T. Smith and M. C. VanArsdale was on hand.

The Board of Trade was represented by its own committee, made up of Chairman Charles J. Fisk, W. G. Debele and the president of the body, L. B. Woolston. Former Mayor William L. Saunders, father of the scheme, and former Mayor Charles Place, both of North Plainfield, were also present.

L. B. Woolston called the meeting to order and briefly stated its object. By an unanimous vote on motion of Councilman Buxton, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was chosen permanent chairman, and Councilman Lee, of North Plainfield, was selected as secretary. Without any loss of time, Mr. Fisk expressed his opinion that the time had come for an union of the two municipalities and declared that after an investigation of the proposition he was heartily in favor of it. He briefly pictured the many advantages that would come from a merger under one government, stating in addition that he could see no common sense reason why the idea was not perfectly feasible.

Every other man at the conference spoke in like vein. Former Mayor Saunders was most optimistic. The reviewed what had been done and came direct to the point in declaring that it was a duty of the present generation to provide one government for the community. In every respect, save in the eyes of the law, he said, North Plainfield and Plainfield are one. Their interests are identical though under present conditions they are separate. He pictured the manifold advantages that would emanate from a merger, adding that Plainfield particularly would benefit by joining hands with North Plainfield.

President Woolston, of the Board of Trade, commented on the disadvantages the borough labors under as a separate government and gave his unqualified endorsement of the present movement. He declared it

APPEARING OLD

Acts as a Bar to Profitable Employment.

You cannot afford to grow old.

In these days of strenuous competition it is necessary to maintain, as long as possible ones youthful appearance.

It is impossible to do this without retaining a luxurious growth of hair.

The presence of Dandruff indicates the presence of a burrowing germ which lives and thrives on the roots of the hair until it causes total baldness.

Newbro's Herpicide is the only known destroyer of this pest, and it is as effective as it is delightful to use

Herpicide makes an elegant hair dressing as well as Dandruff cure.

Accept no substitute—there is none.

A noted physician of Pittsburg, Pa., in a recent letter to Dr. Oidman says:

"In your prescription known as 'Pepsoids' you have given the medical world the greatest and most valued discovery in medicine of the present century. You have at last solved the problem that has baffled the skill of the best physicians of recent times, how to cure permanently all Acute or Chronic Stomach Diseases known as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh of the Stomach and Digestive Weakness. I have used your prescription, 'Pepsoids,' in hundreds of cases without a single failure. I attribute the success of your treatment mainly to the fact that the disease germs of the stomach cannot resist Pepsoids. Your theory that most Stomach Diseases are brought about by multitudes of nefarious disease-breeding germs must be correct, judging from the remarkable results attained from the use of your 'Pepsoids.' I consider 'Pepsoids' the best and most valuable remedy yet discovered for the treatment of stubborn stomach ailments."

Pepsoids cure Dyspepsia and all Stomach Diseases, in a new way, by repairing the wornout lining of the Stomach and at the same time, destroy all disease-breeding germs. Dyspepsia and the worst forms of Stomach Disorders once cured in this way never returns.

If you have not used Pepsoids before, we will send you a 50-cent bottle FREE. Send us your name and address and you will receive promptly, a full sized bottle.

DIPLOMAS GIVEN IN SCHOOLS

worked on the single word "specia." I said into the phonograph "specia, specia," but the instrument responded "pecia, pecia, pecia." It was enough to drive one mad, but I held firm and I have succeeded.

The power not ourselves most is always obstinate and refuses to obey. We are driven mad, but we must be so mad as to persist. The great Sir Isaac Newton said that the only point in which he was superior to others was in the power of concentrating his attention.

Concentrated attention, indomitable perseverance, eventually wins. In the Parables recorded in the fifteenth chapter of Luke, did you ever notice how the word "until" figures? The shepherd searches for his sleep until he finds it. The woman hunts for the lost coin until she finds it. The father waits for his son until he returns to his home. Every young man has opportunities for laying hold of the power that is not himself. That is what school is for—to train his mind to think and to observe. Did I say every young man? I mean it. I did not say young men of genius unless you define genius as the capacity for taking pains then I'll say young men and young women of genius who possess the ability a friend said Sir Walter Raleigh possessed—"the ability to toil terribly." "A man reaps what he sows," someone has said. "Those who sow dunce seed, vice seed, laziness seed, usually get a crop. A man of mere capacity undeveloped is only an organized day dream with the skin on it."

The discovery of that power not ourselves frequently comes through failure. There is nothing truer than the motto failure is the stepping stone to success. The chemist in his laboratory fails to discover that which he has been seeking but the experiment has not been entirely a failure. What he has considered a failure has really been a discovery. The failure has had a cause. Now his endeavor should be to discover the cause.

In Tom Brown's school days we are told how Tom obtained his skill in wrestling. Tom was not naturally a good wrestler, but he determined he would learn how. So beginning at the bottom of the ladder he worked his way to the top. A particular thrust or tip threw him on his back and he studied why? He failed to throw his antagonist but he never considered himself conquered. He thought about that fall "at his meals, in his walks, when he lay awake in bed, in his dreams." Never did he say I will never try again. Young Disraeli was laughed at in the House of Commons when he made his first speech. Had he given up then we should never have heard of Disraeli, England's Prime Minister. When a man fails there is cause for it. It should be his endeavor to seek the cause.

I admire the young man that is not losing any valuable time but is seeking to gain more of the power outside of himself that is not already in his control. Most of us have time to do the things we really want to do. That sounds like an extravagant statement, but let us think of it awhile. Perhaps we shall discover there is more truth in it that we will admit at the beginning.

A young man has no opportunity or money to attend a business school or college but he has his evenings and he at once joins a correspondence school and fits himself for something higher. He has ambition and he discovers the way to realize that ambition. He is not satisfied. He has no right to be satisfied. Let us be as Paul—contented—but also as Paul—not satisfied—who said, I count not myself yet to have laid hold of all God has planned for me, but I am reaching forth to lay hold. God has greater things for every one of us—mental possessions and spiritual possessions. Let us reach forth to lay hold of them.

He was followed by the class valedictorian, Miss Mercier, who gave an essay upon the "Wonders of Nature," mentioning her handiwork in America, The Niagara cataract, the Grand canon and also the beauties of the Old World. The exercises closed with the presentation of diplomas by Dr. F. W. Westcott, president of the Board of Education, and music by the orchestra.

According to the annual custom, a reception and dance followed in the assembly room of the school, continuing until midnight.

Dunellen.

Dunellen's last high school commencement exercises were held last night. The five graduates of the old two-year local course, which will be replaced in the fall by the four-year course at the high school here, received their diplomas in the presence of an audience that taxed the Presbyterian church, where Dunellen commencements have been held for years, to its limits, and overflowed into the vestibule.

The church was prettily decorated. Daisy clusters at every pew were a striking feature of the decorative scheme. The platform was a mass of color. At the back hung a big American flag, and across the arch was stretched a streamer with the class motto, "Semper procedens," in green and gold, upon it. In the center sat the graduates: Pearl Dodwell, Kathryn Samson, Catherine Mohan, Emma Voorhees and Benjamin Dodwell. Miss Mohan was valedictorian and Miss Voorhees salutatorian.

To the right of the graduates sat the members of the Board of Education, County Superintendent H. Brewster Willis, and Superintendent Lester Meseroll. To the right was a large chorus composed of girls of the Whittier School. Back of them sat Dunellen's famous Ladies' Orchestra.

The programme was long. The exercises began at 8 o'clock and it was 10:20 before they ended. They opened with graduates' march, by Meta Pennock and Kathryn Mohan. The invocation was offered by Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, and an overture by the orchestra, under the leadership of Otto Muller, followed. The rest of the first part was divided between essays and a declamation by the graduates, and music by the orchestra and the chorus, under the direction of Miss Rita Brokaw.

Miss Voorhees, the salutatorian, delivered an essay on "The Red Cross," Kathryn Samson delivered one on "Veneer;" the valedictory essay, by Miss Mohan, was on "The Passion Play;" Pearl Dodwell delivered an essay on "Table Talk," and Benjamin Dodwell rendered a declamation, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The speaker of the evening was A. H. Clark, of Peekskill, N. Y., a historian. His address, on "A Glance at the Early History of Education in New Jersey," opened the second part. He traced the establishment of the first public school in this State at Bergen, in 1661, from the beginning of education in the New Amsterdam colony, and showed how the initial impetus to the educational work of the colony and of the State came from the French-English settlers of Elizabeth, the Scotch-Irish group and the Quaker. He paid a high tribute to the worth of the Scotch and Quakers as supporters of the universal education idea. Lotteries, he said, helped early education in New Jersey. Princton College got much money through them.

In closing Mr. Clark gave the graduates a new trinity of R's to which to cling: Reliance, Rectitude and Responsibility.

Following Mr. Clark's address, Superintendent Meseroll presented the graduates to the Board of Education. County Superintendent Willis presented the diplomas. In making the presentation, Mr. Willis spoke briefly to the graduates.

They were at the cross-roads of life, he said, and could choose the path upward or the road downward. As they stepped out into the world the choice was fairly easy, but years increased the difficulty of retracing their course or changing their direction, as time went on choice became habit, and habit became fixed and unchangeable distiny. He congratulated them and the borough of Dunellen on the splendid opportunity for higher studies that was open to them by reason of the new arrangement with Plainfield. No other place in Middlesex county had such high school facilities open to it. The speaker gave enthusiastic expression to his high regard for the Plainfield high school.

In the formal presentation of the diplomas, Mr. Willis called attention to the fact that Miss Samson had not missed a school day in ten years, and the blushing graduate was vigorously applauded.

Diplomas were given to the primary and grammar graduates, who were massed in the seats before the platform. The graduates were:

A large number of prizes were given out. Besides the usual scholastic rewards, prizes were given to sixty-six pupils who had attained a clean record for punctuality and attendance during the school year. The algebra prizes went to Emma Voorhees, Meta Randolph and Catherine Mohair; arithmetic, eighth year, prize was won by May Day; the composition prize went to Meta Pennock; the U. S. History prize to May Day; fourth year arithmetic prize to Annie Mohan and Earl Haven; first year writing prize, Catherine Maier; writing prize, other classes, Eddie Reusch. Meta Pennock and Susie Lowrie received special prizes for playing at assembly and class exercises during the year.

First year, Charles Haver, Hazel Humble, Helen Ayres, Margaret McGovern; second year, Julia McGovern, Richmond Ritterbusch, George Jennings, DeWitt Swackhamer, Naomi Snyder; third year, Fred Noble, Viola Bowlby, Benjamin Block, Lila Stites, Leslie Bowlby, Richard Pennock; fourth year, Ruth Haver, Nellie Wahl, Peter Mohan, Benjamin Cole, Annie Mohan, Hazel Runyon, Florence Gray, Edna Jennings, Allan Frederick; fifth year, Bessie Morris, Gertrude Day, Mary Greenhalge, Clarence Jennings, John McFadden, John Rinehart, Stella Reynolds, Bessie McGovern, Bosworth Coriell, Sylvester Rinehart; sixth year, Laura Todd, Edward Gray, Charles Wahl, Gertrude Giles, Charles Dinneen, Ruth Voorhees, Elston Lowrie, Myrtle Pierson, William Brennan, Gertrude Bowlby, Ethel Tinsman; seventh year, Ora Bush, Jessie Stites, Kittie Liable, Maggie Mohan, Florence Haver, Lillian Garretson, Carl Noble, Lucy Clawson, Irma Baldwin, Florence Long, Arthur Voorhees, Albert Ritterbusc; eighth year, May Day, Rosy Wilson; ninth year, Edith Bush, Meta Pennock, Susie Lowrie, Lizzie Reusch; tenth year, Kathryn Samson, Catherine Mohan, Emma Voorhees.

The high school graduating class presented the school with a bust of McKinley. Miss Dodwell, class president, made the presentation. Superintendent Meseroll received it.

FAVORS CONSOLIDATION

to be a duty that the citizens today owe to future generations. The matter had been hanging fire long enough, he added. Councilman Lee, of North Plainfield, stated that he had been a bitter enemy of both annexation and consolidation four years ago, but that he had come to the conviction that he was wrong on the question of merger of the two municipalities. He was now open, he said, to receive the views of the citizens of the two places. He emphasized the fact that the matter should be left entirely to the people and for one wanted to let them have the opportunity of voting on it.

Chairman Buxton, of the city's committee, said he had thoroughly studied the subject pro and con and that he could see no reason why there should be two governments for one community. He promised to do all he could to further the object and wanted the taxpayers to have an opportunity to express their views. Councilmen Tolles, Randolph and Gloak, of the city, voiced their sentiments in favor of the scheme, as did also Mayor Buckle, who has always been with Mr. Saunders on the subject. Councilmen Smith, VanArsdale and Krewson, of North Plainfield, said they were in accord with the other delegates. Mayor Smalley was not present. Mr. Debele, of the borough, who opposed annexation four years ago, also seconded the proposition to unite the two places. found in a resolution, published in another column, passed unanimously, which will take the shape of a recommendation to the Common Council of Plainfield, the Council of North Plainfield and the Board of Trade. Secretary Lee was instructed to send copies of the resolutions to the respective bodies. On recommendation of Chairman Fisk, it was unanimously decided to give the utmost publicity to all proceedings of the joint committee and an invitation was extended to the local newspapers to be represented at the future meetings.

Former Mayor Saunders today received a dispatch from Pittsburg that the "Greater Pittsburg" election on Tuesday, which resulted in a decisive majority for the consolidation of the cities of Pittsburg and Alleghany, does not change counties or county lines.

The Somerset Unionist-Gazette, of Somerville, which bitterly opposed the annexation of North Plainfield and its consolidation with Plainfield, four years ago, says editorially today:

"Somerset county can offer no objection to consolidation as now proposed if the present law is sufficient to cover it."

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Axienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

Garment Vals. Without Counterpart

Every day adds laurels to our garment reputation—every comparison fixes our supremacy more firmly in your estimation. Our style average is not reached by any store in town—our values plainly the best in Newark. Today's news is powerful evidence of our leadership.

STARTLING OFFER: New 20.00 to 25.00 - - - SILK DRESSES $9.95

THE GREATNESS OF THIS BARGAIN is partly in the fame of the maker, whose name is associated in the trade with high grade garments only. The silks are NOT old and "tender;" but FRESH and NEW—STRONG, FIRM and BRIGHT. The manufacturer is jealous of his good reputation, though he does stand a loss in his yearly sale of surplus Summer dresses. But read and be imbued with the enthusiasm that so extraordinary an opportunity is worth:

THE MODELS—Two styles—one for slender and average figures—the other for women of larger development; lace trimmed, fancy tucked and piped; full flare skirts, wide folds and hems—style of distinguished beauty—of expert conception.

THE SILKS—Clear, clean, snappy checks, stripes and plaids—black-and-white, blue-and-white, green-and-white, navy blue, with hairline stripes and checks—silks of quality, patterns and colors in the highest style and taste.

THESE DRESSES WILL CREATE FURORE and well do they deserve to, for no bargain so fine has been offered in Newark before—beautiful $20 to $25 silk dresses at $9.95

WOMEN'S $5.00 WASH DRESS SKIRTS—Of poplin, has no equal for laundry finish; some circular side gored models with folds at bottom; others with inverted side pleat panels, side and front; another style, three clusters of 3 half-inch tucks around bottom; rarely better skirts at $5.00 ..... $3.98

WOMEN'S RUNABOUT SKIRTS—200 more of those bright natty mixtures—placed on sale about two weeks ago; this time we include skirts made of the last of materials that go into higher grades; 1 to 3 skirts only of a kind; model adapted to short and tall, slender and stout; cut full, well made; nothing scant but the price—values that run to $8.00, at $5.00

WOMEN'S WHITE LAWN DRESSES—Waist alone worth a dollar; skirt worth twice that price; very fine lawn; almost entire front of waist eyelet embroidery and lace; two wide tucks each side front, tucked back; skirt is cut full; skirt trimmed with eyelet embroidery to match waist down to flounce, which is shirred and headed with lace; wide bottom; hem; sizes 34 to 44; and yet the price is only $2.00

GIRLS' WHITE LAWN DRESSES—Exceptionally fine lawn; special purchase, marked at an especially low price; three styles—one with pointed yoke of tucks, lace and embroidery, shoulder ruffle edged with lace; another square yoke of rows of Val. lace, narrow lace edged bretelle; the other, needlework inserting trimmed yoke, inserting belt; all sleeves lace trimmed and may be used full length or tucked up to elbow, not equalled elsewhere anywhere near $1.98

Reliable Money Lenders

MOVING TIME IS HERE.

Many people who have been dissatisfied with their apartments during the past winter would like to move to better themselves, but cannot afford to.

Why not come in and talk with us? If you owe a little back rent or grocery bill or the doctor or coal man, or you need money for rent in advance, it might possibly be an advantage to get a small loan, say $10, $25 or possibly $50, of us, and then pay it back in small amounts, either weekly or monthly, to suit your convenience. We loan from $10 up—any sum—any time. The possession of household goods, piano, or horse and wagon, are sufficient evidence of your ability to pay. A postal will bring us to your door.

AUTO SCHOOL CLOSES.

Twenty Owners Graduate From the Y. M. C. A. School for Owners.

The last session of the Y. M. C. A. automobile class was held last night. Twenty pupils, all owners of cars, completed the course. They graduated with a complete working knowledge of their machines and the general type of automobiles made, competent not only to run them, but to make minor repairs, and to tell, at any time, what might be the matter with the mechanism.

So successful was the course, that arrangements have already been made to have another, under Clarence B. Brokaw, next year.

AUTOMOBILE INSPECTORS.

F. L. C. Martin and George M. Macintyre Have Received Appointment.

F. L. C. Martin and George M. Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company, have been appointed motor vehicle inspectors for Plainfield and vicinity. They will register motor vehicles and grant licenses to drive them.

Mr. Martin is in Trenton today with J. B. R. Smith, commissioner of motor vehicles, and he will be ready to grant licenses tomorrow. All motor vehicles must be registered.

The inspector have the right to examine automobiles and chauffeurs.

DIAMOND DUST.

With a spirit of revenge in their hearts over their defeat in the fourteen-inning game with Plainfield three weeks ago, the Westfields will be here tomorrow prepared to serve up a defeat for the locals if that is a matter possible to accomplish. Manager Nicolas will present the same team as four weeks ago with Levy and Seery as the battery. Manager Daab is confident of bagging the game and make the record ten straight. As both teams are playing fast ball the contest should be well worth seeing, and no doubt a large crowd will watch the contest. The last struggle, which was one of the best ever put up on a local diamond, has not yet been forgotten. The enthusiasm of last year broke out anew and it is safe to guarantee that the fever will be at a high pitch tomorrow between the rooters of both teams.

Manager Daab was hopeful of having "Kid" Walton to play at short tomorrow, but the Eastonian will be unable to appear in his old bailiwick because of an injury received while playing last Saturday.

Lester Hawk, the star second baseman of the Lafayette College team, wants a chance to play with the locals. Owing to Walton's plight Manager Daab may give him a show.

A red hot game will take place in Hoboken Sunday between Jersey City and Hoboken. Manager Daab is hopeful of winning this game. The first game of the series, which was played in April, was won by the Jerseys by the score of 8 to 7.

Somerville fans are beginning to want to see some real baseball. A series with Plainfield would be the real stuff.

Piel, the New York Central infielder, was tried at Paterson yesterday with the Hobokens and showed himself to be a fast player.

Joe Alberts, of Scotch Plains, is reckoned to be the best clouter on the Somerville team. Joe is catching the flies in his old-time form, too.

"Jimmy" Montross continues to win games for the Auburns, of the Inter-State League, and has attracted the attention of the Syracuse management.

The crack colored team recently organized in this city under the name of the All-Americans, would like to hear from the managers of the Bound Brooks, Dunellens, Clinton Avenues, Scotch Plains, Cranfords, Somerset A. C., Plainfield Stars, Westfields, Garwoods and Roselles. The team can fill any date in June. The lineup is as follows: Carter, 2b; Mitchell, cf; Miller, of Howard University, 3b; Warwick, of Chester, ss; P. Johnson, 1b; Phillips, lf; P. J. Brokaw, rf-3b; Britton, c. The pitcher, Fred Brokaw, is of the Royal Giants, and he is also captain. John Benney, the manager, can be addressed at 148 East Front street. Pollard, Kline, Mitchell and Vandervoort are substitutes. O. N. Carter, of 148 East Front street, is the booking agent.

GOLF.

The golf match on Monday at the Plainfield Country Club between "Marty" O'Loughlin, the home-bred professional, and Joseph Doble, of the Fairfield Country Club, Greenwich, Conn., will be played for quite a large stake, and all persons interested in the game will see a fine competition. O'Loughlin made a 76 at Baltusrol and if he wins his match against Doble he will enter the professional tournament at Chicago, June 28-29. Monday's match will be at thirty-six holes.

Jerome D. Travers, champion of the Metropolitan Golf Association, is preparing to enter Princeton. He is going there today to take his examinations and this will prevent him from playing in the Knollwood Country Club tournament this week. Travers has decided not to go West for the national open championship tournament.

The Deal Golf Club and Richmond County Country Club have had their applications for open tournament dates officially granted by Leighton Calkins, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association. Deal gets August 16, 17 and 18, and Richmond County October 4, 5 and 6. The only semblance of a rival attraction to the former is the annual tournament for the president's cup at the Ekwanok Country Club, August 15, 16, 17 and 18, but that will appeal chiefly to golfers who happen to be in the mountains at that time.

The first revision of the season in the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap ratings has been issued by Leighton Calkins, chairman of the committee. It contains eight reduced ratings, some of which are due to voluntary reports. Others are new on the list and have been reported by their clubs in order that they may not have to play from scratch under the new rule. In all, the revised list contains the names of forty-four golfers. This revised list will be used in the Saturday handicap at the Knollwood Country Club.

Team matches will be a feature on the links of the Deal Golf Club this season. The Forest Hill Field Club is scheduled to have a team there on June 30, followed by the Hollywood Golf Club on July 14, Seabright Golf Club, July 28, and Englewood Golf Club, September 8. Beginning tomorrow there will be some form of competition every week up to the middle of September. The principal event of the season will be the annual invitation tournament August 16, 17 and 18. Players will qualify in four sixteens. On August 29 the club championship tournament for women will start. Eight are to qualify for the title and there will be as many eights as the entries warrant. The men will begin their championship tournament on September 1 and eight will qualify.

The Britons, though with great reluctance, are slowly but surely coming to see the wisdom of a medal play qualifying round in amateur championship tournaments. This plan has for years been in operation in this country. The record breaking field at Hoylake proved so unwieldy as to rouse the golfers, and now opinion favors a thirty-six hole stroke competition on the first day and a selection of the thirty-two for the second stage.

"Marty" O'Loughlin Breaks Record.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional at the Plainfield Country Club, who is preparing for his match on Monday with Joseph Dobel, of the Fairfield Country Club, Norwich, Conn., lowered the nine hole record for the Cranford Golf Club course, yesterday. He was playing with F. C. Jennings in competition with Professional Ianson, of the Cranford club, and the best player of the club. "Marty" returned a score of 37 for nine holes, while Mr. Jennings made a 41. When it is considered that this is the longest nine hole course in the United States, the Plainfield "pro's" work can be appreciated. Ianson made a score of 84 for eighteen holes and his partner had a score of 87. The Plainfield pair won the match 1 up 18 holes.

U. S. CONGRESS TO ADJOURN ON JUNE 22.

Senator Aldrich Has Made the Declaration.

Washington, June 15.—The oracle of the Senate has spoken, and Congress is due to adjourn on Friday, June 22. If it does not, it will prive that the Oracle has lost his power over the graver branch of Congress, and great will be the surprise of those who swear by the Nelson Aldrich. Col. "Pete" Hepburn, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, had a talk with the President this morning about Panama canal matters. When he came out he was not at all loquacious about his conference with the President, but he said in reply to the question, "When will Congress adjourn?"

"A gentleman told me last night that the oracle of the Senate had just told him that Congress will adjourn on the 22d. I asked 'which oracle?' and he replied 'the oracle from Rhode Island.' I hardly thought before I heard this that we would be able to get through quite so soon, but now that I am more fully informed, I do not see any reason why we should not do it."

SENATOR T. J. HILLERY GIVES ADVICE TO GRADUATES

Speaks on School History and Citizenship's Duties at Borough Commencement.

EXERCISES AT Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Mr. Warner Delivers Invocation and James R. Joy Presents Diplomas—Valedictory and Salutatory.

Twenty-one students, comprising the class of '06 of the North Plainfield High School, formally concluded their course as far as local conditions are concerned, last night, when the annual commencement exercises were held. They took place in Y. M. C. A. hall and the auditorium was barely able to accommodate the gathering of parents and friends.

The class is the largest but one of any that has ever left the school and the graduates formed a pretty picture seated on the platform. With them were James Richard Joy, president of the Board of Education; Superintendent H. C. Krehs and Professor Heicker, of the faculty. The graduates and the courses they completed were as follows:

William Hermann Burtis, 4 yr. scientific; Mary Etta Cain, 3 yr. commercial; Charles Henry Doughty, 4 yr. general; Leola Henderson Dunham, 3 yr. general; Arthur Webb Dunning, 3 yr. general; Wilbur Groendyke Dunning, 4 yr. Latin-scientific; Bertha Fitting Englehardt, 3 yr. commercial; George Stanley Fisher, 4 yr. scientific; Mabel Frances Gano, 3 yr. commercial; Dorothy Isabel James, 4 yr. modern language; Leo Ellsworth Kenny, 4 yr. scientific; Ralph Mortimer Kutz, 4 yr. scientific; Edith Miriam Mager, 3 yr. general; Mary Gertrude Neal, 4 yr. classical; Marion Frances Overton, 4 yr. classical; John Pyper Peacock, 4 yr. classical; Mary Alice Robley, 4 yr. classical; Arthur C. Van Arsdale, 3 yr. general; Frank Oceolo Webster, 4 yr. scientific; Bessie May Wyckoff, 4 yr. English; Marion Elizabeth Wyckoff, 3 yr. commercial.

Invocation by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church, opened the programme, and two musical numbers, "Awake, Awake, the Flowers Unfold," and "Evening" were sung by the High School chorus. This organization is composed of mixed voices and the harmony produced was very pleasing. Herbert Lloyd, director of music, led the singing and Miss Myra Emmons presided at the piano.

The salutatory was given by Ralph Mortimer Kutz, the honor having been won through proficiency in studies. His method of delivery was commendable and the remarks well chosen. In part he said:

"In considering the studies that have been pursued during the past four years all seem to be of great value, but as a preparation for the duties of modern life, there is perhaps no subject of as much practical usefulness as science. The study of mechanics is at the basis of all manufactures. Tracing for example the history of the common glass tumbler, from the mining of the constituents of the glass until its completion everything is done by machinery. Street paving materials cannot be produced without machinery. The study of chemistry gives us the science of medicine with its marvelous cures of diseases hitherto regarded as incurable. Agriculture is nowadays carried on in a scientific manner. Science seizes hold of waste products and converts them into useful articles. Sociology or the science of society bears directnly an manufactures and industrial success. The science of history considers facts and occurrences of past ages and traces therefrom truths that bear on modern life. Moreover the mental habits that are formed in the study of science are a valuable training for practical life. Science takes nothing for granted and admits nothing unless established by proof. This leads to accuracy of thought and of statement. Science gives the laborer the comforts of life. It makes his work easier and enables him to complete it in a shorter time."

The salutatorian was followed by the speaker of the evening, Senator Thomas J. Hillery, of Boonton, who was introduced by Mr. Joy. The Senator is no stranger in Plainfield, as he so remarked at the outset, having made one of the addresses at the Board of Trade dinner last winter. He has devoted a great deal of time to the study of taxation and school matters in New Jersey and his address contained a brief history of its educational system that proved extremely interesting. After extending congratulations to the students and saying kind words for the instructors, he continued:

"To be accorded the privilege of saying the parting word to this class when you are about to leave the quiet harbor which has thus far sheltered you from life's storms, is an honor to be prized. If that word will advise or encourage or will throw even the dimmest light upon the broad sea of life that awaits you and over which you must steer your course, my object shall have been attained.

"The occasion is a happy one, surrounded as you are by admiring friends and relatives who have come to tender their congratulations, and whose presence is evidence of their interest in the work which you have accomplished and their concern for your welfare. The longer the service, the greater the effort, the more tedious and complex the problem, the greater is the satisfaction in its achievement.

"The mountain climber who traverses the rugged slopes finally rests upon the summit and views with satisfaction the obstacles which lay in the path which he traveled. The engineer, who has labored for years upon a difficult construction, finally views the accomplished fact with a satisfaction which he alone can feel because the achievement belongs to him. To no one in this assemblage does this occasion mean so much as to you. Through the long years of study and preparation you have earned the satisfaction which you must feel in this event. If the way had been easy, simple and smooth, if your patience and energy had not been taxed, if the work had not seemed dull and tiresome and had not required your persistent and constant effort, this event would seem to you a very ordinary one. As it is, it is one to which the mind will ever recur with pleasure; it is a marker in your career; it is a beacon light that will shed its rays along the highway that leads into the future.

"It is said that school days are the happiest time in life, and looking back from middle life when responsibility has piled up about you, from that standpoint it would seem that childhood days, when the world's cares and responsibilities are unknown were indeed the happiest, but viewing from the schoolday period, the time when one longs to reach the period of manhood and womanhood when they may take their places in the world to achieve success and to gain renown, the period of middle life seems the happier one. I believe you will find that period in life the happiest when you have the self-consciousness and satisfaction of knowing that you are 'acting well your part,' whether it be in early or middle life or in your declining years.

Instructors.

"With all the joy and pleasure of this event there is mixed an ingredient of sorrow, the result of leaving the old school room and your patient and faithful instructors. To them is due your gratitude, and only in the years that follow will you thoroughly appreciate their virtues. To them fell the duty of making the first indentations upon your tender intellects and you will bear through life the impressions made upon you by them during school life.

"This condition is hardly less one of great satisfaction to them than it is to you. They rejoice in your success, and it is their hope that the future may be kind to you; that you will take advantage of the opportunities which it holds in store, and I venture that no one will take greater pride in your success than those who have laid the foundation for it with their own hands.

Your State.

"The State of New Jersey is a watchful and a bountiful parent in the cause of education. As early as 1664 history has it that an old Dutch school master was following his profession in the town of Bergen which is now Jersey City, and in some of the earlier charters and colonists were 'enjoined' in the speediest manner to endeavor to find out ways and means whereby they might support a minister and a school-master, so our forefathers who hewed out their homes in the forest gave their first attention to both the church and the school. As early as 1693 the Assembly of East Jersey enacted a law which recognized the principle of taxing property for the support of the public schools, and was said to be at that time 'the most advanced legislation on the subject in America.'

"The beginning of the school fund was in 1817. The act of the Legislature in that year made certain appropriations for the establishment of a permanent school fund. The present school fund exceeds four millions of dollars. It has been the aim, and I hope it will continue the policy of the State of New Jersey, to provide the necessary means to furnish an education for every child of school

For the benefit of the Plainfield Children's Home fair and play given yesterday afternoon on the lawn at the home of Dr. E. W. Hedges in Watchung avenue, by the Children's Club, composed of a number of young girls. The affair attracted a good crowd and netted over $100 for the Home. The grounds were attractively decorated for the occasion by the young people and the management of the entire affair by the club was very creditable.

The play given was entitled "Madame De Portment's School," and it was cleverly presented by this cast of characters:

"Madame De Portment," principal, Frances Hyde; pupils, "Mabel Frolics," Frances Zelie; "Gertrude Smiles," Gladys Chase; "Jennie Slow," Katherine Brown; "May Frisky," Edith Foster; "Bridget, a maid, Beatrice Hedges.

After the play there was a sale of candy, ice cream and novelties and a grab-bag furnished much amusement for all.

PLEASING SOCIABLE OF TRINITY ENDEAVORERS.

One-Act Farce Feature of an Enjoyable Programme; Game for Children.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity church held its second sociable of the season last night. It was largely attended and a great success.

Games of various kinds were played. The feature of the programme was a one-act farce, "While Brother Phil Was Walking."

The cast was as follows: Miss Marion Marsden, a young lady of considerable courage, Miss Anna C. Randall; Mrs. Marsden, Miss Jessie Garthwaite; Phil Marsden, Marion's brother, Irving Martin; Jack Cresham, an unwilling burglar, LeRoy B. Woodhull.

The playlet was funny, and the cast acted it well. They were roundly applauded. In the farce, Irving Martin played a piano solo.

Special arrangements were made for the entertainment of the younger people. While the Endeavorers and their friends were having fun in a "cobweb" the young folks had a donkey party under the direction of Miss Anna Randall.

Refreshments were served. The committee in charge was made up of Miss Harriet C. Randall, chairman; Miss LucyCoriell, Miss Anna Randall, Mr. and Mrs. William Kriney and Henry Seader.

Muhlenberg Hospital is in better financial shape than it has ever been before. It begins with a surplus of $4,231 in the treasury, a condition it never attained before.

Benevolences and donations figured very largely in filling the hospital treasury. They amounted to $17,925, while receipts from other sources totalled about $4,000 less.

The treasurer's statement for the year ending June 1, on the different receipts is as follows; it was made public this morning:

Individual cash donations, $2,878.88; hospital Sunday collections in churches, $1,019.52; charity ball, $1,727; from Union County Board of Freeholders, $4,800; carnival, 1906, $7,500; total, $17,925.40.

COMMANDERY AUXILIARY HOLDS A MUSICALE.

Delightful Programme Presented for Sir Knights and Friends.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., a delightful musicale was given in Masonic Hall, last night, for the sir knights, their families and friends. There was a large attendance and the programme was greatly enjoyed. Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis was the soprano, Miss Mae J. Colt, of New York, the reader, George C. M. Smith, violinist, and J. Edmund Skiff was the accompanist. As this was one of the first public appearances here of Mr. Smith since his return from aboard, where he completed his musical education, there was unusual interest in his performance. His work was of the highest order and won great applause.

Miss Willis was a favorite, as usual, and she sang several numbers in a manner that pleased all, while Miss Colt as a reader left nothing to be desired in making the programme complete. The work of Mr. Skiff as accompanist was entirely satisfactory. This programme was presented:

"May Morning," Denza, Miss Willis; "Biff Perkins' Tobagan Slide," Pauline Phelps, Miss Colt; Air on the "G" String, Bach-Wilhelm, George C. M. Smith; "Scene from Ingoma and Parthenea," Sheridan, Miss Colt; "Spring Song," Weil, Miss Willis; "Romance, Op. 23, No. 1," Cammilo Sivori; "Obertass, Op. 19, No. 1," Wieniawski," Mr. Smith; selected, Miss Colt; "Absent," Metcalf; "Nightingale Song," Nevin, Miss Willis.

After the entertainment there was a social time and ice cream and cake were served by a committee from the auxiliary.

New Wedding March.

An interesting feature of the wedding on Thursday of Miss Louise Dall Adrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Adrich, to William Christen Meissner at All Angels' church, New York, was the playing of a wedding march composed by Dr. J. Nevett Steele, vicar of Trinity parish and uncle of the bride, who performed the ceremony. The march was played for the first time at the wedding of Miss Adrich. Dr. Steele is the father of Mrs. Leon Moran, of Grove street.

Tax Board Organizes.

The new Somerset county tax board, of which Mayor N. B. Smalley is a member, organized at Somerville yesterday. P. V. D. VanDoren, of Millstone, was elected president, and Thomas Windsor, of Somerville, was made clerk. His salary was fixed at $800 a year. He was instructed, by resolution, to meet with the State board next Tuesday, to get a line on his work.

Miss March to Speak.

Miss Emily C. March, who is a favorite speaker at the Y. M. C. A., will address the men's meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Watchung male quartette and Edmund D. Young will furnish special music.

POLICE WILL STOP ALL PREMATURE CELEBRATION

NO FIREWORKS TO BE ALLOWED ON STREETS UNTIL THE FOURTH.

Chief of Police Kiely announced this morning that the law regarding the sale and the use of firearms and fireworks would be strictly enforced from now until after the Fourth of July spirit had waned.

The chief will pay particular attention to the cartridge and toy pistol business. Dealers will be held strictly accountable for every firearm that may be sold to boys under fifteen years old, which is the limit set by the law. Every revolver sold must be registered by the dealer, the number of the weapon, as well as the name and address of the buyer, being part of the record.

No fireworks will be allowed on the streets until the dawning of the Fourth, unless special permission is granted. This rule will be rigorously executed, and small boys who try premature celebrations will find themselves in trouble if a cop catches them at it. Even the humble torpedo will be taboo on the streets.

COBBS HELD FOR ASSAULT.

Tailor Who Hit Helper With Flatiron Must Answer For It.

Leslie M. Cobbs, the colored tailor accused of assault by Harris Levine, his helper, was held for the grand jury yesterday afternoon, by Justice Hand, in $200 bail.

All the evidence was against the tailor. Levine recounted the story of the quarrel that led to the assault, in which a flatiron figured. One of Levine's ribs was broken, as Drs. Currie and Lufburrow testified. Cobbs set up a claim of self-defense, but brought no corroborative evidence to support it. Bail was furnished by Dr. J. C. Anderson, colored.

Mrs. Davis Addressed Society.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel held the last meeting of the season, yesterday afternoon, at which a large attendance of members was addressed by Mrs. Isabelle Charles Davis, former secretary of the King's Daughters' Union. The society recently received an appeal from the Presbyterian Board for aid in restoring the San Francisco missions destroyed by the earthquake and Mrs. Davis talked of her experience in that city while on a visit two years ago. She described scenes in Chinatown and other districts and told what a good work had been carried on. When she concluded the society voted $10 to the cause. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Auto Association Growing.

The promoters of the Owners' Garage of New Jersey, which was organized at the Casino a week ago, have decided to meet at the Casino on Thursday night, June 21, to perfect the organization and take steps to become incorporated. The number of signers to stock has been increased to thirty and new members are constantly being received.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes to be offered by the Plainfield Gun Club at the big all-day shoot to be held next Thursday were placed on exhibition today in the show windows of Harry Dreire's sporting goods store, West Front street and Madison avenue. They are all worth-while, and competition for them will be keen among the local shooters.

Taxation Board Busy.

The Union County Board of Taxation held a session in Rahway yesterday conferring with the assessors of that town. The board expects to visit nearly every town and city in the county while the work of assessing is in progress and give such advise and instruction as may be desired and considered necessary.

Game Warden Here.

Deputy Game Warden Hawkins, of Elizabeth, was in town yesterday making a tour of inspection of the fish markets and otherwise attending to his line of business. The new game and fish laws have not reached him as yet, but as soon as he obtains copies they can be had by writing to him.

Cemetery Private.

In order to protect lot-owners and to make the place more private, the trustees of the North Plainfield cemetery on Chatham street, have caused signs to be put up in several places in the cemetery forbidding trespassing. Should this method fail, the borough police will take a hand in the matter.

Rutgers Graduate.

Among the fifty seniors who will be graduated from Rutgers College, New Brunswick, next Wednesday, is Hervey Kinch Doane, who has been a student in the scientific department.

FITZSIMMONS REFUSES $1,500 FORFEIT MONEY

ASSERTS HE WILL STAND BY TUXEDO CLUB IN ITS HARD LUCK.

"Lanky Bob" Fitzsimmons, the local pugilist who is known as "The Grand Old Man of the Ring," has further endeared himself to the hearts of sports by refusing to take the $1,500 forfeit due him when the Tuxedo Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, failed to get permission for his bout with Tommy Burns to go on. One of the stipulations of the contract was that each fighter should receive that amount in the event of the match being called off and yesterday Burns declared he was out and demanded the money. It was promptly paid him and the officials of the club immediately afterward communicated with "Bob" to know how he stood. This is the reply that was sent back from the Dunellen farm:

"I do not want to make it a business traveling over the county claiming club forfeits because the promoters strike a bit of misfortune. My business is boxing. Let the club hunt up another competitor for me, since Burns is so eager to crawl out of a match. I do not care who it is —O'Brien, Hart, Kaufmann, Berger —any boxer in the world. I never felt better in my life. When Burns quibbled over the size of the ring I was satisfied that he was convinced that I could outgeneral and outbox him. The Tuxedo Club officials I have found to be fair sportsmen, and I am proud to assert myself in such company. They have had ill-luck, and you can say that Bob Fitzsimmons will stand by them."

This attitude of Bob's was surprising to the officials but their good feeling toward him increased 100 per cent. and sporting circles in general are saying "Fitz is all wool and a yard wide." The former champion was convinced from the first postponement that the fight would not be allowed and without any "kick" whatever, paid all his training expenses out of his own pocket and simply waited developments.

Plainfield Assessors Progressing.

The Plainfield Board of Assessors is making excellent progress in its work and thus far the assessors have not encountered many obstacles aside from the customary general kick. The assessors are obliged to complete their work so as to report to the Union County Board of Assessors on Tuesday, August 14. At that time the county rate is fixed, after which the local rate will be determined. The Common Council will examine the books and they must be returned to Tax Collector John W. Murray, Jr., by October 1, so that he can have the necessary time to collect the taxes before December 15.

Accused of Ill Treating a Child.

Mrs. Josephine Entwistle, a former resident of West End avenue, but now living on East Front street, was arraigned before Justice Clark Mundy, last night, charged by the Organized Aid Association with cruelly treating an eleven-year-old daughter. She pleaded not guilty and gave bail for trial Wednesday night. The alleged offense was committed in North Plainfield and the attention of the society was directed to it by neighbors.

A Graduation Reception.

Following the North Plainfield High School commencement exercises, last night, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Robley, of Myrtle avenue, gave an informal reception at their home in honor of the graduation of their daughter, Miss Mary Robley. It was attended by several of the borough school teachers and Miss Robley's intimate friends. Several hours were passed in a very delightful way.

First Bridge of the Kind Here.

The construction of the bridge on West End avenue over Green brook is being watched by many masons of the city for the reason that it is the first bridge of this kind to be built in Plainfield or vicinity, and they are curious to see how the work is done. The structure will be of concrete, similar to those to be found in Central Park, New York.

LION ATTACKS A HORSE

'Bob' Fitzsimmons' Pet Breaks Loose and Tries to Kill.

HORSE SAVED BY FITZ

He Thumps the Lion With a Hammer and Puts It To Sleep—Then Patches Up Victim.

Bob Fitzsimmons's pet lion cub, "Senator," tried to eat a horse yesterday afternoon. Fitz saw the attempt and checked "Senator's" epicurean onslaught with a mallet. The horse is in pretty good shape today, but Senator feels very rocky.

The horse is one of a team owned by Henry Gallagher, of Gallagher's Corner. Gallagher drove the team on the Fitzsimmons place, at West Dunellen, with a load of cinders for walk construction. He scattered the cinders about the paths, and in the course of the work, the horses came within the sight of "Senator," chained on a trolley arrangement. Senator is a good-natured cub and would never think of hurting a man, but he feels toward horses pretty much as dogs do toward cats, only more so, on account of his appetite.

"Senator" looked at the Gallagher team with glittering eyes, and tugged restlessly at his chain. The chance looked too good, and the cub finally launched into a tremendous leap. The pole that held down the chain came loose, and "Senator" leaped for the nearest horse.

Fitz had been watching Gallagher scatter the cinders and he saw "Senator" coming. He picked up a hammer and went for the lion. "Senator" managed to land one lick on the horse before Fitz got to him, but after that he was up against it a good deal worse than the horse. Fitz banged him with full-swing blows, and "Senator" gave up notions of horse slaughter to sleep on the ground. When Fitz got through with him, the cub knew what a knockout felt like.

The horse's shoulder was badly torn. Fitz himself stitched it up, and made matters right with Gallagher. For some reason the horses did not bolt.

The horse is in fairly good shape, and will be back in harness in a day or two, but "Senator" feels ill. His head is sore.

A CHARMING SPOT FOR VACATION.

Way up among the hills in Sullivan County, one mile from famous Monticello, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kulp (well known to Plainfielders) have just completed a splendid summer resort, with all modern improvements, including water piped to every room in the house from a pure spring nearby; spacious well ventilated bed-rooms, overlooking a beautiful valley; a well equipped kitchen, and lighted throughout by gas, the plant being supplied by The Siche Gas Company, of Plainfield. The contrast is striking between this little gem of a summer resort, and the average country stopping place, with hot stuffy rooms and no conveniences, and poorly lighted by kerosene lamps.

Mr. Kulp has a few vacant rooms for July and August. Write for booklet, J. F. Kulp, Spring Lake House, Monticello, N. Y.

ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE.

Your Eyes will be examined by THE DAMMERS SCIENTIFIC METHOD, Positively the only absolutely correct way to fit glasses.

(NO DROPS USED). Those who have been examined for GLASSES by men who claim to examine eyes by the old, incorrect way, which is done by everyone who supplies glasses but us, will be agreeably surprised by our scientific and wonderful methods of Examining Eyes, and fitting glasses.

We correct your eye defects by looking in the eyes, taking the exact scientific measurements of the focus and shape of the eyes.

NO QUESTIONS ASKED, no trying glasses on your face, until we have determined your exact optical error.

The old tedious and tiresome way of trying to fit glasses is either putting drops in the eyes, which often causes Blindness, or by trying on a lot of glasses, and asking you "Can you see these letters?" or "Do these glasses make you see better?"

After your Optician does a lot of guessing, and has your eyes all out of shape, you think you have been examined.

Think this over, and you can readily see that you have been doing your own examining, and that no doubt the reason you have had trouble to get glasses correct.

Many thousands of our patrons will indorse every word you read here.

This is Absolutely the Highest Class Work Done in Fitting Glasses in America—Don't Suffer with Headache.

We have produced astonishing results from brain fag, nervous debility, insomnia, dizziness, nausea, WATERY EYES, blurry vision, and other trobules caused by EYE STRAIN. We have corrected by the use of glasses cross eyes and Astigmatism, by our scientific methods of Examining.

Arithmetical.

"Yes," said the old methematician, with a gleam in his eyes, "I've always looked at it that way. Marriage is addition, when the little ones come it's multiplication, when dissension looms up to cloud the horizon of their happiness it's division and when the final parting comes it's substraction."

"And how about divorce?" asked the listener.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Those who went to the borough hall yesterday afternoon expecting to hear an examination of Marks Freedman on James Dunphy's charge of grand larceny were disappointed. Freedman, as soon as he could arrange things after his arrest, went before a justice in New Brunswick, Thursday, and gave bail for his appearance before the grand jury directly. It is not at all certain that the matter will ever go further than the jury room.

A case of interest to local readers was settled last Thursday, just before it was to have come up on appeal in the court at New Brunswick. The case was that of John Tschudi against Conrad Egel, in tort. Tschudi got a verdict of $25 and costs from a jury in Justice Von Minden's court, and Egel appealed. On Thursday he made a full settlement, paying costs amounting to $19.50, as well as the $25.

The pile of earth left by the trolley company on the Bound Brook road, which interfered with traffic, has been removed in answer to complaints by the borough authorities.

Mr. and Mrs. John Leal, of Central avenue, will leave town the last of the month for the summer.

HEALTHY PLANTS

Require the Most Careful Attention as Well as Good Soil.

Did you ever see a rosebush which—despite the most beneficent environment of soil—of sunshine—and of atmosphere,—seemed never to achieve a healthy growth.

A ton of manure will not help a plant that has a canker eating out its heart.

You must destroy the cause before you can remove the effect.

You cannot cure Dandruff and Baldness by rubbing on hair lotions, and rubbing in vaseline, etc.

You must look to the cause of the trouble—it's a germ at the roots of your hair which causes it to fall out.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys the germ, and healthy hair is the sure result.

TEACHERS' RETIREMENT BILL CONSTITUTIONAL.

Attorney General, in Opinion, Says Amendment Does Not Create New Fund.

Trenton, N. J., June 16.—Attorney General Robert H. McCarter has given an opinion to the State Board of Education, saying the new Teachers' Retirement bill is clearly constitutional. The criticisms made to the measure were referred to the Attorney General for an opinion, and he says to the Board of Education:

"I have considered with some care the questions as to the constitutionality of the bill, known as the "amendment to the Teachers' Retirement Fund,' arising from the fact that this proposed amendment seems to create classes, and it is thought enables old members of the fund by joining one of the other classes to thereby depreciate the fund available for those who continue in class one.

"The subject is quite complicated and not altogether clear, but in my judgment this provision is not so plainly unconstitutional as to justify the Governor in vetoing it upon that ground.

"A very forceful argument has been made by you to me to the effect that this bill is only an amendment to an old law, and leaves impaired the provision in the matter. Defining the rights of members of class 1, and a careful examination of the old law, as amended and the proposed amendment, seems to justify the conclusion you reach that the proposed amendment in no way creates a new fund or minimizes the rights of members of class 1 to share not only in all the income arising from any of the classes, but also, if necessary, in the principal, in order to satisfy demands.

"In the face of so strong an argument as that I do not feel justified in myself concluding that the act is in this respect unconstitutional, and, in the absence of a decision by the courts to the contrary, I see no reason to doubt that it has not been properly criticised upon this point."

GRIM REAPER'S CALL TO ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.

Uncle of the President Passes Away at Country Home on Long Island.

Sayville, L. I., June 16.—Robert R. Roosevelt, uncle of the President, died here early Thursday. He had been ill for several months.

Mr. Roosevelt was seventy-six years old. He was a lifelong Democrat. Educated for the law, he practised his profession in New York city for more than twenty years, retiring in 1871 to devote himself to literature and statecraft. He was editor of the New York Citizen for several years, an alderman of the city of New York, member of Congress 1873-5; chairman of the executive committee of the committee of seventy in the fight against the Tweed ring, United States Minister to the Netherlands 1888-90, and was treasurer of the Democratic national committee at the time of Cleveland's second election.

From early life Mr. Roosevelt was deeply interested in field sports and active in promotion of societies and clubs for the protection of game. He was president of the New York International Association for the Protection of Game, and for twenty years was chairman of the New York State Fishery Commission. He was chairman of the commission for the protection of the soldiers during the war with Spain; was at one time president of the Sons of the American Revolution, and was a member of all the committee to aid the Boers in their war with England.

Among his best known works in the field of literature were "Game Fish of North America," "Game Birds," "Superior Fishing," "Fish Hatching and Fish Catching," "Florida and the Game Water Birds," "Five Acres Too Much," "Progressive Petticoats" and "Love and Luck."

Ordered to Red Bank.

Trenton, N. J., June 16.—Brigadier General Gilmore, commanding the Second Brigade, New Jersey National Guard, has issued an order directing the Third Regiment Infantry, Battery B, field artillery, Batallion Naval Reserve, all of South Jersey and the Second Troop Cavalry of Monmouth county to assemble at Woodbury, at 9:15 next Thursday morning to be marched to Red Bank, Gloucester county, to participate in the ceremonies incident to the dedication of a monument on the Revolutionary battlefield at that point. The guardsmen will be required to perform this duty without pay.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Plenty of Them in Plainfield and Good Reason For It.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any Plainfield reader

Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, of 63 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "My kidneys were diseased for years and I also had trouble with my heart. I have endured the severe torture of a backache that comes from diseased conditions of the kidneys and likewise those heavy dull aches in the head. Many nights I have been unable to rest at al, and when I awoke in the morning my limbs would be so stiff and sore that I would be obliged to slide out of bed. When I caught cold it always settled on the kidneys and any little strain or overexertion that involved the muscles of my back would cause intense pain. I have doctored with physicians at Washington, D. C., and here at Plainfield, but none of their medicines did me the good I got from Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's pharmacy. This remedy went right to the seat of the trouble, dispelled the pains and aches, corrected the kidney derangement and made me feel like a different person."

To the Trustees of Grace Church, Plainfield, First Baptist Church:

Gentlemen:

Always have your church buy linseed oil at barrel prices. Don't let them pay $1.50 a gallon for canned oil, which ought to cost but 60 cents a gallon. Ready-mixed paint is about half oil and half paint. Buy oil fresh from the barrel, and add it to the L. and M. Paint, which is semi-mixed, and you then get a full gallon of paint at the lowest price.

4 gallons L. & M. mixed with 3 gallons Linseed Oil will paint a moderate sized house.

Actual cost L. & M. about $1.20 per gallon.

C. S., Andrews, Ex-Mayor, Danbury, Conn., writes, "Painted my house 19 years ago with L. & M. Looks well today."

EDISON'S LATEST GREAT DISCOVERY.

Wizard of Llewellyn Park Promises Cheap Cobalt Storage Battery.

Asheville, N. C., June 16.—The Asheville Citizen publishes an interview with Thomas A. Edison, of West Orange, N. J., who is on an automobile tour of the South, and who says that he has made discoveries of cobalt in North Carolina that will revolutionize the electrical world. Mr. Edison claims that he will reduce the weight of storage batteries in automobiles one-half and the cost of traffic more than that. He has been in this State a few weeks prospecting for cobalt. He says:

"There is a vein of cobalt running from a point just east of Nachville, Tenn., into this State. My discovery means a revolution in the electrical world. I can reduce the cost of city traffic 55 per cent, and cut the weight of storage batteries in half.

"Ihave found cobalt in Lincoln, Gaston, Shelby and Jackson counties. I made assays of the mineral in many places, and I found the quality to be just what I was looking for.

"The electric vehicles have been under a great handicap because of the heavy storage batteries we have been forced to put into them.

"When I can equip an automobile with the cobalt system the storage battery weight will be one-half, and when the price is reduced so as to place the electrics within the reach of everybody the horse will be a thing of the past.

"I have left a force of men in four counties in this State where I found cobalt and they will make a thorough investigation. I may possibly return later in the summer.

"I am confident that what I have found here will enable me to create a new vehicle, propelled by cobalt batteries. Most of the cobalt now known to the world is found in France and Australia."

Children Out of Unveiling Exercises.

Elizabeth, June 16.—The school children of this city will probably not take part in the unveiling of the soldiers and sailors' monument here on July 4. At the meeting of the general committee Wednesday night this matter was discussed. The reasons why the children may not be invited is twofold. One of these is that the finances of the general committee will not permit of the erection of additional grandstands, and the second is that the schools will have been dismissed by July 4, and the children would not be under the direction of a competent leader. The matter was referred, however, to the committee on dedication, which will probaly report negatively upon the question of whether to invite them, judging from the expressions heard at the meeting.

Plainfield, N. J., June 16, 1906.

THE PEOPLE TO BLAME.

In his address at the North Plainfield High School commencement exercises last night, State Senator Thomas J. Hillery struck the nail squarely on the head when he said: "If men who are leaders in a political way assume arbitrary powers it is only because it is permitted through the inattention and inactivity of the people themselves." In other words, the Senator says that the voters are to blame for allowing political machines to flourish, and he never spoke any truer words.

A handful of professional politicians, or professional tradesmen as the case may be, can and do control the governments of municipalities, counties and States, and it is only because of the gross neglect of the duties of citizenship on the part of the people. These few men arrogate to themselves the control of affairs, dictate what laws or ordinances they desire to have on the statute books, and put in office their favorites, who are generally men chosen rather for what help they can give the bosses than for any real ability.

Now and then the people do awake to the responsibilities that are entrusted to them by the Democratic form of government and throw off the yoke of bossism. Recent instances may be cited to show that when the citizens become aroused, the political tradesmen are easily exiled. La Follette, in Wisconsin; Folk, in Missouri, and Weaver, in Philadelphia, are men of the hour for their victories over bossism. What the country needs now is more of such men, men who know how to handle the muke rake in the political garden, and men who know how to weed out all that is bad and to plant the seeds of good government.

Prominent boroughites are wondering why the Colbyites could not find a more popular man for their chairman than W. W. Howland.

The LL. D. given former Senator James Smith does not mean that he is a Long Lost Democrat.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Germain, of East Front street, are entertaining relatives from Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

George Graves, of Liberty street, has returned to his duties with the Public Service Corporation after two weeks' vacation.

Mrs. J. A. Cubberley and daughter, Mabelle, of East Sixth street, left this afternoon for Providence, R. I., to attend the commencement exercises of Brown University.

Morris Dumont, who was reported to be ill with scarlet fever, has been found not to have the disease, and by order of the Board of Health quarantine was removed from the house today.

Jeffery the Children's Friend.

William Jeffery, the local real estate specialist, put his automobile to good use, last evening, by treating all the children in the neighborhood of his home on Duer street to a ride about town. It required nearly a half a dozen trips to take them all but it was finally accomplished and the whole troop sent home happy. From the number of requests made since for a ride in the machine, Mr. Jeffery is thinking of establishing a "Seeing Plainfield" company.

ADVICE TO GRADUATES

age within the borders of the State. By the establishment of a free public school, our forefathers in their wisdom and foresight laid the foundation for the future greatness of our country. They saw that if the resources of the new country were to be developed, if their country was to some day rank with the nations of the world, that 'education,' as they expressed it, 'must be as fere as the air we breathe.'

"As the recipients of these favors at the hands of your State, you owe her the duty of loyalty and devotion to her interests. New Jersey ranks among the foremost States of the Union. You should be proud of her history and traditions. On the first pages of your school history you became familiar with the names of men and places that makes New Jersey renowned throughout this union of States. Her soil has been baptised in the blood of the early patriots; she has not only been loyal to the cause of education and the cause of freedom, but with men and money, with blood and treasure, she demonstrated her loyalty to the cause of the Union.

"By becoming earnest, active and loyal citizens of your State, by defending her institutions and her honor, by doing your part in the progress and development that still awaits her, you will discharge the obligation that rests upon you.

The Future.

"Your face is now turned toward the future. If today you were to be convinced that your store-house of knowledge is filled or that your best effort had been expended, your chances of future success would indeed be small. To gain success should be your greatest aim. Future success is the structure which you must mold with your own hands. You will be both architect and builder. In these years of preliminary work you have shaped the granite blocks for its foundation. The stability, the symmetry and the beauty of the superstructure will depend upon the work which yop do from now on. Hard, earnest work and application is the price that men pay for genius and greatness. Talent, which is nature's gift, is not a pre-requisite. The plodding, earnest worker will achieve greater success than the talented though lazy one, In the old copy book were these words: 'Time is money,' which meant that time was valuable. It is the proper employment of time, it is its daily, constant and continuous employment that breeds genius, that makes experts and brings renown to men in the various professions. The poet well expressed it when he says: 'Count that day lost whose low descending sun views from thy hand no worthy action done.' Countless examples could be enumerated of men whose names are recorded on the brightest pages of history, who take advantage of the opportunity that time affords. Lincoln pouring over his 'Blackstone' on the counter of a country store, and Garfield translating his Latin for recreation gives us a clue to the method which these men employed in 'ascending to the dizzy heights of fame.'

"To acquire both fame and wealth with honor is a laudible ambition. It was well expressed by someone who said when fame and wealth are not nobly acquired, 'honor becomes dishonor, fame only notoriety and wealth the possession of stolen goods.' While I believe the world grows better daily, it would seem there is still a demand both in public and in private life for the old-fashioned conscientiously honest man.

Country Needs Men.

"Our country stands continually in need of such men. Her great wealth and rapid development tends to intensify and make more complex governmental problems. The pulse of a nation is measured by that of its component, the individual, and that pulse indicates a feeling of unrest due to many causes. The acquirement of wealth in this country is unexampled in the history of the world, some of which is without doubt has been acquired by improper methods, by the control of privileges that were not employed by their neighbors. Our country is rich in natural resources, and I believe the greater part of the wealth of the country has been acquired in the development of these resources by the brains and energy of those who were fortunate enough to secure and develop them.

"The true interpretation of the doctrine of 'equality before the law' forbids the ownership of privileges that are special, but permits every man a fair and equal opportunity in the pursuit of wealth. False teachers will rise up and continue to preach the transformation of that doctrine into absolute equality, promising thereby to change the very handiwork of God. While they cannot hope to equalize the virtues, the energy or the talents of men, they preach the equal distribution of the product, which is wealth. To attempt a limitation of wealth or to hope to make the industrious man share with the laggard is a doctrine that is as dangerous as it is false.

"As long as the world lasts there will be those who will acquire and retain a larger share than their neighbor of the world's goods, and when conditions are such that every man has an equal opportunity, there can be no just complaint from him who fails to get what he considers his share. The dissemination of knowledge by the public schools and other institutions of learning have done more and will continue to do more even distribution of wealth than any other force which is working today. We have our own opinion as to the use of wealth for the betterment of the race, and we sometimes feel that if some of the wealth produced by the 'horny handed toiler' were used to provide a roof tree for himself and family it might answer a higher purpose than the building of marble halls for the storage of books that are seldom read.

Citizenship.

When later you assume the duties and responsibilities of citizenship you will be called upon to discharge the highest duty you owe to your State and country. If you receive no further training you are prepared to take up the questions that will interest you as citizens and perform your duties as such, and you can do your duty well only by taking an active interest in public matters whether they be local, State or national.

"If men who are leaders in a political way assume arbitrary powers it is only because it is permitted through the inattention and inactivity of the people themselves. In a representative government like ours it should be a high aim and a laudable ambition to perform the duties of a public official. If the duties of citizenship weigh heavily upon the private citizen, they increase a hundred fold when he accepts a public trust for his public acts will effect the citizens of his town, his State or his country, and in the conduct of his office the advices that he receives may be as variable and as numerous as the ballots in the box that elected him. There is, however, a general consensus of opinion which every public man should heed, and if he uses his best judgment and keeps within his shield, honesty and truth, his position will always be impregnable. He will not escape the jealousy, envy, the prejudice or even the slander of disgruntled ones, but sooner or later the false prop that supports their accusations will be shattered by truth which is ever enduring."

Another selection by the chorus, "Rowing Homewards," was rendered after the audience had liberally applauded the Senator's remarks, and the valedictory was then announced. It was given in a manly, straighforward manner by Frank Aseolo Webster, who stood at the head of the class when examination points were computed and in the four years just over has been one of the school's brightest pupils. His subject was "The Advantages of Present Day Education" and in part was as follows:

"The advantages of the present day education can be best appreciated by comparing the conditions of today with those of fifty years ago. The school of our fathers convened in a building that was poorly adapted for educational purposes. Little regard was paid to proper lighting, heating, ventilation and sanitary conditions. The seats and desks were home-made and of but two sizes for all pupils and the teachers in the main were meagrely educated. Discipline was secured by force, and whipping was the universal remedy for misbehavior. The text books usually consisted of an arithmetic, speller and a New Testament as a reading book. In few schools were there any histories, geographies or supplementary readers.

"These conditions have entirely changed. School buildings are constructed according to the best ideas of ventilation, lighting, heating, sanitation and convenience. The teachers are vastly better educated than in former years, moreover more attention is given to the character and personality of the teacher than formerly. The subjects of the old school are all taught and in addition to those many others of great value. Science is taught by means of experiments in suitably equipped laboratories. Attractive text books in all subjects are available.

"Methods of securing discipline are also of an entirely different nature. The individual pupil is constantly studied by the teacher. Nervous children are treated altogether differently from phlegmatic children. When punishments are necessary, which is comparatively very seldom, each pupil is treated as seems best for his reformation. Instead of treating all pupils alike the modern idea is to treat all pupils differently. Instead of using corporal punishment, which seldom does any good, pupils are led to see their error and inspired to correct it. This makes them more self-reliant than the old plan of unquestioned obedience.

"Of course, today, as always, advantages are only beneficial to those who embrace them. No matter how great the opportunities, if pupils do not avail themselves thereof these might as well not exist.

"May the class of 1906 honor themselves and their school by seizing every opportunity to make themselves noble and useful."

Preceding the distribution of diplomas, Mr. Joy took occasion to remark on the unusually large number to receive them and stated that in the ten years that North Plainfield has had high school grades it has sent out 134 graduates. Many of them are making their mark in the world and those before him were given a few last kindly words of advice as to their course in the future. As had been done in the valedictory, Mr. Joy mentioned the advantages that had been provided them but he asserted the Board of Education would be fully repaid for all it's efforts if they would determine to make the best of their opportunities.

Cured by "Randolph's Special Rheumatic Tablets."

Rheumatism is one of the most painful and aggrevating maladies. Many persons have spent fortunes to effect a cure.

Rheumatism cannot be cured by bathing with liniments or outward applications, as it is an infection and must be treated by an internal remedy.

"Randolph's Special Rheumatic Tablets" is the tried, true and successful remedy for Rheumatic Gout, Chronic Rheumatism and Irritable Bladder. These Tablets are dissolved in water and taken three times a day.

THE DEPOSIT

Ravanot held the position of cashier in the same bank for ten consecutive years.

During all this period there was no ground for criticism of his work. His books were well kept and no errors were found in his accounts.

He lived by himself, shunned all new connections, visited no public resorts, had no desire for female attachments; in short, he seemed to lead a peaceful and contented existence.

When any one remarked in his presence "It must be a great temptation this handling of such great sums," he quietly answered: "Why? Money which doesn't belong to one is simply no money."

He was the embodiment of rectitude, and all delicate questions on finance were left to him to decide.

One eening he failed to return to his lodgings. The thought of any fraudulent act never entered the mind of those who knew him; all they feared was that he had met with some accident. The officials examined his last day's work. All his checks had been promptly presented; the last one had been cashed at Porte Montreaux about 7 o'clock. What he had taken in up to that time amounted to 200,000 francs. No trace of him was to be found. Searchers were sent in all directions and telegrams to all frontier stations. All in vain. Finally the directors of the bank, as well as the police, came to the conclusion that he had been foully dealt with. They even went so far as to say they had found evidences which led them to believe that this plot had been prearranged by crooks long before it was carried out.

One man in the whole city of Paris shrugged his shoulders on reading these notices in the daily papers, and that man was Ravenot.

While the most experienced detectives were getting off his track, he was skirting the oltlying boulevards leading to the river. Under the arches of one of the bridges, the night before, he had hidden a civilian's suit. After putting this on, and safely stowing away the 200,000 francs in his pockets, he made a bundle of his discarded uniform, tied a stone to it, and threw it in the river, then quietly returning to the city. He had ample time to take a train and get beyond the frontier, but he was clever enough to know that a few hundred kilmonetres would not keep him out of the clutches of the gendarmerie. He clearly knew what awaited him if caught. Accordingly, he reasoned along entirely different lines.

The following morning he put the 200,000 francs in an envelope which he sealed five times and went to a notary. "Sir," he said, "I ask your services. This envelope contains papers of great value, which I wish to place securely before starting on a long journey from which I know not when I may return. Will you take charge of this? I hope you do not object?"

"Not in the least, I simply give you a receipt."

Ravanot acquisced. Suddenly he behtought him what he should do with this receipt—where to hide it—to whom to entrust it. He lealized these complications which he had not taken into account, and said in a natural voice: "Mon Dieu! I am alone in the world, without relatives or friends. Th voyage I'm about to undertake is long and dangerous; I might lose the receipt or it might be stolen from me and destroyed. Could you not keep it in your archives? On my return all that will be necessary will be to mention my name to you or to your possible successor."

"Yes, but—"

"You will make a note on the receipt tha it can only be claimed in that way."

"Very well. Will you be good enough to give me your name?"

Without hesitation, Ravenot answered: "Duverger, Henri Duverger."

On regaining the street he gave a sigh of relief. The first part of his programme was ended. They might arrest him now; he knew his booty was safe.

He had coolly reasoned in the following way: "When I shall have served my sentence, I shall draw out my deposit. No one will be in a position to dispute it. Five or six years in prison will soon be over, and then I shall be rich. This is less stupid than to grind oue one's days to the end. I shall live in the country and be known to everybody as Monsigneur Duvenger. I shall reach a peaceful old age, and do good without any remorse."

He waited another twenty-four hours in order to be sure that the numbers of the bank notes were not known; then he gave himself up.

Many a man in his position would have invented some kind of a tale—he preferred to tell the truth and confess to the theft. Why lose time?

During his preliminary examination, even before the jury, he would not say what he had done with the money. All he would answer was: "I do not know. I went to sleep on a bench and was robbed."

Owing to his hitherto exemplary character, his sentence was minimized to five years' imprisonment. Without the quiver of a muscle he took it. He was but 34—at 40 he would be free and rich, so he looked upon the punishment as a small, necessary sacrifice.

While serving his term he was considered as exemplary a convict as he had been an official. He patiently watched the days go by and had no concern except as to his health. At last the day of his liberation dawned. His little savings of about ten francs were paid out to him, and his first thoughts were the notary and the deposit. How he had longed for this hour. He drew a mental picture of the scene as it would be enacted.

He arried at the well-remembered office. Would the notary recognize him? He looked at himself in a mirror. In truth he had aged considerably, his features were drawn. No, the notary would surely not recognize him. Ha! ha! that would make the matter more interesting and comical still.

"What can I do for you, sir?"

"I am here about a deposit which was left with you five years ago."

"Which deposit?" Under what name?"

"Under the name of Monsieur —"

Suddenly he stopped. "This is strange, indeed. I cannot for the life of me think of the name I gave."

He thought and thought, but the name would not come to him. Feeling himself getting nervous, he sat down, and muttered to himself: "Keep cool—patience. If I could only find the first letter. Monsieur ——? Monsieur ——?" The name would not be conjured up.

For an hour he searched his memory; searched for a hold, a sign. The name seemed to stand before his eyes, turned about him; he saw the letters scatter and the syllables take flight. Every moment he had a sensation as if he could grasp it—it was on the tip of his tongue—still it would not materalize. From being simply vexed, he now became excited and suffered actual physical pain. Hot and cold waves ran up and down his spine, his muscles contracted, he could not remain quietly in the same place; his hands twitched and he bit his parched lips until they bled. He wanted to weep and fight at the same time. Yet the more he tried to concentrate his thoughts the more the name eluded him.

He rose, and stamping his foot he remarked: "Why try any longer? It will come to me when I shall cease looking for it."

But this was easier said that done. Do what he might the same question was ever uppermost in his mind—"Monsieur ——? Monsier ——?"

Night came on. The streets began to be deserted. He went to a lodging house, asked for a room, and threw himself on the bed—worn out by the strain. He slept until daybreak and felt much refreshed, and for a moment forgot his dilemma. Suddenly it all came back back with redoubled fury.

The sensation of fear now came over him, fear of never finding the name again. Like one possessed, he walked about the notary's house by the hour. For the second time it grew dark. He buried his nails in his scalp and groaned, "I shall go mad!"

Here was his terrible position. He possessed 200,00 francs in bank notes—to be sure, they were stolen property, still he would take possession. To have them he had served five years in prison, and now he could not get them. They were within his reach, but a name, a single name, which could not come, cheated him out of it all. He beat his head, for it seemed as if his reason were leaving him; he ran against the lamppost reeling like a drunken man. He had no more fixed ideas—madness possessed his whole being. He seemed now convinced that he should never find the name. Strange voices seemed to mock him and passerby point their fingers in derision. Headlong he rushed through the streets, regardless of anything in the way, in a mad desire that something might crush out his brain. "Monsieur ——? Monsieur ——? Oh, that name!

He came to the river. In the green, indolent waters of the Seine the sars were reflected. He wept aloud— "Monsieur—? Oh, what is the name?"

He descended the steps leading to the lower bank, and lay down near the water's edge so that he might cool his face and hands. He breathed heavily. Gradually the water drew him nearer and nearer until he held his eyes—his ears—his whole body. He felt himself drawn into it without making the slightest attempt to hold on to something. Then he fell; the icy cold stung him. Involuntarily he struggled, his arms rose, he raised his head—then he sank. He rose again to the surface, then suddenly, during a last desperate effort, his eyes bulging out of their sockets and his mouth contorted, he shrieked, "I have it. Help! Duvenger— Thou * * *!"

The banks of the river were deserted. The waters splashed against the bridge, and its dark arch reechoed the name Duerger. Lazily the Seine drifted on; red and green lights glanced on its mirror. A deadly calm pervaded the scene.—Louise Waring in Philadelphia Telegraph.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to use it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Axienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

"Fact! Say, it must have been an awful blow to him when he found sis wouldn't think of him at all without his title, even if she was broke. They had a stormy time of it from all I can hear. He said he was strong enough to work and all that, and since he'd cared for her, and not for her money, it was low down of her to throw him over; then she said she wouldn't leave her mother and us, now that we might need her, not for him or any other man—and he said that only made him love her all the more, and then he got chesty, and said he was just as good as any American, even if he never would have a title; so pretty soon they got kind of interested in each other again, and by the time I came n m it was all over. They ratified the preliminary agreement for a merger."

"Well, I snum!"

"That's right, go ahead and snum. I'd snum myself if I knew how—it knocked me. Better come upstairs and congratulate the happy couple."

"Shoo, now! I certainly am mighty disappointed in that fellow. Still, he is well spotted, and them freckles mean iron in the blood. Maybe we can develop him along with the other properties."

They found Psyche already radiant, though showing about her eyes traces of the storm's devastations. Mauburn was looking happy; also defiant and stubborn.

"Mr. Bines," he said to Uncle Peter, "I hope you'll side with me. I know something about horses, and I've nearly a thousand pounds that I'll be glad to put in with you out there if you can make a place for me."

The old man looked him over quizzically. Psyche put her arm through Mauburn's.

"I'd have to marry some one, you know, Uncle Peter!"

"Don't apologize, Pish. There's room for men that can work out there, Mr. Mauburn, but there ain't any vintages or trouserings to speak of, and the hours is long."

"Try me, Mr. Bines!"

"Well, come on. If you can't skin yourself you can hold a leg while somebody else skins. But you ain't met my expectations, I'll say that!" And he shook hands cordially with the Englishman.

"I say, you know," said Mauburn later to Psyche, "why should I skin myself? Why should I be skinned at all, you know?"

"You shouldn't," she reassured him. "That's only Uncle Peter's way of saying you can help the others, even if you can't do much yourself at first. And won't Mrs. Drelmer be delighted to know it's all settled?"

"Well," said Uncle Peter to Percival, later in the evening, "Pish has done better than you have here. It's a pity you didn't pick out some good, sensible girl, and marry her in the midst of your other doings."

"I couldn't find one that liked cats. I saw a lot that suited every other way, but I always said to myself: 'Remember Uncle Peter's warning!' so I'd go to an animal store and get a basket of kittens and take them around, and not one of the dozen stood your test. Of course I'd never disregard your advice."

"Hum," remarked Uncle Peter, in a tone to be noticed for its extreme dryness. "Too bad, though—you certainly need a wife to take the conceit out of you."

"I lost that in the street, along with the rest."

"Well, son, I ain't no ways alarmed but what you'll soon be on your feet again in that respect—say by next Tuesday or Wednesday. I wish the money was comin' back as easy."

"Well, there are girls in Montana City."

"You could do worse. That reminds me—I happened to meet Shepler today and he got kind of confidential—talkin' over matters. He said he'd never really felt sure about the affections of a certain young woman, especially after that night at the Oldakers'—he'd never felt dead sure of her until you went broke. He said you never could know anything about a woman—not really."

"He knows something about that one, all right, if he knows she wouldn't have any use for me now. Shepler's coming on with the ladies. I feel quite hopeful about him."

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE DEPARTURE OF UNCLE PETER.

The Bineses, with the exception of Psyche, were at breakfast a week later. Miss Bines had been missing since the day that Mr. and Mrs. Cecil G. H. Mauburn had left for Montana City to put the Bines home in order.

Uncle Peter and Mrs. Bines had now determined to go, leaving Percival to follow when he had closed his business affairs.

"It's like starting west again to make our fortune," said Uncle Peter. He had suffered himself to regain something of his old cheerfulness of manner.

"I wish you two would wait until they can get the car here, and go back with me," said Percival. "We can go back in style even if we didn't save much more than a get-away stake."

But his persuasions were unavailing. "I can't stand it another day," Mrs. Bines, "and those letters keep coming in from poor suffering people that haven't heard the news."

"I'm too restless to stay," declared Uncle Peter. "I declare, with spring all greenin' up this way I'd be found campin' up in Central park some night and took off to the calaboose. I just got to get out again where you can feel the wind blow and see a hundred miles and don't have to dodge horseless horse cars every minute. It's a wonder one of 'em ain't got me in this town. You come on in the car, and do the style fur the family. One of them common Pullmans is good enough fur Marthy and me. And besides, I got to get Billy Brue back. He's goin' plumb daft lookin' night and day fur that man that got his $30 and his breastpi He says there'll be an ambulance backed up at the spot where he meets him—makes no difference if it's right on Fifth avenue. Billy's kind of nearsighted at that, so I'm mortal afraid he'll make a mistake one of these nights and take some honest man's money and trinkets away from him."

Percival saw them to the train.

"Take care of yourself," said Uncle Peter at parting. "You know I ain't any good any more, and you got a whole family, includin' an Englishman, dependin' on you—we'll throw him on the town, though, if he don't take out his first papers the minute I get there."

His last shot from the rear platform was:

"Change your name back to 'Pete,' son, when you get west of Chicago. 'Tain't anything fancy, but it's a crackin good business name fur a hustler!"

"All right, Uncle Peter—and I hope I'll have a grandson that thinks as much of it as I do of yours."

When they had gone, he went back to the work of final adjustment. He had the help of Coplen, whom they had sent for. With him he was busy for a week. By lucky sales of some of the securities that had been hypothecated they managed to save a little; but, on the whole, it was what Percival described it, "a lovely autopsy."

"YOU ARE MISS SPRING!"

THE GREAT VALUE
Of a gas water heater lies in the fact that it heats plenty of water for all household purposes on a hot summer day without over heating the house. A coal range cannot do this. Start the fire and the whole house becomes an oven.
With a water heater you light the gas and the water is quickly heated without "fuss or feather." No matter how warm the day there is no preceptable difference in the temperature of the kitchen. Order one to-day and spend your summer in comfort. We sell heaters at $8.50.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

The most successful summer show which has ever been brought into New York is "His Honor the Mayor," which is presented by Alfred E. Aarons at the New York theatre. Its reception at its intial performance was widely enthusiastic and the New York papers the next day pronounced it the most tuneful and most laughable entertainment of its kind that Broadway has seen in many years. The Messrs. Aarons and Sill have made no claims that "His Honor the Mayor" is a pretentious production, but have merely asserted that it is a light, breezy entertainment, not calculated to overtax one's mentality during the hot period. Miss Blanch Ring, who is a popular favorite with theatre-goers, has the leading role and she shares the honor with the famous original English Pony Ballet. These eight young women are a sensation wherever they appear. The other principles, which include Clarence Harvey, Harry Kelly, Fletcher Norton, William Black, Arthur Earnest, John Pratt, E. Van Rensselaer, Mabel Hollins, Madelyn Marshall, Lora Lieb and Lois Tabor, are all well known and are admirably suited for the parts which they assume. The company numbers one hundred persons and the production itself is of rare beauty. There are twenty-two musical numbers in "His Honor the Mayor;" written by Julian Edwards and Alfred E. Aarons. Mr. Edwards is one of the best known of American composers, he having written the score of such successes as "Dolly Vardon," "Brian Boru," and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," while Mr. Aarons is the composer of "Mlle. Awkins," "The Knickerbocker Girl" and other popular successes. The book is from the pen of R. M. Skinner and C. E. Campbell, two well known western librettists. For this engagement at the New York theatre the prices have been fixed by the management at one dollar for the best seats, with very desirable locations at 25, 50 and 75 cents.

New York's beautiful mid-air playhouse, Wistaria Grove, on the New York and Criterion theatres, opened for the season on Tuesday night, the 5th instant, in circumstances of uncommon success. The immense programme of new matter provided by the management, Wm. A. Brady and Joseph Hart, proved, of itself, a revelation even to the metropolis, accustomed for the past dozen years to "big" entertainment in its roof-gardens. Hardly less of a surprise was the surpassing beauty of the Grove itself. Months of work on the part of the painters, decorators, and artists showed eloquently in the superb sight that met the eye of the immense first-night gathering as its members stepped off the big electric elevators high in the air. The wistaria note was carried out in everything, so that the mise-enscene resembled nothing so much as a genuine Japanese vista, and one looked about as if in expectation of seeing a bevy of smiling geisha-girls or hearing the tinkle-tinkle of gently-twanged mandolins.

Joseph Hart's summer extravaganza, "Seeing New York," went on at 9:45, and proved to a great medley of mirth and melody. Hits were scored by Carrie De Mar, Al Leech, Clifton Crawford, Cheridah Simpson, and the entore cast, including the Three Rosebuds, Tom Fortune, and Fleurette De Mar. All New York is now whistling "My Blushing Rose," "I'm Not Particular," "Miss Daisy Gown," and "He Walked Right In," and rushing to buy tickets to see Mr. Hart's new comic device, whereby the windy-day aspects of the Flatiron building are realistically reproduced.

A Rare Article Indeed.

A little girl not long ago displayed a bit of feather—black, as it happened—to a caller at the house. This man looked impressed and inquired gravely, "What is that Nelly, an angel's wing?" The child slowly shook her head. "Oh, no," she answered at once. "Angels' feathers are white, and I think they are very scarce."

A Private Electric Plant

On a small scale will not reduce the lighting bills, if you have to use steam to generate your electricity. The cost for maintenance is too large. WE KNOW IT.

You can save money by installing SICHE GAS, because there is practically no cost for labor, as only a few minutes once or twice a week is required to recharge the machine, be it a 10 light or a 1,000 light plant.

Carbide costs $70 per ton F. O. B. Jersey City, and one ton contains 9,000 to 10,000 cubic ft. of high candle-power gas. To produce a 32 candle-power jet of white light, one-half a cubic ft. per hour is used. This costs less than one-half a cent per hour. One jet will light a space 10 x 10 feet, with a 14-ft. ceiling, and light it well.

Ponder over this Mr. Citizen, and ask a few of your business men who are using Siche Gas, how they like the change. We will give you the names.

Call us up at 'phone 771 Plainfield, or come over to 149 East Fourth Street, and get full information.

Gasoline with Which Auto Tank Was Being Filled Caught Fire from Headlight.

Helen Gutmann, fifteen years old, daughter of John J. Gutmann, Jr., of No. 1427 Springfield avenue, Irvington, who was burned Thursday night by the explosion of a gasoline tank in a garage in Halsey street, Newark, died early yesterday in St. Barnabas' Hospital.

Miss Guttman, with Miss Ella Sattler, daughter of Dr. Ludwig R. Sattler, owner of the automobile, and Miss Elsie Schumacher, of No. 7 Belmont avenue, had been for a ride, under the guidance of Dr. Sattler. The supply of gasoline ran out, and the party stopped at the garage of the Motor Car Company of New Jersey, at No. 291 Halsey street, to replenish the tank. Sanders was filling the car tank. The gasoline took fire from contact with the flame of the auto headlight. There was a slight explosion, followed by an outbreak of flame.

TWO WOMEN CLAIM TO BE MRS. MICHAEL FOGARTY

NO. 2 IN IGNORANCE

Neither Wife Knew of Other and Now Have No Feeling of Antagonism—Mother With Number One.

The death of Michael J. Fogarty, a prominent railroad contractor of Jersey City, who succumbed to cerebral paralysis at the home of Mrs. C. B. Lawson, 833 West Sixth street, last Thursday, has disclosed the fact that he was husband to two women for many years. The disclosure came yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Lawson, when Wife Number One confronted Number Two.

The discovery came directly as the result of Fogarty's death. He and Wife No. 2 came to the Lawson home on a visit some time ago. He was seized with an attack of acute indigestion early last week, and congestion of the brain resulted. Mrs. Fogarty directed the undertaker to locate the dead man's mother, before making arrangements for the funeral. She did not know where the mother lived, except that it was somewhere in Philadelphia, but she insisted on a search before proceeding with the funeral.

E. E. Runyon, through an undertaker in Philadelphia, located the mother after a search of a day and a half, and notified her that her son was dead and that the funeral was being held to await her orders.

The funeral instructions came yesterday afternoon, in the care of Wife Number One. She had been living with the mother in Philadelphia, and the message for Mr. Runyon was the first intimation she had that her husband had even been ill. She went directly to the Lawson house, and confronted Mrs. Fogarty Number 2. She ordered the funeral held until the arrival of her nineteen-year-old son from Philadelphia.

Mrs. Fogarty Number Two was overcome by the disclosure. She was too ill to be seen when a reporter called at the Lawson home this morning.

Mrs. Lawson saw the reporter, but declined to make any statement, except to say that she had known "Mrs. Fogarty for over fifteen years, and always as Mrs. Fogarty."

Mrs. Fogarty, of Philadelphia, remained in the city over night, and her son joined her here this forenoon. Fogarty's body was shipped to Pennsylvania shortly after his arrival, for burial in Churchtown, near Carlisle.

Neither wife had the faintest suspicion of the other's existence through the years of the dead man's double life. Wife Number One had never met Fogarty's mother, and had no idea of what she would uncover in ordering the search for her. Fogarty had never told her where his mother lived, beyond the bare statement that she was in Philadelphia.

No feeling of antagonism has been evinced between the two wives. Wife Number One, whose claim seems unimpeachable, expressed only commiseration for the displaced widow this morning. The latter had a child that died.

Fogarty was not known to any extent in this city. Mrs. Lawson moved here last fall.

HOLY CROSS BOYS DELIGHT AUDIENCE

THEIR MUSICALE FOR BENEFIT OF CAMPING FUND A DECIDED SUCCESS.

For the benefit of their summer camping fund, the members of the Holy Cross church choir gave a musicale and entertainment in the parish house Saturday night. It was attended by a large gathering and the financial result was very pleasing to the boys.

The programme was opened by a chorus, "The Sleigh Ride," four-hand accompaniment, by Russell Conroy and H. Raymond Loder, the latter choirmaster at the church. Harry Kanen and Harold Noble sang a selection, "The Gingerbread Man" and two solos, "When I'm Big I'll Be a Soldier" and "The Wooing," were sung by Mr. Lodier.

A number that was very pleasing and well rendered was a song, "The Waiters," in which appeared Walter Harrington, George Kanen, Arthur Martin, Carroll Taylor and Edward Schorb, all dressed as waiters from various nations. The entire choir sang "The Tinkers" from "Robin Hood;" Mr. Loder contributed another solo, "O For a Burst of Song;" the choir gave another chorus selection, "The Miller's Wooing" and a violin solo was rendered by Benjamin Hirsch.

The programme was concluded with a farce in one act, "Aunt Betty," with the following cast: "Jane, a maid," William Taylor; "Mable," Percy Watson; "Dr. Taylor, her father," Russell Conroy; "Jack Everett, a 'crack' pitcher," Andrew Stiglitz; "Evans, a schoolboy," Pearson Bailey; "Atkins, a schoolboy," Raymond Kenyon; "Mrs. Everett," Albert Miller. The scene of action was Dr. Taylor's schools for boys and a clever plot and situations enabled the boys to make lots of fun. They took their parts very well and several showed exceptional talent.

The affair was arranged and conducted by Rev. George A. Werner and Mr. Loder.

Mrs. Brantingham, who was seventy-eight years old, was born and always lived in the place where she died. She was an exemplary Christian and was one of the oldest members of the Stelton Baptist church. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. George Bunting and two sons, Thos. and Charles Brantingham.

The funeral services will be held from the home of the daughter tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and interment will be in the Baptist cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

RUNYON VS PERKINS

Hottest Sort of Fight Ahead If Reformer Enters Contest Against G. O. P. Leader.

NEWARK NEWS' VIEW

Editorially Says Plainfielder Would Win at Primaries and Be Elected by Overwhelming Majority.

The New Evening News, on Saturday, said editorially:

"In no county in this State would there be a hotter or a heavier political fight than in Union county, if Judge Runyon were to consent to enter the contest against Leader Perkins. Whether he will do so or not remains to be seen, but his friends are already urging him to accept the Assembly nomination on the Colby ticket. That he is not seeking office is well known, since he declined appointment as circuit judge and as county judge. Yet to accept a nomination in the interests of reform is very different from office seeking.

"Leader Perkins is a man of resources and ability. He is entitled 'by party usage' to a renomination next fall. Further than this, he is the 'regular' leader in the House, and there can be no doubt that his attitude, last winter, on all legislation affecting corporations was such as to insure him every influence they can exert in his favor. He would be the candidate of the machine, the organization, the bosses and the corporate interests in Union county not only, but in the State. His incessant hostility to the reformers was but one of the signs of his loyalty to those who would back him to the limit for re-election.

"Judge Runyon was formerly 'the brains of the machine' in Plainfield, until his brains and his conscience and his political experiences compelled him to renounce bosses and bossism, join the Colby movement and become the reform leader in Union county. He is much better known personally, and is much more popular than Perkins; is an experienced lawyer, a fine orator, a man of splendid education and a wide knowledge of events, and would undoubtedly make an excellent and trustworthy legislator.

"A contest between these two men would be a political event of prime importance. It would, on the one side, be Perkins, entrenched behind party usage and backed by partizan and corporate influences of every description, and on the other side Runyon, with nothing behind him but the justice of his cause and the confidence of the people. Were it not for the third element, which has to be taken into consideration, viz., the Democratic part,y which polls 8,290 out of the 20,193 votes in the whole county, the chances would favor Runyon, for the Colby sentiment has taken a firm hold in Union county and is growing.

"This is assuming that both Perkins and Runyon would run in the county at large, as at present. If the Court of Errors and Appeals upholds the constitutionality of the Perkins act, restoring the Assembly district system, then Perkins and Runyon would both be in a solidly Republican distrirct, and there is hardly a doubt that Runyon would win at the primaries and be elected by an overwhelming majority. Such an event would be a splendid victory for reform and a richly deserved rebuke to the bosses and machine."

Murderer Hid in This City.

Frederick Lang, the young man who murdered his cousin, Katie Gordon, at New Brunswick recently, detailed his wanderings after the crime for the first time Saturday. KNIGHTS ATTEND CHURCH

BROADER FRATERNITY

Christianity, He Tells the Knights, Makes Fraternal Intercourse Higher and Better Than Can Ordinarily Be.

In accordance with annual custom, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, attended divine worship, last night. The service was at Grace M. E. church. Between sixty and seventy members of the Castle were present.

They marched into the church in uniform, to seats, in the front of the auditorium. There was a good-sized congregation. Roses decorated the platform,

Rev. Dr. Charles W. Parsons, pastor of the church, preached the sermon. He spoke vigorously and with earnestness on the fraternal spirit, raised to its highest plane by Christianity.

In opening, Dr. Parsons spoke a word of fraternal welcome, and referred to the sign-words of the order —Fidelity, Valor and Honor. They were good words, he said, and there was only one step higher possible for those who lived up to them. He referred to the fact that the founder of the order was a clergyman, and of his might he said the quotation that had been applied to McKinley—

"He climbed the ladder of life so high that from the topmost rung he slipped into the sky."

He hoped that they might all so live that it would be applied to them.

Dr. Parsons took for his text St. John 14:27, "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you." He spoke on the spirit of fraternity and of the broader idea of Christian fraternity with Christ, the Elder Brother.

He spoke of the struggle of life, of the heartburnings that spring from the contest, and told his hearers that there was no peace here, except as they might be reinforced for the strife by Christ. The spirit of Christianity, he said, would lift them to higher fraternal heights. Dr. Parsons pursued this line with much vigor and force.

CRAIG A. MARSH SPOKE AT STATE BAR BANQUET.

Annual Session of Lawyers of New Jersey at Atlantic City.

The annual meeting of the State Bar Association was held at Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, on Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16. Craig A. Marsh and S. S. Swackhammer were present from the Plainfield bar. At the annual banquet, Judge Allan Endicott, the retiring president, acted as toast master. The set toasts were responded to by Supreme Court Justice Swayze, E. M. Colie, of Newark; Craig A. Marsh, of this city; Circuit Judge Parker, of Jersey City, and Col. C. W. Fuller, of Jersey City.

Gilbert Collins was elected president of the ensuing year. Craig A. Marsh was among the trustees elected.

The meeting held on Saturday morning to hear an address from a distinguished member of the Pennsylvania bar and to consider the proposed custom house amendments was not as largely attended as was expected. The vote in favor of the proposed amendments was 22 to 17, and as this was thought to be of little significance on account of so large a minority against the amendments, and the small attendance, the vote was reconsidered and it was arranged to hold a special meeting early in the fall for a fuller discussion and more mature consideration.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER FOR FORMER MAYOR FISK

ASSAULTED HIS MOTHER AND HIT A NEIGHBOR

MOODY HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY AND JAILED FOR 90 DAYS.

Daniel Moody, 25 years old, of New Market, was sent to jail for ninety days by Justice Von Minden, of that place, this morning, for hitting William VanNuis, a fellow-townsman, on the village street last night. Before that action, Moody was held under $200 bail for the Middlesex county Grand Jury, for assaulting his mother.

Moody acknowledged both charges when arraigned. He was arrested in the first place on the complaint of VanNuis, who came to Justice Von Minden's house last evening, and said that Moody was beating his bother and his wife in a brutal manner. The Justice sent Constable Pierce after Moody. The latter had heard that VanNuis went after the police, and he started to hunt for VanNuis. The constable, VanNuis and Moody met at about the same time. Pierce placed Moody, who had been drinking, under arrest, but he broke away and smashed VanNuis in the jaw. Pierce piled on him, and yanked him to jail.

In court this morning, the mother, Mrs. Bertha Moody, pressed a complaint of assault. Her face was badly battered. It is said Moody knocked her down twice, and dragged her and his young wife back into the house from the street when they fled from the house after he started to run amuck.

Moody did not appear to be penitent when arraigned, and the justice sentenced him sharply. His wife pleaded hard for him when the sentence was passed, but the court could not see that any leniency was deserved.

"SPITE HOUSE" SOLD TO NEW YORK MAN.

Transfer Recalls Neighbors Indignation Over Building's Erection.

After refusing numerous offers made during the past few years, Nicholas Martine, the owner of the small frame buildings at Hillside avenue and Lake street, has sold the property to Edward Perkins, of New York. The deal was negotiated by Alexander Kane who has frequently tried to get Martone to dispose of his buildings but without success until the present time. Kane will proceed within a week or so to demolish the structures and Mr. Perkins will erect a handsome residence.

The two buildings in question are unsightly affairs and when erected in the midst of the city's most exclusive neighborhoods, the residents were highly aroused. All manner of persuasion was brought to bear upon Hartone not to finish them, but it was alleged that he asked an exorbitant price for the ground and it was refused. They are surrounded on three sides by handsome homes and have been detrimental to property values.

Held Open Air Meeting.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held its first open air meeting yesterday afternoon in the lot on Watchung avenue, formerly used for the band concerts. The music was in charge of Mrs. Newton Honeyman and there were vocal selections by Miss Dufford. The meeting was considered a success and it is likely that others may be held from time to time.

izens of the city, as a tribute of appreciation for his years of work for the advancement of Plainfield and its institutions.

The dinner will be a subscription affair. Sherry or Delmonico will serve it, and it will be one of the most elaborate and brilliant of its kind ever held here. The subscription is said to be $10 a plate.

The decorations will be noteworthy. The Casino ballroom will be transformed into a veritable bower. A musical programme of the highest standard will be a feature.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert will act as toastmaster. Associated with him in the selection of speakers are J. B. Dumont and O. T. Waring.

Well known men are assisting in the arrangements of the details. Among them are L. G. Timpson, George A. Beaton, Frederic W. Butler, J. M. Shellabarger, Benjamin Wood and Henry L. Hall.

It has been suggested that some gift, suitably engraved, be presented to Mr. Fisk at the dinner, to mark in a permanent way the esteem in which his fellow citizens hold him.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes," Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; this is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Rockefeller's Lawyer, V. P. Kline, Desires Nebraskan "and Conservatism."

Cleveland, June 18.—Virgil P. Kline, personal attorney of John D. Rockefeller, and prominent among all counsel of the Standard Oil Company, has declared himself in favor of William J. Bryan for the next Democratic nominee for President.

Mr. Kline made the declaration yesterday, and says he made it to stand. "Of course, I'm for Bryan," he said. "He will be the Democratic candidate for President, and I believe that he will be elected. Bryan and conservatism have been made respectable by the present occupant of the White House."

The speaker was one of the original silver men of the country, but joined forces of the gold Democratic party and voted for President McKinley. His advocacy of Bryan is said to be significant of the Standard's position.

ELIZABETH IS TO THINK IT OVER NOW.

Studying Central Railroad's Offer and Plan for Street Changes for Freightyard.

Elizabeth, June 18.—The special railroad committee of the City Council, appointed to investigate the plans of the Central Railroad Company providing for the elimination of some of the grade crossings within the city limits and the safety of the public at others, and to listen to whatever objections property owners in the neighborhood of proposed changes might offer, will again meet the officials of the company in the council chamber tonight. At the meeting last Monday evening, when former Governor Voorhees, representing United States Senator George Peabody Wetmore, of Rhode Island, and H. H. Iaham were the only ones present with objections, they put some questions to the railroad officials which the latter had not been anticipating and could no answer offhand. The questions concerned the cost of the approaches to a viaduct mentioned in the contract which is to be signed, and the grades that will be required.

Hints given the correspondent today promise an uneasy hour for some people on Monday evening. Those who didn't have copies of the contract have been furnished them. Following are the principal features of the document in a condensed form:

The objects of the contract, as set forth, are to secure greater safety to persons and property in the city of Elizabeth along the main line of the Central Railroad and the line of the Perth Amboy and Elizabethport division, to facilitate the construction of other than grade crossings at certain streets and highways, to protect certain other existing grade crossings and to otherwise improve existing conditions respectively affecting the corporate properties for the benefit and convenience of the parties to the contract and of the public.

JUDGE SUSTAINS LODGE RULE.

Expelled George Strang Because Engaged in the Liquor Business.

Trenton, June 18.—Judge Garretson, in the Supreme Court, has denied a writ of mandamus to George Strang, of Camden, in the proceedings brought by him against the Camden Lodge, A. O. U. W., for reinstatement as a member of the order and to compel it to accept his assessment.

In 1905 Strang entered into the liquor business in Camden and paid his assessments up to May that year. His May assessment was refused by the Camden lodge because the rules of the order forbid its members to sell liquor, and he was expelled.

STATE BAR OFFICERS.

—The final examinations are being held at the Plainfield High School today. The results will be announced before Thursday.

—The work of digging the cellar for the new building to be erected in East Fourth street by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, is completed and masons are now laying the foundations.

ELIZABETH MAN NEW DEPARTMENT COMMANDER

MAJOR GENERAL F. D. GRANT PROMISES PATERSON MILITIAMEN.

Alfred Atkins, of Ulric Dahlgren Post, Elizabeth, was unanimously elected as department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic at the State encampment at Paterson Friday. Other officers chosen were: Senior vice-commander, Arthur W. Touch, Post 4; junior vice-commander, A. L. Winans, Post 2; medical director, Dr. H. P. Roden, Post 11; council of administration, Robert P. Hillman, Post 5; D. D. Keefe, Post 1; W. W. Mendel, Post 25; E. D. Hill, Post 7; J. J. McDonald, Post 13; delegates to the national convention, John Grimes, Post 3; Joseph Ettinger, Post 35; Frederick Stoll, Post 11; John C. Stichter, Post 1; W. H. Smith, Post 14; Edwin March, Post 64; Tunis A. Haring, Post 101; E. C. Beichelm, Post 29; George M. Cadmus, Post 58, and James Gordon, Post 8.

Commander Cole, of Trenton, offered a resolution extending a vote of thanks to the people of Paterson for the splendid reception given to the Grand Army. Several delegates, in seconding the motion, declared that not in all the history of the Grand Army in New Jersey had the old soldier received such a splendid and hospital greeting as was tendered by the citizens of Paterson.

Reports showed the net loss of men during the year to be 195. Assistant Adjutant General Stinson reported that owing to the decrease in membership the per capita tax was insufficient to defray expenses of administration conducted on proper lines. Department Inspector Parsons gave reports from 105 posts, with a total membership of 4,793.

Major General Frederick Grant, who came here yesterday to review the Grand Army men, was greatly pleased with the appearance of the 3d Battallion, 5th Regiment, N. G. N. J., which formed part of the escort of the veterans. The battalion presented arms as the general drove slowly up Church street. He said he had never seen a finer body of men.

"The great thing that marks a good soldier," said General Grant, "is immobility in rank, and this battalion has that down to a fine point."

The general made other complimentary remarks about the 5th Regiment men and seemed thoroughly pleased with the way the command bore itself.

BOY'S FATHER HAS GUN FOR A DEPUTY MARSHAL.

Lad's Father Arrested Near Butler for Opening a Letter Threatened the Officer.

Morristown, June 18. — Deputy United States Marshal James H. Stewart had an exciting experience Thursday while arresting two young men, Edward Vreeland and William Leach, near Butler, for violation of the United States mail laws. They are charged with opening a letter address to Frederick Elmer Dawson, uncle of the Vreeland boy.

Deputy Marshal Stewart says that on his way to the Vreeland place he passed two young men playing ball. He did not know who they were. He then found young Vreeland's father, J. Oscar Vreeland, at his home, and asked where the boys were. Mr. Vreeland pointed at the ball players.

Stewart arrested both. They submitted quietly enough, but Mr. Vreeland became infuriated and declared that his son should not be taken from the house unless over his dead body. The boys had been permitted to go upstairs to change their clothes, and the elder Vreeland ran up, returning with a shotgun. He ordered Deputy Stewart out of the house and threatened to shoot him if he did not go. Before he could raise the gun Stewart drew his revolver, got "the drop" on Vreeland, and told him that if he did not put the weapon down at once he would shoot to kill. Vreeland lowered the gun and put it in a corner of the room.

His anger subsided and he requested Stewart to allow him to go with the boys to Paterson. His request was granted. The boys told Commissioner Nelson that Dawson made the charge against them because of spite. They were held in $1,000 each for examination.

RAHWAY MAN'S SOLDIER CAT.

Feline That Can Go Through Various Military Tactics.

Rahway, June 18.—"Major" is the name of a black and white cat of extra large size belonging to Charles Gorman, a Civil War veteran, of East Rahway. Wonderful intelligence was manifested by the quadruped when but a kitten. Mr. Gorman began training Major in military tactics, giving him a small piece of sugar when he had learned some new maneuver.

In a little while the feline had learned to "fence," "die for his flag," salute the flag," "keep time to the drum beat," but would never learn the "retreat." He also learned naval tactics in use on a man-of-war. When the horse in the barn is being fed oats Major will watch by the feedbox for a rat to come out and when one does Major gets it. Major has to be fed after each trick as he'll do no more.

Plainfield, N. J., June 18, 1906.

TRIBUTE TO MR. FISK.

It is generally accepted that a "prophet is not without honor save in his own country" and it is equally true that a good citizen is never fully appreciated until after he is dead. But there are exceptions to almost every rule and Plainfield is about to furnish one in the case of the "good citizen." A few years ago, when former Mayor Fisk was apparently at death's door, the good things said about him would make any mortal be proud. The prayers said in Catholic and Protestant churches alike were answered and Mr. Fisk lives to continue the good deeds which had endeared him to the populace.

In recognition of his self-sacrificing labors on behalf of Plainfield, its institutions and individual citizens, leading men have spontaneously resolved to pay him tribute. In his honor, "a formal subscription dinner"—so the notice reads—will be given on Wednesday night, June 27. Former Mayor Gilbert will be the toastmaster and other leading men will be the speakers.

Such an occasion should be marked by the presence of every local business man and every commuter. Consequently if the report be true that the committee intends to place the subscriptions at ten dollars, it has made a serious mistake and one that it should rectify. A "popular" subscription dinner would be better than a "formal" one. Ten dollars a plate will keep away many citizens. A "dollar dinner," as it is commonly called, on the other hand, would make the occasion an affair of the proper magnitude; one that would be remembered for years to come. It is not too much to say that every man in the city would welcome an opportunity to be present. By all means, lower the subscription rate and thus make the occasion a memorable one.

MAYOR SMALLEY.

Those who have the best interest of North Plainfield at heart express much regret over the position taken by Mayor Newton B. Smalley on the question of consolidation of city and borough. From his record one would naturally expect to find the fighting mayor in the front rank of advocates of the scheme, especially when it is recalled what valiant service he rendered in the lost battle for annexation four years ago.

The mayor is quoted as saying that he does not look with favor on the present movement. His opposition is based on his contention that North Plainfield should first become an integral part of Union county. But Mr. Smalley must know that another attempt to have North Plainfield separated from Somerset county at this time would meet with defeat. The ultimate object of annexation was consolidation. If annexation cannot be had then it will be conceded that the next best thing is consolidation alone. Lawyers say that there are no constitutional or statutory bars to such an union and the wise-thinking people of North Plainfield, we feel safe in saying, will give it their endorsement.

This paper has frequently commented on the admirable administration Mr. Smalley has given as chief executive of the borough and it believes it voices the sentiment of the majority of his constituents in regretting the mayor's new stand.

CHURCHES OBSERVE CHILDREN'S DAY

THREE PRESBYTERIAN CONGREGATIONS HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES.

Children's Day exercises were held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and Warren and Hope chapels yesterday.

Crescent Avenue Church.

Special Children's Day exercises were held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. At the regular service, the members of the school met and sang a number of appropriate songs and took part in Scripture and responsive readings and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, preached a special sermon for children which was very helpful and interesting.

At the close of the service the Sunday-school session was held in the chapel. The feature was the talk given by Superintendent H. J. Cochran on China, and at the same time he exhibited a number of Chinese curios and other things he collected while in China in 1900. Among the things shown were swords, women's shoes, a robe which belonged to the royal family and numerous other things. The children also sang special hymns and the primary department, under the direction of the superintendent, W. D. Murray, had its weekly birthday exercises, that is the children whose birthdays occur during the week are supposed to contribute as many pennies as they are years old. This is a custom established some time ago and tends to instil the habit of regular giving.

Warren Chapel.

Children's Day exercises were held in Warren chapel yesterday afternoon. Despite the threatening weather, there was a good-sized attendance. The platform was decorated with roses.

The programme included songs by the infant department; trio, "He Is My Father," by Grace and Elsie Van Denburgh and Anna Reynolds; duet by Edith and Ida Wheeler; solo, "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken," Gilchrist," by Miss Nora Schenck.

The address of the occasion was made by the new superintendent of the Sunday-school, E. E. Parvin. He spoke of the Sunday-school as a mine, and said it must be worked to get its riches out. He called the children nuggets.

F. H. Andrews, the former superintendent, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, also spoke. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of Crescent Avenue church, spoke the benediction.

Hope Chapel.

Exercises appropriate to Children's Day were held by the members of Hope chapel Sunday school yesterday afternoon. The programme was prepared by Assistant Superintendent I. W. Travell and was given in charge of Superintendent H. C. Squires. Recitations and choruses were given by children from the various departments and an address was made by Rev. John C. Bliss, of New York, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Members of the Crescent Avenue church choir sank two selections. The platform of the chapel was pretily decorated.

ADVERTISEMENT VEXES JEWS.

Threaten to Boycott a Telephone Company Unless It Is Withdrawn.

Trenton, June 18.—Three hundred Jewish patrons of the Bell Telephone Company met here yesterday and passed resolutions calling on the company to discontinue the advertisement in their directory of a Summer resodt at Delaware Water Gap, which reads:

"Free from Hebrews and Tuberculosis Patients."

The Jews of Trenton are large patrons of the Bell telephone, and they threaten to put the company on the "unfair" list and go over to the rival telephone company if the objectionable advertisement is not instantly "blacked out" in the prehent issue of telephone directories and refused for insertion in every other issue of the directory. If the offending hotel advertisement appears in any form, even in a form not objectionable to the Hebrews, many of them say they will refuse to keep Bell telephones in the places.

Bernard Cohen, one of the leading merchants of the city, said in addressing the meeting that the Jews proed themselves among the best commercial men in the United States, and had added much to the wealth of the country, and that to link them with a scourage such as tuberculosis and say any place was free from both was highly insulting, and showed that the telephone directory men did not have the best kind of commercial sense when they accepted such an advertisement to lay before thousands of people.

ASKS JUST $551,583.10 FOR ELIZABETH'S EXPENSES

Mayor Berry Figures This Much Will Be Needed to Run the City.

Elizabeth, June 18.—Mayor Samuel J. Berry Friday night submitted to council his estimate of the sums needed for the various appropriations of the city for the fiscal years beginning July 1, 1906. The total amount needed this year is $551,583.10. The budget this year calls for $6,244.95 more for schools; $2,500 more for street lighting; $500 more for public buildings; $420 more for salaries; $1,000 less for District Court, because of the establishment of the District Court in Plainfield, and $2,140 less for the interest account.

The budget as prepared by Mayor Berry and was referred to the Finance Committee of council. It includes for the support of English public schools $162,660; for fire and hydrants, $62,500; for the police, $71,000.

This total is tentative and likely to be changed to the extent of several thousand dollars in view of the fact that there is a sentiment in the City Council in favor of slightly increasing the pay of the members of the police and fire departments. As estimated by Mayor Berry the increase in this year's appropriations over those of last year, for the same purposes, is only $6,000, which is the increase in the appropriations for public schools.

Tothe total will subsequently be added the appropriations for county tax, for sinking fund and for the State school tax, less the allotment to be made by the State to this city. This will in all probability bring the final total up to about $700,000, or something like $10,000 or $12,000 more than the total of last year.

Peter Winn, of the East End, entered Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday to undergo an operation. He will probably be at the institution a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Beers Foster, of New Haven, Conn., who have been visiting Mrs. Foster's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, will return home this week.

Society notes at Lenox, Mass., announce that Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Stockton, of this place, have been spending several days at the Hotel Aspinwall. They are driving through the Berkshires.

Rev. Dr. Garret Beekman, of Boston, who has been confined to the home of his niece, Mrs. Lewis Ely, of Somerset place, for the past three month by serious illness, was removed to his home yesterday. Grave fears are entertained for him.

Wings and Flies

By Tom Muir.

Miss Eugenie Bessever, the leading woman of the "How Hearts Are Broken" company, has become a permanent resident of Plainfield, having taken the residence at 65 Woodbine avenue. Her work as an emotional actress has won the highest praise from critics and is full of the temperament and tact that is so much desired. In addition to her stage accomplishments, Miss Bessever is one of the most expert, if not the most expert, fencer in the country. She has given instruction in the art to the Havemeyers, the Goulds, Pierreponts, Rhinelanders and other members of distinguished New York families. Miss Bessever will go to Mt. Clemens, Mich., to prepare for her work during the coming season and will return late in the summer. With Miss Bessever at the present time is Miss Lillian Rosewood, also of the "How Hearts Are Broken" company, who is now but fourteen years of age and has been on the stage since she was six years old, first appearing with Robert Hilliard in "The Littlest Girl." She is a young actress of no mean ability and give promise of becoming a theatrical star of the first magnitude. She will remain here for several days and then proceed to Detroit to join her company.

Peter Winn, electrician for George Primrose's minstrel company and a resident of this city, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday to undergo an operation. It is thought that he will be out in time to attend the last of the rehearsals at the New Plainfield theatre.

DR. SLICER SPEAKS ON CLIMATE OF THE MIND

UNITARIAN DIVINE MAKES ADDRESS AT OPEN AIR MEETING.

Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, pastor of All Souls' church, New York, made an admirable address Saturday afternoon at an open air meeting held at Interhaven Park, at the end of the Somerset street trolley. He spoke on the subjects, "The Climate of the Mind" and "The difference between the worth of a motive and the strength of a motive." He emphasized his contention that the real business of life, is the growth of a human soul. Dr. Slicer said he preferred to make the meeting entirely informal, which gave those present an opportunity to close acquaintance with so able an exponent of the best modern thought.

Being a personal friends of many years' standing and knowing Miss Finnigans' practical work in the treatment and cure of the sick at Atlantic City, he spoke most intelligently of her methods and commented on the character and beauty of the quiet, restful place, where the weary may gather up the frayed ends of their nerves and renew their strength that each may again take hold in God's good world.

Those who braved the elements and made their way up to the camp at Interhaven Park were well rewarded for their walk up the mountainside. It is the intention at the camp commencing with next Sunday and every Sunday thereafter, until further notice, to have addresses by able and helpful speakers.

NEW AUTO LAW IS TO BE ENFORCED

MORE LICENSING AGENCIES SELECTED TO ACCOMMODATE JERSEY MOTOSISTS

The new Frelinghuysen automobile law will go into effect next July 1, and the State Automobile Department created under the act, with Assistant Secretary of State J. B. R. Smith Chief Commissioner, is fully prepared to meet the requirements of the law and enforce its provisions, no matter how drastic they may be. It is believed the autoists of the State, who will benefit particularly by the good roads of the Commonwealth, will abide by the new regulations.

Of the 17,000 automobilists registered in this State 3,000 have secured licenses and about an equal number of drivers have been licensed under the new law. From now on there will be a rush for registration, and in order to accommodate as many as possible of the tardy autoists, Commissioner Smith has decided to open a number of sub-stations to issue licenses in addition to those authorized some time ago.

The regular sub-stations are at Jersey City, Newark, Phillipsburg and Camden. The additional agencies are Charles Crisman, Branchville; Frank Reigerman, Seabright; Augustus R. White, Freehold; C. R. Zachariah and F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield; William Evans, Bridgeton; S. S. Smith, Rahway; William H. Miners, Edgewater; John B. Brooks, Hackensack.

The State House is always open during regular office hours for transacting automobile business. Commissioner Smith has given out the following statement:

"It is the purpose of his department to make automobilists obey the law, and we do not anticipate any trouble. I believe that the great majority of the users of motor vehicles are law-abiding citizens, and we will work along these lines. It is the intention to make the new law respected by everybody alike. Pedestrians have rights on the highway; horses have rights as well as autoists. So far the Department of Motor Vehicles Registration has turned into the State treasury over $11,000 collected for registration fees for the use of the State Road Commissioner in repairng roads."

BUILDING FRAUD, NEW BRAND.

Lather Accused of Hiding Laths in Walls and Charging for Them.

Trenton, N. J., July 18.—A new trick in the building trade was disclosed before Judge Rees when Wm. H. Brown was held for the Grand Jury in $300 bonds to answer to the charge of fraud in putting bundles of laths between ceilings and floors, and then charging the contractor for the laths thus put out of sight.

Contractor Denagan has been wondering for many weeks where all the laths went on a number of houses he was building, and the workmen told him that he had miscalculated the number used. Donagan knew better, and becoming suspicious of the looks of a ceiling, tore a hole in it and found laths in bundles placed between the floor studding and the ceiling. Hhe went over the houses and has rescued many thousands of laths.

DR. DONALD MACKAY ON COMMERCIALISM

NEW YORK PASTOR PREACHES ON 'COMMERCIALISM."

The Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay, of New York, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the fifty members of the graduating class of Rutgers College in the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, last night. Dr. Mackay's subject was, "Does It Pay?" and he took as his text "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and forfeit his life?" He said:

"I venture to say that there is no message so timely or so practical to present day needs as just that question. We are living in an age which is steeped in the commercial spirit. Commercialism has invaded every sphere of human activity.

"The other evening I counted over in my mind no fewer than thirteen men who within recent years had died under fifty-two years of age, literally from the pressure of overwork. There were all successful men, who had amassed in their time something more than a comfortable fortune. They were not licentious, nor drunkards, and not all of them were irreligious men. But in gaining their little world they had simply toiled and struggled for themselves, denied themselves hours of relaxation and rest. Late and soon they were at the daily grind of getting without spending and physically depleted, they died not only in the prime of manhood, but in the summit of success, when, humanly speaking, there was everything to live for. They had gained a world and had forfeited the only life which could enjoy it."

Dr. Mackay then touched on the intellectual life and its loss. Continuing, he said:

"But, again, there is the moral side of life, which, in these latter days especially, has been ruthlessly sacrificed on the altar of material success. This last year in American public life will be memorable in our history as a year of reappreciated ideals. It has been, in truth, the year of a great ethical revival, and men who not so long ago sneered at such things have been compelled to acknowledge the sovereign authority of conscience asserted by the voice of the common people. It is not too much to say that the revelations of these past months, following one after another in almost every branch of commercial and industrial enterprise, shocking as they have been to the moral sense of the community, have nevertheless cleansed the moral atmosphere so that the young man of today enters upon his public career in a more wholesome environment than at any time in the last twenty-five years.

"But—and this is the pity of it all—the record of these months, involving the downfall of so many men high up in public estimation, have revealed, as with flaming fingers, how possible it is in these days to secure reputation and wealth and influence at the expense of integrity and honor. The enthronement of success has been purchased through the degradation of conscience. In the fierce struggle for wealth men have deliberately trampled their principles, and in gaining a world they have forfeited their morals ideals. Well, does it pay? Were there no higher sanctions that the eternal standards of morality to guide us, surely it is better to be true than be false; better to be pure than to be licentious; better to be brave than cowardly. What doth it profit a man if he gain a whole world and lose his moral life?"

AMERICAN HEIRESSES ARE VERY UNFORTUNATE

"Several ladies whose names have been so unhappily mentioned in connection with the Castellane scandal have gone into temporary seclusion," says the London World, which, taking that as a text, proceeds to moralize thus: "It is curious how many American women have been unhappy in their matrimonial experiences with European noblemen. Especially is this the case in France. The conjugal misadventure of Comtesse Boni de Castellane, nee Anna Gould, puts one in mind of the many more or less unhappy marriages recently made by wealthy American girls with French noblemen. There is the much-to-be commiserated Duchess de Valancay, who, as Miss Helen Morton, was a gne type of the accomplished American heiress and an ornament to any society. Brought up in the most refined manner, and with literary attainments, she married the dissolute Duc de Valancay, fascinated by the glamour of his title. She suffered for several years from the indignities and cruelty of her husband, and though she saved her husband's family from absolute ruin and his family property from the brokers by paying one hundred thousand pounds, she afterward discovered that not only the whole of her dowery had become forfeited to the sordid family of her husband, but also she had no right to bear the soiled, mud-be-spattered title of Duchess de Valancay. There, too, is the miserable example of Bettie Curtis, who became the Marchioness de Talleyrand-Perigord, of Mrs. Oliver Belmont's unfortunate sister, the late Vicomtesse Fontilliat, who on her deathbed must have regretted that she had ever changed her name from the plain Mimi Smith.

"Further afield than France, there is the example of Eva Julia Bryant Mackay, who married the Prince Colonna Stigliano, a scapegrace if ever there was one. Quite recently this lady, when she desired to marry her daughter, found herself obliged to buy her husband's consent to the marriage. What a pleasure, too, it must have been to the family of the St. Louis girl who married the Spanish adventurer, Count Peneloza, to hear, after her divorce, that the count had been arrested on a charge of forgery. There are many other family instances known which show, that, as a rule, the marriages of cultured and well-bred American women of wealth with continental noblemen do not turn out successfully. It is to be noted that these French, Italian, Russian and Spanish noblemen do not marry beautiful Americans without money, nor American actresses, however much they might be inclined to associate themselves with dancers and singers. No; it is to the English nobility that the penniless Anna Robinsons and the Frances Donnellys have to go to make marriages of love. The French and other continental noblemen want money and nothing else, and but for the money which comes to them in the shape of dowries they would seldom, if ever, go to America for their wives."

So much for this English view of the question. Not long since Baron Max von Schweidler-Schwartzenburg, of Germany, who was in Cleveland endeavoring to secure from his wealthy father-in-law an increased allowance unburdened his soul in the course of an interview and voiced the European view of the mating of titles with money. A title, he declared, has an actual market value. In his opinion, this value should be arranged to a sliding scale of prices ranging from a prince or duke to a baronet or knight. "Of all European titles," claims Baron Max, "those of Germany and Spain are the oldest. Newness of titles in England and France interferes with their value. When a nobleman who, as I do, enjoys privileges at court and in the salons of Europe, marries a woman without title he loses social caste. He should be recompensed for this loss. Moreover, an untitled woman marrying into a titled family should expect to pay for it." That quite a number of wealthy American women agree with the baron is evidenced by even a partial list of the many who have wedded titles of recent years. Some of these, with the amounts of their dower and the names of their artistocratic husbands are: May Goelet, dower $20,000,000, husband, Duffe of Roxburghe; Anna Gould, $15,000,000, count de Castellane; Consuelo Vanderbilt, $10,000,000 Duke of Marlborough; Mary Leiter, $5,000,000, Lord Curzon; Daisy Leiter, $5,000,000, Earl of Suffolk; Alice Thaw, $1,000,000, Lord Yarmouth; Cornelia Martin, $2,000,000, Earl Craven; Helena Zimmerman, $2,000,000, Duke of Manchester; Virginia Bonynge, $4,300,000, Viscount Dewhurst; Miss Brewster, $1,000,000, Count Frankenstein; Maude Burke, $2,000,000, Sir Bache Cunard; Lita Garner, $4,000,000, Marquis de Breteuil; Miss Gillender, $5,000,000, Marquis di San Marzona; Miss Caldwell, $2,000,000, Baron von Zedwitz; Miss Forbes, $1,000,000, Duke Choiseul-Prasdin; Mathilde Davis, $3,000,000, Duke Santa Monfeltrie; Frances Lawrence, $1,000,000, Lord Vernon; Cornelia Roosevelt, $1,500,000, Baron G. Seydlitz; Mrs. Isaac Singer, $2,000,000, Prince de Seey-Montbeliard; Sarah P. Stokes, $5,000,000, Baron Halkett; Mrs. Frederick Stevens, $7,000,000, Duke di Dino; Miss Wheeler, $1,000,000, Count Pappenheim; Miss Sperry, $1,000,000, Prince Poniatowski; Miss Yznaga, $1,000,000, Lord Lister Kaye; Miss Hazard, $1,000,000, Prince Anersperg; Miss Gallatin, $1,000,000, Count de Rohan-Chabot; Miss Spencer, $1,000,000, Prince Vicovaro; Miss Berwind, $1,000,000, Baron Bocklinson; Miss Satterfield, $1,000,000, Count von Larisch, etc.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Azienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Azienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." THE MAN AT THE DESK.

The Man at the Desk has a patient look
As he wrotes and writes in his open book,
And he bends his back to the task before
Like a galley-slave to his hand-rubbed oar.
Columns of figures he marshals by,
Piled up decimals mountains high
Which seem to sing to his well-ruled brain
His long, monotonous life-refrain:

"Debt, credit, voucher, pay,—
Discount, balance, day by day;
Carried forward, interest, duns,—
So the monotonous river runs."

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has followed the rule of the copy book;—
"Early to bed and early to rise,"
Yet he's neither healthy, wealthy, nor wise.
Honest, industrious, sober, chained
To his office cell, he has long remained
Dead of ambition, busy of pen,
Adding up figures for other men.

"Debt credit, remit, amount,
Carried forward, close account;
Daybooks, draftbooks, interest, duns—
So the monotonous river runs."

The Man at the Desk with the patient look
Has written his life in the open book,
Has charged up Youth with a small amount,
And crossed off Love as a closed account.
Yet bright are the tears in his faded eye
As the column of figures marches by,
Black of ink and with mourning brave,
Like a last parade to a yawning grave.

"Debt, credit," the bugles play,
"Discount, balance, voucher, pay,
Carried forward, interest, duns,—
So the monotonous river runs."
—Wallace Irwin in Success Magazine.

HOW CANDY WAS DISCOVERED.

Scheele in 1783 laid the foundations for the manufacture of cyanide of potassium. With prussiate of potash for its base, dried animal matter of any and all kinds was dumped into the superheated vessels containing the potash, together with iron fillings and borings. A stonelike black mass resulted from the cooling, and other processes brought the final lemon colored crystals which resulted from evaporations of the solutions. From these srystals prussic acid was evolved, of which a 2 per cent solution is the pharmaceutical preparation, yet so powerful that four drops will kill a large dog. A chemist, putting a cyanide solution in a gold lined dish in 1844, discovered that the gold was dissolved in the liquid. This was the beginning of the gold plating process by the use of cyanide and the further involvement of the poison came about the electroplating, in photography and in treating refractory gold-ores.—Technical World.

The Man in the Street.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

At last the vexatious work was finished, and he was free again. At the end of the final day's work he left the office of Fouts in Wall street, and walked up Broadway. He went slowly, enjoying the freedom from care. It was the afternoon of a day when the first summer heat had been felt, and as he loitered before shop windows or walked slowly through that street where all move quickly and most very hurriedly, a welcome little breeze came up from the bay to fan him and encourage his spirit of leisure.

At Union square, when he would have taken a car to go the remainder of the distance, he saw Shepler, accompanied by Mrs. Van Geist and Miss Milbrey, alight from a victoria and enter a jeweler's.

He would have passed on, but Miss Milbrey had seen him and stood waiting in the doorway, while Shepler and Mrs. Van Geist went on into the store.

"Mr. Bines—I'm so glad!"

She stood, flushed with pleasure, radiant in stuff of filmy pink, with little flecks at her throat and waist of the first tender green of new leaves. She was unaffectedly delighted to see him.

"You are Miss Spring?" he said when she had given him her hand—"and you've come into all your mother had that was worth inheriting, haven't you?"

"Mr. Bines, shall we not see you now? I wanted so much to talk with you when I heard everything. Would it be impertinent to say I sympathized with you?"

He looked over her shoulder to where Shepler and Mrs. Van Geist were inspecting a tray of jewels.

"Of course not impertinent—very kind—only I'm really not in need of any sympathy at all. You won't understand it; but we don't care so much for money in the west—for the loss of it—not so much as you New Yorkers would. Besides, we can always make a plenty more."

The situation was, emphatically, not as he had so often dreamed it when she should marvel, perhaps regretfully, over his superiority to her husband as a money-maker. His only relief was to belittle the importance of his loss.

"Of course, we've lost everything, almost—but I've not been a bit downcast about it. There's more where it came from, and no end of fun going after it. I'm looking forward to the adventures, I can tell you. And every one will be glad to see me there; they won't think the less of me, I assure you, because I've made a fluke here!"

"Surely, Mr. Bines, no one here could think less of you. Indeed, I think more of you. I think it's fine and big to go back with such courage. Do you know, I wish I were a man—I'd show them!"

"Really, Miss Milbrey—"

He looked over her shoulder again, and saw that Shepler was waiting for her.

"I think your friends are impatient."

"They can wait. Mr. Bines, I wonder if you have quite a correct idea of all New York people."

"Probably not; I've met so few, you know."

"Well, of course—but of those you've met?"

"You can't know what my ideas are."

"I wish we might have talked more—I'm sure—when are you leaving?"

"I shall leave to-morrow."

"And we're leaving for the country ourselves. Papa and mamma go to-morrow—and, Mr. Bines, I should have liked another talk with you—I wish we were dining at the Oldakers' again."

He observed Shepler strolling toward them.

"I shall be staying with Aunt Cornelia a few days after to-morrow."

Shepler came up.

"And I shall be leaving to-morrow, Miss Milbrey."

"Ah, Bines, glad to see you!"

The accepted lover looked Miss Milbrey over with rather a complacent air—with the unruffled confidence of assured possession. Percival fancied there was a look almost of regret in the girl's eyes.

"I'm afraid," said Shepler, "your aunt doesn't want to be kept waiting. And she's already in a fever for fear you won't prefer the necklace she insists you ought to prefer."

"Tell Aunt Cornelia, please, that I shall be along in just a moment."

"She's quite impatient, you know," urged Shepler.

Percival extended his hand.

"Good-by, Miss Milbrey. Don't let me detain you. Sorry I shall not see you again."

She gave him her hand uncertainly, as if she had still something to say, but could find no words for it.

"Good-by, Mr. Bines."

"Good-by, young man," Shepler shook hands with him cordially, "and the best of luck to you out there. I shall hope to hear good reports from you. And mind, you're to look us up when you're in town again. We shall always be glad to see you. Good-by!"

He led the girl back to the case where the largest diamonds reposed chastely on their couches of royal velvet.

Percival smiled as he resumed his walk—smiled with all that bitter cynicism which only youth may feel to its full poignance. Yet, heartless as she was, he recalled that while she talked to him he had imprinted an imaginary kiss deliberately upon her full scarlet lips. And now, too, he was forced to confess that, in spite of his very certain knowledge about her, he would actually prefer to have communicated it through the recognized physical media. He laughed again, more cheerfully.

"The sprping has gotten a stranglehold on my judgment," he said to himself.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

SOME PHENOMENA PECULIAR TO SPRING.

He awoke early next morning, refreshed and intensely alive. With the work done he became conscious of a feeling of disassociation from the surroundings in which he had so long been at home. He was glad the business was off his mind. He would now go the pleasant journey and think on the way.

His trunks were ready for the car; and before he went downstairs his handbag was packed, and the preparations for the start completed.

When, after his breakfast, he read the telegram announcing that the car had been delayed 24 hours in Chicago, he was bored by the thought that he must pass another day in New York. He was eager now to be off, and the time would hang heavily.

He tried to recall some forgotten detail of the business that might serve to occupy him. But the finishing had been thorough.

He ran over in his mind the friends with whom he could spend the time agreeably. He could recall no one he cared to see. He had no longer an interest in the town or its people.

He went aimlessly out on to Broadway in the full flood of a spring morning, breathing the fresh air hungrily. It turned his thought to places out of the grime and clamor of the city; to woods and fields where he might rest and feel the stimulus of his new plans. He felt aloof and sufficient unto himself.

He swung on to an open car bound north, and watched without interest the early quick-moving workers thronging south on the street, and crowding the cars that passed him. At Forty-second street, he changed to a Boulevard car that took him to the Fort Lee ferry at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street.

JERSEY CITY DEFEATED BY HOBOKEN TEAM

DEEGAN IN SUPERB FORM HUMBLES THE SKEETERS, SCORE BEING 4 TO 1.

The Jersey City aggregation went down to defeat before the Hobokens at St. George's Cricket Grounds, yesterday, the score being 4 to 1. The Hobokens won the contest by bunching their hits in the fourth inning—the only round in which they scored. The Eastern Leaguers were powerless before the deceptive curves of "Willie" Deegan, who allowed but five scattering hits. The score:

DIAMOND DUST.

For the benefit of local fans is printed below the score in detail of the Hoboken-Paterson game taken from the Paterson Press.

The Paterson Hudson River leagues lost their first game of the season on the Ryle park grounds yesterday afternoon, when they were defeated by the Hoboken club by a score of 6 to 5.

The Patersons scored in the first inning and once more in the seventh and three in the last inning. Heavenor and Phalon got at Smith and had him up in the air so far that he lost his head, and the home men pounded out three runs and came within an ace of winning out in the last chapter. The visitors played good ball from start to finish. The home team had five errors and all were costly. Gerber was very wild and practically handed the visitors the game. The score:

By its victory over the Paterson Hudson River League team Thursday the Hobokens demonstrated that they are fully able to take care of any team in that league. The Paterson fans went almost wild over the showing of Phil. Smith and before he left town Manager Dick Cogan chucked an offer at him, but without avail. Phil. said afterward "that he wasn't going to play in any league without shower baths." Phil. is about right. About the worst thing he could do would be to start in with a minor league team. He would be worked to death and the chances are that within a few years his arm would be all gone. The best thing for Phil. to settle on is to play independent ball for at least two seasons and then he is bound to have an abundance of major league propositions to consider, that is, of course, if he keeps on putting up the same game he is now playing. Smith led at the bat in Paterson and cracked out three timely hits. In the absence of Jimmy Bertwhistle, George Mallen filled in in the outfield.

Young Mahaffey, who was one of the stars of the High School, has joined the Dunellens.

Captain Hawk, of the Lafayette College team, is a bird of a player they say. Manager Daab has opened negotiations with him and he may be on the grounds this afternoon.

"Doc" Anderson, the organizer of the Union County Amateur League, seems to think it would be a good idea to pit the winners of the league against the champion Plainfields at the close of the season.

"Johnny" McGraw please read this:

Clubs desiring second basemen should not overlook the remarkable game put up by Professor Denton, of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, Thursday, between the faculty team and the graduates, the former winning for the first time in many years, the score being 11 to 9. The professor is 65 years old, yet he cavorted around second bag like a two-year-old, and squeezed onto everything that came in sight. During the game the "Prof." had eight put outs and three assists without an error, while he wielded the willow in the same vicious manner that has made Lajoie famous throughout the world of fandom. The "Prof." was cheered again and again as he poked out the bingos and smothered seething grounders and liners and was accorded the long hand by the applauding angels in the bleachers who watched the contest. Rotters declared that he had "Jim" O'Rourke and Pop Anson skun ten miles easily.

Managers Nicolas and Conklin have been in consultation and the result is the Westfield team will play the West Ends at Somerville Fourth of July afternoon. This is probably the first step toward a series of games in which Plainfield will figure.

Jimmy Bertwhistle started playing with Bridgeport on Tuesday last, having signed with that team for $175 per month. It is understood that Bertwhistle will try to effect an arrangement with Manager O'Rourke whereby he can play Saturdays and Sundays with Manager Daab. Newark being short of catchers, has called on Jack O'Neil to help out and that player will start backstop work with Newark tomorrow.

The Philadelphia Quaker Giants, with the famous Billy Monroe playing third base, will appear on Crescent Oval next Saturday afternoon. The Quakers are playing fast ball and will be one of the best attractions of the year.

PLAY GOLF DESPITE THE RAINY WEATHER

COMPETITIONS FOR TWO CUPS AT PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB.

While the rainy weather on Saturday prevented many sports, including the baseball game between Plainfield and Westfield, it did not interfere with golf play at the Plainfield Country Club. Rain never does prevent the play of golf for there are always enthusiasts willing to brave any storm in following the popular game. The course was pretty well soaked on Saturday, but a number of good scores were made notwithstanding.

In the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, Howard W. Beebe won first honors with a net score of 73, getting three points. There was a tie for the remaining three points among four contestants and each received ¾ point each. The best scores posted are as follows:

Howard W. Beebe, 85, 12—73; Charles A. Stover, 94, 10—84; E. T. Wilson, 101, 17—84; L. L. Tweedy, 105, 21—84; Dudley H. Barrows, 84, 0—84.

There was also the play for the June cup, and Howard Beebe won a leg on this, being 2 up on bogie with a score of 85, 12—73. In the play for the semi-scratch cup, Dudley H. Barrows won a leg with a score of 84. The scores returned are as follows:

Dudley H. Barrows, 84; Howard W. Beebe, 85; C. B. Morgan, 85; Charles A. Stover, 94.

In addition to the play on the course a number of the members and their friends enjoyed the social features in the clubhouse during the afternoon and evening and while it was dreary enough without, all had a good time within.

NEW BIG INDUSTRY COMING TO ELIZABETH.

Large Jersey City Greenhouse Building Plant May Be Moved There.

Elizabeth, June 18.—One of the most important matters to come before Elizabeth's Board of Aldermen in several years and which will have a material effect on the growth of the city if the request of the petitioners is granted was a communication received by the aldermen last night from Hutchings & Co., Jersey City, which wants to remove its business to Elizabeth. The company is engaged in the construction of greenhouses on an extensive scale and was established in 1884. It has now two plants on West Side avenue, and Arlington avenue, Jersey City, erected in 1880, but has not the necessary room there and wants to erect a big plant in the northeastern section of Elizabeth.

In its petition to the aldermen the company states that its capital is $200,000, with a cash surplus of $90,000. It has acquired a large tract of unimproved land in Elizabeth and asks that parts of certain streets be vacated so that it can put up its industry, which will consist of a storehouse 200x60 feet, a wood working plant two stories high, 205x67 feet, and an iron construction shop two stories high, 160x100 feet; a foundry, 200x70 feet, and other buildings, 200x70 feet, including a pattern shop and office building—all to cost many thousand dollars. The company will employ more than 200 men, all skilled mechanics, molders, machinists, carpenters and glaziers. Its weekly pay roll will be more than $4,000. The president of the company is E. W. Hutchins, while Chas. Armitage is secretary and treasurer. The streets it wants vacated are parts of Louisa, Meadow, North avenue, Henry, Spring, Magnolia avenue and Meadow lane. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets and Parks, with instructions to report in July.

It was the general consensus of opinion among the aldermen that the coming of this industry to Elizabeth would cause quite a boom to land values in that heretofore undeveloped section of Elizabeth. Most of the employees of the rm are married and have families and as they will have to live in this city to be near their work their advent will mean a substantial addition to the city's population.

Abe J. David, attorney for the company, briefly addressed the aldermen Friday night on the importance of the enterprise to the city and requested speedy action by the board in the matter. There is hardly any doubt of the favorable report on the subject at the aldermen's next meeting.

CHARGES WATER HOLD-UP

E. M. French Says Company Is Working Against Highland Park.

DENIAL BY COMPANY

Asks Only What Has Been Customary, and Mr. French Is First One To Refue Guarantee.

Through a hitch in the arrangements between the Water Company and Elston M. French, owner of Highland Park, the water service designed for the Park tract has been held up. There is a deadlock, according to Mr. French, and he says it may be necessary to build a private water works to give the Park service. He states that he has already begun to figure on that line.

Mr. French declares the company is trying to work a hold-up. It has demanded a guarantee of ten cents a foot for every foot of pipe laid on the property, for five years, he says, before it will consent to lay in mains. Fifteen thousand feet of pipe are required, making the total amount for which the promoter is to be held responsible $7,500. Moreover, according to Mr. French, the company demands that the bond be furnished by a surety company, which would require him to put up collateral and keep it tied up until the bond had expired.

"It is an outrage,' said Mr. French this morning. "They are trying to work a hold-up and nothing else."

Steps have been taken, Mr. French said, for the erection of a private water supply system. C. P. Sebring is figuring on the contract for sinking wells and erecting a pumping station.

"It is customary in all such cases to ask for a guarantee of ten cents a running foot on unimproved property," said a water company representative when asked about the case. "Other promoters give it and there is no reason why Mr. French should not. The guarantee does not cover the money we sink in the ground in such cases, and we take the risk of the property improvement in calculating on a return investment.

"William Cooper, of Siegel-Cooper Co., president of the Central Land and Improvement Company, which is building up property on Evergreen, Martine and Prospect avenues, guaranteed the water company for 5,000 feet of pipe, without demur. He said the guarantee was very reasonable and was quite willing to pay it. We are not asking Mr. French any more than we ask other people; the guarantee has always been customary, and Mr. French is the first man who has refused to pay it. We laid a long line of pipe on Evergreen avenue for Mr. French, on his assurance that he would build a number of houses and he only built one.

"It is not true that he has asked for 15,000 feet. He has asked for 2,500."

PRICE OF BEEF JUMPS A PENNY A POUND.

Union Beef Co. Representative Says His Concern is Not Effected.

Local wholesale meat dealers received advices yesterday of an increase in the price of beef, lamb and sheep. The increase in the whole price amounts to about one cent a pound on the whole steer and the increase on lamb and sheep is 2 cents a pound. This information was obtained today from a representative of the Plainfield Beef Company, who stated that word was received yesterday of the advance in the prices.

Several retail butchers were complaining today over the increase and said that they could not tell what the result would be when it is considered that the price of ice is also higher than usual.

When R. I. Tolles, of the Union Beef Company, was interviewed, he stated that there has been no increase in the price of beef. Explaining the matter he said: "I cannot understand where such a rumor started. The supply of cattle is abundant at present. Yesterday 33,000 heads of cattle were received at Chicago, which is considerable higher than the average run for a Monday. As long as this continues there is no necessity for increasing the price of beef. It is customary at this season of the year to raise the price on sheep and lambs, but this is no higher than the usual price for the summer months."

Flip Hackman Fined.

William Bird, a young hackman employed by the Cathers stable, Somerset street, was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning for breaking the hack ordinance by driving too close to the curb at the North Avenue station. He bore himself flippantly and the magistrate dropped a $3 fine on him. He paid.

COUNTY TAX BOARD MEETS HERE FRIDAY

LOCAL ASSESSORS TO RECEIVE INSTRUCTIONS AS TO THEIR DUTIES.

The Union County Board of Tax Commissioners will convene in the Common Council rooms on North avenue, Friday morning, for the purpose of meeting the local Board of Assessors and giving it the proper instructions in its work of assessing, which means that personal and real estate must be assessed at true value. The meeting will be held at 10 o'clock.

With one exception the county board has talked to all of the assessors in the county, but how that one escaped no one seems to know. According to the announced intention of the board to see that the law is strictly observed, if the one assessoh who escaped is not properly enlightened he may meet with some surprises.

The work generally throughout the county seems to be progressing satisfactorily, although some of the assessors are plodding along at their same old gait. Those who have "sized up" the new commissioners at their true value foretell for these a time of sever tribulation when the day arrives for the making up of the books and the review of their work by the county board.

The assessor in one of the wards of Elizabeth is reported missing and it is understood that he is working somewhere in New York. Although the members of the board will not give any hint as to the conclusions they have arrived at it is generally admitted that the members are well satisfied with the progress of the work.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY TO B. FRANK WEEKS

PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY IN A FEW MINUTES FROM ATTACK OF APOPLEXY.

J. Frank Weeks, a resident of Grant avenue, was stricken with apoplexy at the grocery of James Clawson at West Second street and Madison avenue at 8:30 this morning, and died in a few minutes. He has been employed as bookkeeper at the store and when he first entered the place today complained of feeling ill. He was advised by Mr. Clawson to sit down for awhile and while resting suddenly pitched forward. He was seen to drop by the proprietor, who was the only other person in the place, and he summoned Dr. Davis by telephone. The physician was quickly at hand but death ensued before he arrived.

Mr. Weeks was about forty years old and was born in Massachusetts. He came to Plainfield from the West thirteen years ago and had since been making his home with his brother-in-law, Dr. F. S. Wells, of Grant avenue. For a long time he was employed in the local office of the U. S. Express Company but during the past four years has been with Mr. Clawson. A wife and one daughter, Miss Grace Weeks, a member of the sophomore class of the Plainfield High School, survive him. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

W. N. RUNYON TO STUMP STATE FOR "NEW IDEA."

Reported that Union County Reform Leader Will Speak in Various Cities.

It is practically certain that Judge William N. Runyon, president of the Union County Equal Taxation League, will speak in many parts of the State on behalf of the "new idea" early in the fall. An effort has been made to get the gifted young reform worker to stump New Jersey and from what can be learned it has been successful. The Colbyites declare that his appearance on the stump will attract hundreds of votes wherever he speaks and they have impressed this fact upon him.

The fact that he will stump the State does not mean that the judge will neglect his duties as head of the movement in Union county. His friends say that he will direct the campaign and will frequently be heard in the various voting districts. He will also have charge of the literary bureau of the Colbyites.

Electric Light Wires Stir up Things.

Electric light wires strung over a barn on West Third street in the rear of Hope chapel belonging to Louis Pollack got crossed this morning and some blue sparks sputtered around. An excited individual thought the structure was on fire and turned in an alarm from box 45. The firemen splashed through the mud to get there but there was nothing for them to do.

DRY SUNDAYS COMING

Bishop's Law Will Be Rigidly Enforced and Scotch Plains Will Be Dry.

RESIDENTS THANKFUL

Police And Township Officials Responsible For Lawlessness And Disorder Now Prevalent On Sundays.

When the Bishop's bill goes into effect July 4, the illegal sale of liquor will be stopped in the various townships and districts where the officials have been lax in the performance of their duties in failing to put a stop to selling. The new law is hailed as a God-send and is a cause of much rejoicing throughout Union county especially by the residents of Scotch Plains who have been forced to endure disgraceful orgies Sunday after Sunday.

The provisions of the new law require that all screens be dispensed with on Sunday as well as side-doors and rear rooms being closed at all times. Heretofore, and at the present time, it is said, there is more rum sold in Scotch Plains on a Sunday than in all the other days of the week being put together. The enforcement of the new law will be entirely up to the State officials and it is reported it will be enforced to the letter.

Scotch Plains it is alleged has been notorious for its Sunday brawls and fights which have went on without interruption for years. Respectable men and women have been insulted on the streets while waiting for trolley cars time and time again by the rowdies who congregated on the corners in maudlin conditions.

The new law will also blot out the Sunday trolley excursions from this city. Young men and married men have been in the habit of going to saloons at the place and remaining there all day and returning to Plainfield drunk.

PLAINFIELD COUNCIL NAMES NEW OFFICERS.

George B. Cratsley Nominated for Councilor of New Organization.

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., met last night and nominated officers to be elected on Monday night for the ensuing term of six months. These persons were placed in nomination: Councilor, George B. Cratsley; vice councilor, Dr. Rolland D. Tomlinson; junior past councilor, Winfield S. Angleman; financial secretary, W. W. Webb; treasurer, G. W. V. Moy; recording secretary, Ernest H. Craw; outside sentinel, Julius Williams; inside sentinel, Alfred H. Peck; warden, Samuel Cratsley; conductor, Charles Leland; trustee, eighteen months, Samuel Cratsley; representative New Jersey Funeral Benefit Association, W. S. Angleman.

After the nominations two candidates were initiated by the team from Somerset Council, No. 104, the work being performed in a highly satisfactory manner. Several propositions for membership were also received. In the good and welfare there were remarks by Past Councilors Latourette, Walter Walker and William Creveling.

Plainfield Man Usher.

Among the ushers at the wedding of Miss Margaret T. Gamage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Gamage, of Gloucester, Mass., to Harry Mortimer Specht, of New York, will be Harold L. Smalley, of this city. The wedding ceremony will take place June 30 at the home of the bride's parents, over 600 invitations having been sent out for the reception.

Tin View of the Ocean.

Henry Windham has had the canvas painting at the back of the summer garden at his Waldorf Hotel replaced by a tin one. The new scene, like the old one, is a marine view, but on a more elaborate scale. The waves and the rocks, punched outward with an embossed effect, look real enough to make the regulars on the chairs feel cool on the hottest day.

Street Improvement.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has made a decided improvement at Park avenue and Front street by removing the objectionable catch basin on the corner and installing a smaller and less sightly one on Front street, opposite the City National Band. The old basin was put in another part of the city.

Plainfielders Selected for Judges.

James R. Joy, associate editor of the Advocate; Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and Richard Richards, of Orange, brother of Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, have been selected as judges of the compositions for the Potter prize at Yale.

READY FOR THE COLBY MASS MEETING TONIGHT

CHAIRMAN RUNYON COMPLETES PLANS FOR THE REFORM GATHERING.

All the plans for the Colby mass meeting at the theatre tonight are complete. Final details were arranged between Chairman Runyon and the theatre management this morning.

Colby, Record and Fagan will surely be on hand, and Henry L. Hall, of Belvidere avenue, will preside. Judge Runyon said this morning that he would not speak, but the chairman may induce him to say a word or two to his fellow-townsmen.

It was announced this morning that the speakers would state the principles of reform as much for North Plainfielders as for the citizenry of this city. It is hoped that the borough electorate will be as largely represented at the meeting, proportionately, as that of the city.

THURLOW OPPOSED BY F. N. SAUER

JERSEY CITY CANDIDATE FOR HEALTH OFFICER OF THAT PLACE.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, of this city, was not elected to succeed Health Officer Henry Smellie at a meeting of the Board of Health of Jersey City, as was expected. The matter was laid over until Monday night, July 2, the next regular meeting of the body.

It is now known that the selection of Mr. Thurlow will not be made without opposition. Commissioners Delaney, Sprouls and Ziegener believe a Jersey City man should be chosen for the position and they favor Dr. Ferdinand N. Sauer, of Jersey City. Dr. Sauer is at present employed by the Board of Health as superintendent of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases.

While Mr. Thurlow's decision has not yet been made known and the Jersey City Board of Health has not elected him to the new position, the local board has been making preparations to fill his place here in case he leaves. The board has been in communication with the Boston Intitute of Technology for the purpose of securing a graduate of that institution if another man is needed.

FANWOOD CRUSADE AGAINST ADV. SIGNS

JUSTICE SCHEELEN BEGINS WAR ON OBJECTIONABLE CARDS.

The officials of Fanwood are conducting a crusade against the promiscuous posting of advertising signs throughout the borough. It has been undertaken by Recorder Chas. Sheelen and a large number of offenders have already been summoned before him. Six merchants from various parts of the county received instructions to tear down offending advertisements, last week, and last night four Plainfielders appeared before him. They were fined the costs of court and let go with the promise that they would have every sign in Fanwood tacked on trees and fences by their men torn down.

The ordinance under which the recorder is acting was passed by the borough council several years ago, but has never been enforced until now. As a result the local landscape has been dotted with all manner of glaring signs, generally extolling the virtues of Dr. Curem's pills or advising everyone to buy furniture on the "dollar - down-and-dollar-when-you-catch-me" plan. The recorder declares he will rest the eyes of residents by giving them an unobstructed view of trees and hedges and his crusade is already bearing fruit.

W. Starr Bullock's New Venture.

Former Couucilman William Starr Bullock, of this city, for several years Eastern business manager of the Mining and Scientific Press, of San Francisco, has resigned to establish a business for himself. He has opened offices at 25 Broad street, New York, and will be known as a specialist in the news of leading mining camps. His plan is to furnish to newspapers and magazines throughout the country reliable, general or technical news matter of prominent mines and mining camp.

In District Court.

M. L. Crosbie has started an action for possession of premises against R. M. Radcliffe, of Halsey street. It is set down for next Tuesday.

TO CHECK AUTO SPEEDERS

Dunellen Plans For Flank Attack on Scorchers Nearly Complete.

WILL MAKE ARRESTS

Constables With Stop-Watches Will Spot Speed Cranks As They Shoot Through the Main Street.

Plans for the checking of automobile speeding have been all but completed by the authorities of Dunellen. Several specials have been picked out to assist Marshal Mohan in timeing the machines, and if the other details are arranged in time, the auto spotters will go out next Sunday.

A half-mile stretch on a straightaway bit of road through the borough will be marked off, and the officers, with stop-watches, will be stationed along it. Signals will be arranged between them, and all speeders will be spotted on the system now generally used. A short distance beyond the turn of the road an officer—the huskiest and most determined of the lot—will be stationed where a signal can be given to him, and every violator of the law will be arrested as he comes up.

The borough authorities say that too much, and too dangerous, speeding has been done in their town, and the example set by Metuchen, Bound Brook and other places nearby has moved them to take action. The autoists captured will be arraigned at once, and from the temper shown by the officials it is safe to assume that $25 fines, with occasional extras, will fall in a subduing shower on the scorchers.

The legal side of the crusade is being looked after by Borough Counsel VonMinden. He has studied the speed and licensing laws thoroughly, and will be on hand all through the campaign to advise the police and to prosecute cases that may require anything more than formal arraignment and the testimony of the spotters and their stop-watches.

STATE CHARGE WILL BE MADE AGAINST SEADER.

Counsel Not Satisfied With City Court Disposition of Boy Shooting Case.

Adam Seader was arraigned before Judge Runyon in the City Court this morning on a charge of discharging firearms in the city limits, growing out of the injury to 10-year-old Walter Marienschieck yesterday forenoon by one of the shot from a shell that he fired at a cat in his chicken yard. It was shown that Seader had been troubled a good deal by the cat and that the shot did very little harm to the boy, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence with a warning against indiscriminate shooting.

A few minutes after the hearing, Counsellor W. S. Angleman, who has been retained in the case by Frank Marienschieck, the boy's father, came into court. He said Dr. Hughes had found that it would be necessary to operate to get the pellet out of Walter's jaw, and he was not satisfied with the disposition of the case. He announced that the case would be carried on under a charge of assault.

"It may be a pretty serious matter," said Mr. Angleman. "The shot penetrated some distance, and the consequences of the wound may be much more than trivial."

WALKED TO NEW YORK.

Young Plainfielders, Moved by Weston's Example, Make Good Time.

Moved by the example of Edward Weston, the old six-day walker, Percy Phillips, Jr., and Fred Martin walked to New York Sunday a week ago. They made the trip for their own amusement, and gave out no announcement of it, but they hustled to make some sort of a showing against the veteran's time. They started at five o'clock in the morning and reached the City Hall in New York in eight hours, including all stops.

The pauses were two in number, both times for eating. Figuring out the few minutes lost in that way they covered the distance at the rate of about three and a half miles an hour. They were not as tired as might be expected after the long bit of footwork, but tucked away a big dinner with more than ordinary enjoyment. They expect to try the walk again in an effort to lower the existing record, getting official time on the way.

BOSS MASONS TABOO SUB-CONTRACT WORK

ACTION TAKEN AT MEETING OF ASSOCIATION LAST NIGHT.

An important action was taken at the meeting of the Boss Mason's Association last night, when it was unanimously decided not to take sub-contract work in the future. In the future the boss masons will take contracts direct. The reason for this action is that there are so many irresponsible contractors that where mason work has been sub-contracted various complications have arisen causing not only trouble over the work, but loss of money as well, so it is alleged.

By taking contracts direct the masons alone will be responsible for their work. The Master Masons' Association not only of Plainfield, but throughout the State, is taking practically the same stand and is interested in a legislative measure that will compell all contractors to take out a license attesting their ability and responsibility.

All but two boss masons are members of the Plainfield Boss Masons' Association, and in the case of the two exceptions they do not employ union labor.

HUNGRY PYTHIANS GET LITTLE TO EAT

TWELVE COURSE DINNER TURNED OUT TO BE HAM, TOMATOES AND SALAD.

While Willie Deegan was pitching winning ball against Jersey City in Hoboken Sunday afternoon, more than 100 hungry and march worn Pythians were clamoring at his hotel for something to eat. Sunday was memorial day with the Pythians, and following its annual custom arrangements were made by Crescent Company No. 13, Uniform Rank, to entertain the visiting knights from Brooklyn, Jersey City and other places at a dinner. Robert Jahn was chairman of the dinner committee and he arranged with Willie Deegan, or thought he had, to provide a bounteous repast for the occasion. Either Willie did not hear or failed to understand the needs of such a large crowd. At any rate the boniface-ball player was glad of the opportunity to distinguish himself in the hotel line and promised to have a dinner of 12 courses ready for the multitude.

According to the terms of the agreement he was to receive 50 cents per plate. Willie sub-let the contract to a local baker at 35 cents, who in turn sub-let it to a local restaurant man at 25 cents per plate. There was nothing said about the 12 courses, and when supper time came, the menu that presented itself was cold ham, bread and butter, sliced tomatoes and potato salad. A great howl went up from the hungry Pythians, and Chairman Robert Jahn was kept busy explaining matters.

WANTED TO SLEEP.

Queer Acting Negro Surprised When Chased from Front Porch.

An East Front street resident heard a noise on his front porch at 4 o'clock this morning and found a negro in the act of undressing when he went out to investigate. The negro said he was going to sleep there. He seemed surprised when he was told that he couldn't.

"I was told to come here to sleep," he said. He gathered his clothes together and went off, leaving behind a vest with a nickel watch in it. He didn't appear to have been drinking and must have been a little wrong mentally. The incident was reported to the police.

Advocates of Scheme Favor Postponement Until After Regular Election.

FREE FROM POLITICS

Former Mayors Saunders and Fisk Express Opinion That Special Election Should Not Be Held in September.

It may be prophesized that the special election for consolidation will not take place in September as originally planned. Neither is it likely to be held until after the regular November election. Leading friends of the movement on both sides of the brook do not desire any factional politics to be mixed up in the campaign for merging the two municipalities and they do not hesitate to say so. Their idea is that the discussion of the subject should be divested of any politics and it is more than likely that the campaign will not be alunched in earnest until after all political quarrels on both sides of the brook are settled.

This will not deter progress in the matter for it has been suggested that the Common Council of Plainfield and the Council of North Plainfield appoint the proposed commission to decide upon a definite plan of union without waiting until a vote is taken by the people. The object of this is to let the voters know just what is proposed before they are called upon to cast their ballots. The report of the commission would show just what North Plainfield would receive, what representation it would be entitled to and what benefits it would obtain.

When approached last night on the subject of deferring the special election, former Mayor William L. Saunders, one of the most ardent champions of the movement, said that he fully agreed that it would be better to bring the matter up for final decision when the public mind is not centred on regular primaries or elections. "You can say for me," he declared, "that the matter is too important a one to be decided off-hand or when the voters are interested in something else."

Continuing, Mr. Saunders said: "I see no reason why the legislative bodies of Plainfield and North Plainfield should not at once name the proper commission to obtain for the people all necessary facts and data. Such a plan would be of great benefit to the people for then they could settle for themselves in a most intelligent way whether consolidation is as meritorious as we claim it to be."

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, chairman of the Board of Trade's committee on consolidation, also agrees that it would be better to postpone the special election until after the regular November election.

DIED WHILE VISITING HER AUNT IN THIS CITY.

Miss Cleggett Came Over from England Only Four Weeks Ago.

Under exceptionally said circumstances, the death occurred last night of Miss Minnie Beatrice Cleggett, who came to this city from England four weeks ago to visit her aunt, Mrs. Fred Ivamy, of West Second street. She had been enjoying splendid health after the ocean voyage but a sudden illness developed two weeks ago that led to congestion of the brain and caused her demise.

Miss Cleggett was eighteen years old and was the daughter of Friend and Alice Cleggett, of Maidstone, Kent county, Eng. She was an exceptionally bright and amiable girl and had made many acquaintances in Plainfield through a former long visit made two years ago. She had taken such a liking to the surroundings that it was her desire to come back and remain indefinitely, death ending the stay. The news was cabled the bereaved parents.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Ivamy's home tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock and interment will be at Hillside.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Thomas Reardon and James McCall, alias John Coleman, charged with burglary and horse stealing, in the village, made a queer move in court in New Brunswick last week. They sent word to Prosecutor Berdine that they wanted to plead guilty to the indictments against them, and the Prosecutor had them brought into court and appeared with the indictments. The pair had not been together since placed in jail. Reardon was first arrested and confessed to his pal's and his own guilt, and tried to show that he had been led into ways of crime by McCall. The latter was caught in Norristown, Pa., and was extradited. The two were separated in the jail, Reardon being kept in the witness department and McCall in the men's place. In this way they could not communicate. It was also thought that McCall might want to do Reardon violence for giving him away. However, a common spirit seemed to move them this day, and both expressed a desire to plead. They were brought into court by constables and were allowed to sit side by side, and were seen whispering to one another. When Prosecutor Berdine and the Court were ready for them, they announced that they had changed their minds and were not ready to plead. They were taken back to jail. Reardon is charged with stealing Charles Day's horse. He has charged McCall with complicity in that crime, but there was nothing to substantiate this statement and McCall was not indicted for that offense. Both are indicted for breaking and entering Abram G. Nelson's house. McCall is also indicted for breaking and entering the Lehigh Valley Railroad station at New Market and for carrying a loaded revolver.

The account of Eugene B. Randolph, administrator of the estate of Daniel H. Harvat was filed last week. The charges amounted to $268.62, and a balance was left after paying expenses, of $85.34. This left the estate insolvent and the creditors were paid 49 1-3 cents on the dollar.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that Dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit innoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent. of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy—Newbro's Herpicide.

By the Committee on First Street bridge in Westfield, N. J.:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—The committee to determine the advisability of erecting a new bridge on First Street near New York Avenue, Westfield, N. J., would report that they have examined the present structure and they find that the present bridge is not built in proper alignment with regard to the stream, and that it is totally inadequate to carry off the water. The present bridge is a brick arch bridge, and its capacity is but little more than one-half that of bridges located on same stream and farther up the stream. The committee find complaint from the adjoining property owners on the side of the bridge because of damage done by reason of the small carrying capacity of the bridge.

The committee therefore recommend that a new steel beam and concrete arch bridge be built, with space of 12 feet; the bridge to be located so that it will be in proper alignment with the stream the cost not to exceed $1,500.00.

Respectfully submitted, M. M. Scudder, Henry Krouse, E. K. Adams, Committee.

Freeholder Wahl moved that the report be received and recommendations adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

By the Committee on Bridge over Salt Brook, New Providence Borough:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, N. J.

Gentlemen—Your committee appointed on the matter of bridge over Salt Brook in New Providence Borough, would report that they inspected the premises and would respectfully urge the building of a new brick arch, iron beam bridge at said location, at a cost not exceeding $2,400.00.

John F. Wahl, Dennis S. Murphy, Peter H. Meisel, C. S. Chandler, Committee.

Freeholder Darby moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by an unanimous vote.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Scudder:

Resolved, That a committee of 3 be appointed to examine the stoneware pipe culvert in Elm Street, west of Dudley Avenue, Westfield, and to decide as to the necessity and probable cost of a new culvert bridge with masonry walls and stone flagging covering, the committee to report at the next meeting. On motion of Freeholder Gruener the resolution was adopted without dissent, and the director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Scudder, Adams and Kline.

By Freeholder Gruener:

Resolved, That a committee of 5 be appointed to examine the bridge on St. George's Avenue, near Jaques Avenue, Rahway, and report at a subsequent meeting of this Board as to the need of repairing or rebuilding the same and the probable cost. Further that said committee be empowered to ascertain as to the need and advisability of building a new bridge over the Rahway River in Rahway, between St. George's Avenue and Hamilton Street, and also as to the probable cost of same; a committee of the Rahway Common Council having appeared before your committee on appropriations, and made petition for the construction of such a bridge.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the resolution was adopted without dissent, and the director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Gruener, Krouse, Murphy, Westphal and Woodruff.

By Freeholder Jensen:

Resolved, That a committee of 5 be appointed to consider the advisability of constructing a steel drawbridge at the foot of First Street, Elizabeth, to connect same with Amboy Avenue, Elizabeth, N. J. The same committee to report as to the probable cost at a succeeding meeting of the Board.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the resolution was adopted without dissent, and the director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Jensen, Chandler, Cady, Robison and Cladek.

Freeholder Jensen, as chairman of the foregoing named committee, said he thought the whole Board should visit the locality mentioned in the resolution and become familiarized with conditions now existing, and that later on he would announce a date for such meeting.

Director King announced that standing committees, as constituted during the past year, would be continued for the present, except as to Committee on Collector's Bond, and on appropriations, heretofore announced, and also the Audit Committee, which latter would be as follows: Freeholders Cady, Wilbur and Woodruff.

Freeholder Cladek moved to adjourn, which was carried, and the director declared the Board adjourned until Thursday, June 7, 1906, at 2:30 p. m.

RULING ON JURY TRIALS IN THE DISTRICT COURT

JUDGE NEWCORN MAKES IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT UNDER NEW LAW.

Judge Newcorn announced a ruling in reference to jury trials in the District Court this morning. Hereafter in cases where a jury is desired, the notice must be filed within a day of the date of return of summons, or the jury right is deemed to have been waived and the trial proceeds before the District Judge.

This ruling is in accordance with the provisions of the laws of 1905. Judge Newcorn called the attention of the bar to the law, before making the announcement in pursuance of its provisions.

The session of the court was very brief, none of the actions being contested. The disposition of the list was as follows:

Elisa Genot against James Trimmer, settled; International Textbook Company against Herbert Randolph, contract, adjourned to July 3; Frank Ashton against T. A. Moore, contract, adjourned to June 26; A. B. Seidel, inc., against J. B. Coriell et als, doing business as the Plainfield Brass Foundry, contract, judgment for $50.28, C. C. Gallup appearing for the plaintiff; Adam Young against Edwin Potts, judgment for possession of premises; New Jersey Produce Company against George Schrieber, judgment for $43; Joseph Harrigan against J. F. Doty, judgment in full, W. L. Hetfield, Sr., appearing for the plaintiff.

The case of Swift & Co. against Peter Schlichter et als, on contract, will be tried this afternoon. The action will be stubbornly contested.

FISK DINNER PLANNED BY IMMEDIATE ASSOCIATES.

Committee Member Explains There Has Been a Misunderstanding of the Purpose.

It is announced by a member of the committee in charge of the complimentary dinner for former Mayor C. J. Fisk that the affair is being arranged by his immedate associates in the hospital board, Riding and Driving Club and other institutions and associations in which he is prominently identified.

According to the member in question, it is not proposed to make the affair a popular demonstration although others are invited to attend the affair. For that reason the subscription rate was not made lower.

HOW JERSEY ROADS ARE KEPT SO FINE

COMMISSIONER HUTCHINSON USES AN AUTO TO KEEP EYES ON WORK.

Trenton, June 19.—The use of a big automobile touring car by State Road Commissioner E. C. Hutchinson, of this city, has resulted in some big changes being made in the plans of inspecting the improved roads of the Commonwealth and some big gains in the results thus obtained.

The commissioner now has a way of swooping down on the county road inspectors and supervisors when they least expect it, and by this method he keeps them all keyed up to the highest standard of workmanship.

If he ascertains that work is being done in a slovenly manner he at once notifies the Board of Freeholders in the county affected, and the local inspector is required to show cause why he should not be dismissed and a more careful and efficient man put in his place. If the measures taken to bring about better results do not meet with the approval of the commissioner he withholds the State's share of the cost of road work and in this way the freeholders and their employees and contractors are speedily brought to terms.

Mr. Hutchinson is also paying particular attention to granting of permits for new roads. He insists that such improvements shall be made on roads most generally traveled, so that not only the immediate vicinity, but the State in general may profit by the outlay. By doing this he has already secured connections between numerous pieces of good roads, and the cross-State thoroughfares are rapidly becoming improved.

Anothe innovation which Mr. Hutchinson is introducing in his department is the barring of all narrow roadways. He insists that the day of ten, twelve and fourteen-foot roadways is at an end and that improved highways must be at least sixteen feet in width.

The commissioner is soon to experiment with asphalt instead of macadam for country roads. The asphalt is to be used without the smooth finish found on city streets. It will consist of small broken stone bound together with asphalt and will constitute a dustless roadway. The elimination of the dust will be a great advantage to the traveler and the resident along the highway alike, and the asphalt experiment will be closely watched from all parts of the State.

JAIL CUTS SHORT THE HONEYMOON.

Bigamy Charged Against Man Who Took Second Wife Last Wednesday.

Riverside, June 19.—The honeymoon of Frank Horner and his bride, formerly Miss Ethel G. Gray, of this place, has suddenly and sensationally terminated in the arrest of the bridegroom on a charge of bigamy. The complaint has been made by the first Mrs. Horner, formerly Miss Laura A. Edwards, of Delanco, who was married to Horner five years ago. Horner is in the Mount Holly jail in default of $1,000 bail. At the hearing before Justice of the Peace Zeigler he acknowledged that he had been married twice without bothering over divorce.

Horner is employed here as a fireman at an electric-power house. He is twenty-six years old and lives at Bridgeport. His first matrimonial venture occurred Nov. 12, 1901, when he led Miss Edwards to the altar. The couple apparently lived happily together until recently, when Horner, after a passing flirtation, became infatuated with Miss Grey, a comely factory girl of this place, whose home formerly was at Trenton.

Horner and Miss Gray were married at midnight last Wednesday by the pastor of the Riverside Lutheran church. They had previously applied to Justice of the Peace Kreps to tie the knot, but he refused, knowing Horner.

Friends of Horner are said to have witnessed the ceremony. When the first Mrs. Horner heard of the second matrimonial venture she took steps to prosecute her husband.

T. J. Mumford has purchased a lot on Madison avenue of E. E. Dorman. Mrs. S. Grieb, of Dunellen, has purchased two lots on West Front street near Compton avenue, belonging to William F. Moore and C. Sprich. A. C. Wilmerding, of Netherwood, has purchased the house and lot known as 518 Belvidere avenue, Netherwood. Charles Slocum has rented 317 Franklin place and will take possession July 1.

AUTOIST HELD ON HOMICIDE CHARGE.

Bail Refused for Man Whose Machine Was Responsible for Chauffeur's Killing.

Isaac T. Strauss, of M. Strauss & Son, Newark, was rearrested yesterday at Deal, N. J., on a charge of having caused the death of Harry Isaacson, a chauffeur, who was fatally injured in a collision Sunday between automobiles driven by Strauss and Peter A. Fogarty, Isaacson's employer.

Strauss was taken into custody at the direction of Coroner MacDonald and arraigned before Judge Borden, who held him without bail. An attempt is being made to have County Judge Foster, of Atlantic Highlands, accept bail.

The accident happened at Sixth and Grand avenues. In the automobile with Mr. Strauss were the Misses Rena and Augusta Belasco, daughters of David Belasco, the dramatist. When the young women saw that a collision was imminent they jumped from the car and were cut and bruised. They were said yesterday to be improving.

The car in which Fogarty and Isaacson were driving was crushed against a telegraph pole by the other car and Isaacson was pitched out. His skull was fractured and he died later in the Monmouth Memorial Hospital at Long Branch.

DE VOE VS. RECORD.

Prophet Would Debate Liquor Question With Senatorial Aspirant.

Hackensack, June 19.—Weather Prophet De Voe, having heard that United States Senator Dryden had declined the invitation of George L. Record to a joint debate on the political questions of the day, has challenged Mr. Record to a joint debate upon the relation of the liquor traffic to the "new idea" in politics, which Messrs. Colby and Record represent.

De Voe says: "I have been listening to hear something about liquor and beer, but you did not peep. Perhaps you have a reason for keeping quiet on the liquor traffic, and I would like to know that reason. We want to know where you stand in regard to licensing the traffic in intoxicating drinks."

La Follette to Aid Record.

George L. Record, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, who is the candidate of the Reform Republicans of New Jersey for United States Senator against Senator John R. Dryden, received yesterday a letter from United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, that he will aid Record's candidacy. The Senator wrote Mr. Record that he would spend a week in September in New Jersey making speeches.

G. O. P. IS 50 YEARS OLD

Celebration of Birthday Began in Philadelphia Last Night.

MANY VETERANS THERE

Many Veterans There Cheered for Sixteen Minutes—Pennypacker as Chairman.

Philadelphia, June 19.—Musical Fund Hall in this city was the scene yesterday of memorial exercises to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Republican party. In this same hall in 1856, General John C. Fremont, known as "the pathfinder," was nominated to bear the standard of Republicanism as the candidate for President of the United States, and on that day the Republican party was born.

Yesterday afternoon more than 20 old men, Republicans, who were present at the birth, were honored and beloved participants in yesterday's celebration.

The services yesterday were the beginning of four days of celebrating in honor of the party. The historic hall, situated on Locust street, above Eighth, was filled to the doors. The stage itself was over-crowded. The heat was intense, but the enthusiasm never for a moment lagged. Patriotic speech after speech was delivered, and the many women in the audience joined just as enthusiastically as did the men in the applause that followed.

The convention is under the auspices of the National League of Republican clubs. The president of the league, J. Hampton Moore, of this city, has had the arrangements for the convention in hand, and yesterday when he stepped to the front of the stage, he was loudly cheered. "If your hearts thrill with fervor let it out," he said, when the cheering subsided. "There are now coming among you the veterans of the first great fight, and I want you to give them a royal welcome."

The vast audience needed no suggestion to do this. Headed by the veteran old Fremont voter, T. B. M. Addis, the men marched in, two by two. Some of them were so feeble they could barely walk. Their progress into the hall was to the accompaniment of deafening cheers. The faces of these men, who 50 years ago laid the foundation of the Republican party, lit up at the tumultuous greeting. Men and women mounted chairs and drowned out a band with their cheers as the old voters, every one of them past the allotted three-score and ten years, marched slowly, but proudly to the seats that had been reserved for them in the front of the hall.

It was an inspiring sight. It was more like the ancient greeting of a victorious army than a welcome to the tattered remnants of an army that half a century ago fought for political principles with the ballot as their only weapon. For 10 minuates the cheering kept up. Flags handkerchiefs and hats were waved and tossed while their owners cheered to the echo. Then as a fitting close to this remarkable reception the band struck up "America," in which everybody joined.

Robert S. Murphy, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, led the singing of this hymn. Carried away by the enthusiasm of the moment, Mr. Murphy, young but silvery haired, strong voiced, stood towering above his neighbors waiving his arms and singing. In a second every one who could see him took their time from him and before the second verse was reached he was leading the mighty chorus.

The hymn sung, Mr. Moore announced that prayer would be said. "Fifty years ago, in the very hall," he said, "a young Baptist clergyman offered prayer. Today this same clergyman, no longer young, will offer prayer. In introduce the Rev. Edgar M. Levy, of Philadelphia."

Then the Rev. Mr. Levy, who was greeted with loud applause, offered prayer.

The prayer ended there was singing by the Philadelphia quartet, and afterwards Mr. Moore introduced Governor Pennypacker as the permanent chairman. "I notice," he said, by way of introduction, "that Republicanism promotes longevity as well as every other earthly benefit."

The speech of the Governor was in the nature of a historical review of the achievements of the Republican party, especially in connection with the party in the State of Pennsylvania and it was received with the same enthusiasm as had marked the earlier exercises.

At the conclusion of the Governor's address, Miss Ada Turner Kurtz sang "Old Kentucky Home" and responded to several encores. The Governor Pennypacker introduced Colonel Alexander K. McClure, a friend of the immortal Lincoln and a Republican, who spoke in a happy vein.

SHE WEDS MAN IN HER DIVORCE CASE

MRS. JOHN VANDERBILT, OF NEW PROVIDENCE, MARRIES CO-RESPONDENT.

Sound Beach, Conn., June 19.—Mrs. Myra L. Vanderbilt, a divorcee, about twenty-five years old, of New Providence, N. J., and Wm. H. H. Santy, of South Beach, who is middle aged, were married in New Haven Saturday. Their wedding was to have been kept a secret.

New Providence, June 19.—Much interest was aroused here by the announcement of Mrs. John Vanderbilt's marriage to William H. H. Santy. Mrs. Vanderbilt-Santy was Miss Myra Leming Johnson, daughter of Wadsworth Johnson, of this place. It was thought that Mrs. Vanderbilt was staying at the Thousand Islands recuperating her health.

The legal fight in which Mrs. Vanderbilt-Santy has been involved was one of the hardest and bitterest in the history of the courts. According to Vice-Chancellor Garrison, it was one of the most peculiar proceedings on record. In November last a double suit was begun by John Vanderbilt, of East Orange, a relative of Commodore Vanderbilt, and a man of wealth, through his brother Oliver Vanderbilt. The latter claimed that Mrs. Vanderbilt's child, William Godfrey Vanderbilt, was not John Vanderbilt's child, and asked that its name be taken off the vital records by the secretary of the State Board of Health.

Oliver Vanderbilt claimed that his brother was in a dying condition at his home in East Orange and wished to see the matter righted before his death. He presented his brother's affidavit which, among other things, also set forth that the child was not his, but belonged to William H. H. Santy, of Sound Beach, Conn.

This Mrs. Vanderbilt denied, and through her attorneys claimed that Oliver forced his brother, who, she declared, was weak-minded, to bring about the suit in order to get for himself the child's rightful inheritance.

The other suit brought by John Vanderbilt was one for divorce. On January 17 came news that a decree had been granted to him, and that Mrs. Vanderbilt had not even been represented by counsel at the trial of it.

It is said then that Mrs. Vanderbilt was not averse to the divorce. It was explained that she was only a girl and that Mr. Vanderbilt was over twice her age.

The entire efforts of the woman's attorneys had been put forward in the suit involving the child, and which was brought before Vice-Chancellor Garrison. The court refused to compel the Board of Health to expurgate the boy's name from the vital statistic records. This decision was reached on May 21.

So William Godfrey Vanderbilt is recognized as the son of John Vanderbilt, and will come in for a share of the latter's fortune when John Vanderbilt dies.

Justices Establish New Rules.

Observing the strict methods in vogue at the District Court in the city, the justices of the peace in the borough have posted up new rules. Hereafter everything will be conducted on a cash basis and all forms of trust have been tabooed. In addition they announce that when a case is called for 10 o'clock it means exactly that time and not twenty minutes later. The word is being passed around to the local lawyers who have been in teh habit of dropping around to the courts at any old time.

Proposals for Sewers and Grading

Sealed proposals will be received by the Westfield Real Estate Company at their office, corner of North avenue and Middlesex street, Westfield, N. J., on June 25, 1906, at 2 o'clock p. m., for constructing about 450 lineal feet of 8-inch sanitary sewers, with the necessary house connections and appurtenances in Fairmont avenue, also for finishing grading in St. Mark's avenue from Middlesex street to St. Paul street and St. Paul street from Lenox avenue to Tremont avenue.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for $25.00 drawn to the order of the treasurer of the Westfield Real Estate Company as an evidence of good faith, and a bond of $500.00 will be required to guarantee the faithful performance of the contract.

Any information regarding the work may be obtained at the office of H. C. VanEmburgh, C. E., 149 North avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

FRANKLIN ON CATCHING COLD.

It is well known, says the New York Evening Post, that Franklin made a particular study of colds and had his own theory about them, which we believe is pretty much the theory of today. One of his assertions was that catching cold does not come from mere cold, but from unequal temperature over the body and from undisturbed moisture. To prove this he made a number of observations on occasions when he and did not suffer. A few of these follow:

By putting on a damp shirt on a dry body—yes.

By putting in a dry shirt on a wet body, though this wets the body ten times more—no.

By sitting in a room where the floor has been newly washed—yes.

By going into a river and staying there an hour (no sheets so wet)—no.

By wetting the feet only—yes.

By wetting all the clothes through the body and wearing them the whole day—no.

By sitting in a room against a crevice—yes.

By sitting as long in the open air—no.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

A very simple method for the removal of warts is, namely, a flannel over which is spread some sapo viridis, placed over the wart for a period of fourteen days, by the end of which time the wart will become so soft as to be easily shelled out.

The majority of people who take quinine to break up a cold make the mistake of taking it in large doses. Two or three grains, four hours apart, are quite sufficient, while lager doses open the pores and render them liable to an additional cold.

Camphor liniment and ammonia liniment are both good rubefacients. They are useful to apply to sprains, bruises, rheumatic joints and stings of insects. They are also used externally in inflammatory affections of the throat.

To make camphor liniment dissolve one ounce of pulverized camphor in four ounces of olive oil.

One part water of ammonia to two parts olive oil makes ammonia liniment.

Governor on Teachers' Bill.

Governor Stokes, in signing the Arrowsmith teachers' retirement fund act, adopted the somewhat unusual course of accompanying it with a memorandum setting forth his reasons for approving the measure. This read: "Assembly 447, the teachers' retirement fund bill, was signed upon receipt of an opinion from the attorney general that the rights of the members in classes one and two are not impaired by this act, and the assurance of the committee on legislation of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association that they will join in an effort next year to correct any defects that may be found in the law."

The Coat Sleeve.

For coats the medium leg o' mutton and the coat model will be found the most becoming; bishop sleeves, fairly full, draping rather than exposing a too plump arm, for shirt waists, and fairly full puff sleeves brought in below the elbow for better, of perhaps dressier gowns, will be a good guide. Some stout women imagine that the puffs at the elbow increase their breadth, but this is not so if the puff is allowed to droop; on the contrary, the drapery about the waist line will so break up and conceal this circular line as to apparently decrease its circumference.

Massaging the Face.

The skin should be perfectly clean before the messaging of the face is begun. Use the complexion brush, with warm water and pure soap. When rubbing in a cream always have the motions upward and outward. Send the flattened palms from chin up to the ears. Move the finger tips about in little circles, pressing inward gently and being careful not to push the flesh up into tiny lines. Do this always at night, and every morning bathe the face with cold water, drying with gentle pats with an old soft towel.

New York's First Sidewalk.

The first sidewalk in New York was laid by a woman, Mrs. Samuel Provoost, about 1716. She was an importer and merchant and laid the sidewalk for the convenience of her customers. She had importuned the authorities to do it, but they refused, saying it was impossible. After her object lesson paving and curbing gradually came in, but for some time her sidewalk was so famous that people journeyed even from Philadelphia to see it.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Azienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Azienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Azienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

IZAAK WALTON, FISHERMAN.

Serene secure, beside some stream
He kept his vigil, dreamed his dream;
No visionary fair romance
Of famous deeds with horse and lance,
But battles waged his foemen shy,
By weapons such as line and fly.

Day after day the fisher spent,
Beguiled to a supreme content,
In snaring crafty silver trout,
Or perch, if mulberry buds were out;
Sequestered with the falling rain,
The song of thrush or lark's refrain.

With some choice friend who loved as well
The wonder of that liquid spell,
He watched how swift the salmon sped
Across an amber river bed,
Or how the grayling, of the dace,
Went gliding smooth from place to place.

Past cowslip meadows, jasmine bowers,
Hedges with honeysuckle flowers,
They wandered slow to some quaint in
That smelled of lavender within,
Where he would sip some homely wine
And boast the prowess of his line.
—Martha Hale Shackford, in Everybody's Magazine for June.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

Out on the shining blue river he expanded his lungs to the clean, sweet air. Excursion boats, fluttering gay streamers, worked sturdily up the stream. Little yachts, in fresh-laundered suits of canvas, darted across their bows or slanted in their wakes, looking like white butterflies. The vivid blue of the sky was flecked with bits of broken fleece, scurrying like the yachts below. Across the river was a high-towering bank of green inviting him over its summit to the languorous freshness beyond.

He walked off the boat on the farther side and climbed a series of steep wooden stairways, past a tiny cataract that foamed its way down to the river. When he reached the top he walked through a stretch of woods and turned off to the right, down a cool shaded road that wound away to the north through the fresh greens of oak and chestnut.

When he came to a village with an electric car clanging through it, he skirted its borders, and struck off through a woodland toward the river. Even the village was too human, too modern, for his early-pagan mood.

In the woods he felt that curious thrill of stealth, that impulse to cautious concealment, which survives in man from the remote days when enemies beset his forest ways. On a southern hillside he found a dogwood tree with its blossomed firmament of white stars. In low, moist places the violets had sprung through the thatch of leaves and were singing their purple beauties all unheard. Birds were nesting and squirrels chattered and scolded.

Under these more obvious signs and sounds went the steady undertone of life in root and branch and unfurling leaf—provoking, inciting, making lawless whomsoever it thrilled.

He came out of the wood on to another road that ran not far from the river, and set off again to the north along the beaten track.

When he came to a "wheelman's rest," he ate many sandwiches and drank much milk.

The face of the maid that served him had been no heaven for the souls of dead flowers. Still she was a girl; and no girl could be wholly without importance on such a day. So he thought the things he would have said to her if matters had been different.

When he had eaten, he loafed off again down the road. Through the long afternoon he walked and lazed, turning into strange lanes and byroads, resting on grassy banks and looking far up.

When the shadows stretched in the dusky languor of the spring evening, he began to take his bearings for the return. He heard the hum and clang of an electric car off through a chestnut grove.

The sound disturbed him, bringing premonitions of the city's unrest. He determined to stay out for the night. It was restful—his car would not arrive until late the next afternoon—there was no reason why he should not. He found a little wayside hotel whose weather-beaten sign was ancient enough to promise "entertainment for man and beast."

"Just what I want," he declared. "I'm both of them—man and beast."

Together they ate tirelessly of young chickens broiled, and a green salad, and a wonderful pie, with a bottle of claret that had stood back of the dingy little bar so long that it had attained, at least as to its label, a very fair antiquity.

When the man and the beast had been appeased they sat out under a blossomed apple tree and smoked together in a fine spirit of amity.

At ten o'clock he went in from under the peering little stars and fell asleep in an ancient four-poster. He dreamed that he had the world, a football, clasped to his breast, and was running down the field for a gain of 100 yards. Then, suddenly, in place of the world, it was Avice Milbrey in his grasp, struggling frantically to be free; and instead of behaving like a gentleman he flung both arms around her and kissed her despite her struggles; kissed her time after time, until she ceased to strive against him, and lay panting and helpless in his arms.

CHAPTER XXIX.

AN UNUSUAL PLAN OF ACTION IS MATURED.

He was awakened by the unaccustomed silence. As he lay with his eyes open, his first thought was that all things had stopped—the world had come to its end. Then remembrance came, and he stretched in lazy enjoyment of the stillness and the soft feather bed upon which he had slept. Finding himself too wide awake for more sleep, he went over to the little gable window and looked out. The unfermented wine of another spring day came to his eager nostrils. The little ball had made another turn. Its cheek was coming once more into the light. Already the east was flushing with a wondrous vague pink. The little animals in the city over there, he thought, would soon be tumbling out of their beds to begin another of their funny, serious days of trial and failure; to make ready for another night of forgetfulness, when their absurd little ant-hill should turn again away from the big blazing star. He sat a long time at the window, looking out to the east, where the light was showing; meditating on many idle, little matters, but conscious all the time of great power within himself. He felt ready now for any conflict. The need for some great immediate action pressed upon him. He did not identify it. Something he must do—he must have action—and that at once. He was glad to think how Uncle Peter would begin to rejoice in him—secretly at first, and then to praise him. He was equal to any work. He could not begin it quickly enough. That queer need to do something at once was still pressing, still unidentified.

By five he was downstairs. The girl, fresh as a dew-sprayed rose in the garden outside, brought him breakfast of fruit, bacon and eggs, coffee and waffles. He ate with relish, delighting meantime in the girl's florid freshness, and even in the assertive, triumphant whistle of the youth busy at his tasks outside.

When he set out he meant to reach the car and go back to town at once. Yet when he came to the road over which he had loitered the day before, he turned off upon it with slower steps. There was a confusing whirl of ideas in his brain, a chaos that required all his energy to feed it, so that the spring went from his step.

Then all at once a new-born world cohered out of the nebula, and the sight of its measured, orderly whirling dazed him. He had been seized with a wish—almost an intention, so stunning in its audacity that he all but reeled under the shock. It seemed to him that the thing must have been germinated in his mind without his knowledge; it had lain there, gathering force while he rested, now to burst forth and dazzle him with its shine. All that undimmed freshness of longing he had felt the day before—all the unnamed, unidentified, nameless desires—had flooded back upon him, but now no longer aimless. They were acutely definite. He wanted Avice Milbrey—wanted her with an intensity as unreasoning as it was resistless. This was the new world he had watched swimming out of the chaos in his mind, taking its allotted orbit in a planetary system of possible, rational, matter-of-course proceedings.

And Avice Milbrey was to marry Shepler, the triumphant money king.

He sat down by the roadside, well-nigh helpless, surrendering all his forces to the want.

Then there came upon him to reinforce this want a burning sense of defeat. He remembered Uncle Peter's first warnings in the mine about "cupboard love;" the gossip of Higbee: "If you were broke, she'd have about as much use for you—" all the talk he had listened to so long about marriage for money; and, at the last, Shepler's words to Uncle Peter: "I was uncertain until copper went to 51." Those were three wise old men who had talked, men who knew something of women and much of the world. And they were so irritating in their certainty. What a fine play to fool them all!

The sense of defeat burned into him more deeply. He had been vanquished, cheated, scorned, shamefully flouted. The money was gone—all of Uncle Peter's complaints and biting sarcasms came back to him with renewed bitterness; but his revenge on Uncle Peter would be in showing him a big man at work, with no nonsense about him. But Shepler, who was now certain, and Higbee, who had always been certain—especially Shepler, with his easy sense of superiority with a woman over any poor man. That was a different matter. There was a thing to think about. And he wanted Avice Milbrey. He could not, he decided, go back without her.

The great wild wish narrowed itself into a definite plan. He recalled the story Uncle Peter had told at the Oldakers' about the woman and her hair. A woman could be coerced if a man knew her weakness. He could coerce her. He knew it instinctively; and the instinctive belief rallied to its support a thousand little looks from her, little intonations of her voice, little turnings of her head when they had been together. In spite of her calculations, in spite of her love of money, he could make her feel her weakness. He was a man with the power.

DIAMOND DUST.

Hoboken's fine victory over the Jersey City team, leaders in the Eastern League pennant race, has demonstrated again that Plainfield and Hoboken still remains in the front rank of independent clubs as well as being on a par with Eastern League teams. It was no fluke affair but a genuine clean cut victory in which the locals outplayed the Skeeters at every point of the game. The hearts of over 3,000 fans were ignited by sensational catches by Reardon and Heffron in the outfield, and the masterly twirling of Willie Deegan. In one week the leading teams of the two leagues have been conquered by the Plainfield-Hoboken combination. Thursday, Paterson, of the Hudson River League, were victims by the score of 6 to 5, with Phil. Smith on the slab, while Sunday the Skeeters bowed to the tune of 4 to 1, narrowly escaping a shut out.

Having dampened the aspirations of the leaders in the Hudson River and Eastern League, Manager Daab will try a little Connecticut League meat next Sunday when Waterbury, the Nutmeg leaders, will play Hoboken.

It's up to Garry Hermann to supply Cincinnati with a pennant and a new water works, they claim out in Ohio. There is some chance for the water works.

Fighters and Sunday ball players in New York are beating it while their shoes are good. Many don't know where they are going, although they are on their way.

Umpire Jack Merrity is thinking of dramatizing the book, "Wild Animals I Have Known." A few birds from New York and Westfield will occupy pieces of space in the volume.

In every town the St. Louis, National League, team appears it is subjected to the "throw 'em down McCloskey" gag. Manager McCloskey looks on and smiles.

No one can blame Pitchers Gibson and Hughes for flopping to Harrisburg. Life with the Boston Americans is enough to make anybody an outlaw.

George Wiltse, now the star twirler of the Giants, Sundayed in town as the guest of his brother, Lou Wiltse, and family.

According to the opinion of Dr. E. C. Ellett, a noted specialist, who treated Christy Mathewson during his illness in Memphis when the Giants were training for the opening of the season, the great twirler may yet be called on to face his worst defeat in a championship game. Doctor Ellett states that he informed Mathewson during his illness that the effects of the attack of nasal diphtheria might be accompanied by hardships in breathing during the warm weather that would affect his pitching. Doctor Ellett says nothing will cause the downfall of a baseball player quicker than nasal diphtheria.

Clark Griffith, the hopeful manager of the New York Americans, says Umpires Connor and Tim Hurst don't know baseball from football. There's a reason. The Cleveland's nosed Griff out of a twelve-inning game.

A stockholder in the Cincinnati Club has started for the North Pole. He got a taste for frost watching the Red's play.

Treasurer Medicus, of the Brooklyns, is not a doctor, as the name implies. He owns a furniture factory.

A late wire from Boston states that Jimmy Collins, manager of the Boston Americans, has been offered the management of the Old Men's Home.

Instead of arresting athletes for playing Sunday ball at Louisville, Ky., the police take a few names and call the umpire one or two. In Brooklyn they take the managers to the station house.

President Carson, of the Central League, is investigating a charge that the Canton players have been putting the balls on ice previous to games in order to make them heavy. Wheeling and South Bend complain, and the alleged act brought on a free-for-all fight at Canton last Friday.

New York now knows what it means to get the wash from those ahead.

They say Charlie Murphy, the manager of the Chicago Nationals, is very tight, as he gives out only three editions of passes. No. 1, for the press; No. 2, for the groundkeepers, and No. 3, for his brother magnates. Talk about Plainfield, the period of graft must be over in the Windy City, too.

Unlike baseball, polo is one game that is played strictly for amateurs. No chance here for any tainted athletes in a sport which costs a player from $3,000 upward.

Governor Pennypacker and the Pennsylvania State Constabulary did not interfere with the tennis tournament in Philadelphia last week.

Ross, the Trenton catcher, wants to know just where he is at. He was sold to Utica by Newark for $100, but Ross became dissatisfied at Utica and only played a few games there. He left the team of his own accord and was later released by the Utica management. Ross is still the property of the Newark club, to which he looks for payment of his salary. The matter will have to go before the National Commission before it is eventually settled.

A blue envelope worked wonders in Willie Deegan. He probably realizes now that it will be necessary for him to keep in condition in order to keep on the team.

According to a prior agreement in case of rain the game with Westfield, which was postponed Saturday, will be played on the coming Saturday. Manager Daab has shoved the game with the Quaker Giants further down the list.

"Mike" Rotchford has got through with Utica and is now playing on independent teams in and around New York.

The Union County Field Club, colored, would like to arrange games with Plainfield All-Americans, Somerville, Clinton Avenue, Bound Brook, Rahway A. C. and Roselle. Garwood vs. West Ends.

The Garwood A. C. will journey to Somerville on Saturday when it will cross bats with the West Ends of that place. The Garwoods have reorganized and several of the positions have been strengthened. They have one victory over Somerville to their credit and hope to add another on Saturday. Richard Watt has been selected to manage the team and is bending every energy to place the team among the leaders of the county. He has booked games with Roselle, Rahway and other strong teams.

Damage Suit Adjourned.

The damage suit of Jessie Sullivan against Kussel Sachar, for $300, which was to have been tried in the District Court this morning, has been put off until June 26. Sachar has retained W. L. Hetfield, Sr., to defend him. F. J. Blatz is the plaintiff's lawyer.

Will Close at Noon.

On account of death in his family, Ivamy's seafood market will close tomorrow at noon and remain closed for the remainder of the day.

MANAGER BURKE GETS HIMSELF INTO A MIX-UP

SAID TO HAVE BROKE AGREEMENT OF ASSOCIATION AND COVERED GAME.

Manager Frank Burke of the Elizabeth Stars has started to hoodwink the baseball public it is said, as well as the Inter-State Baseball Association, of which he is a member, by having published in the New York papers on Monday mornings fake scores of games played on the Star grounds on the preceding day. An instance of one of his alleged tricks was revealed yesterday morning in the New York Press, which credited the Stars defeating the Watchung team by the score of 3 to 0, when as a matter of fact, it is said, the Stars violated the rules of the Inter-State Association by playing the Philadelphia Giants, which team is now controlled by the Not Strong-Schlicter syndicate. Elizabeth won the game 1 to 0.

Burke originally had a game booked with Chicago but Manager Bernham put a stop to it, it is said, on the claim that Chicago was violating the rules of the National Commission, in respect to the "five mile limit." Burke afterward booked the Manhattans but when he discovered the Philadelphia Giants had an open date and would go on at a cheaper figure, it is alleged that he booked the colored "outlaw" team and threw overboard the Manhattans which club is also a member of the Inter-State Association.

MARTY" TRIUMPHS OVER JOE DOEBEL

PROFESSIONALS FIGHT IT OUT ON COUNTRY CLUB COURSE.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the home-bred professional of the Plainfield Country Club, clearly demonstrated his position of superiority over the other professionals of the Metropolitan district, yesterday afternoon, when he defeated Joseph Doebel, the crack professional from the Fairfield Country Club, Greenwich, Conn. Doebel has long had the reputation for being one of the best players in the professional ranks and the match with O'Loughlin was watched with more than ordinary interest by the supporters of each. The Plainfield boy won out yesterday in a thirty-six hole match returning a score of 143 as against 151 posted by his opponent. At the end of the match O'Loughlin was 8 up. A return match will be played today between these players at the Fairfield Country Club, where Doebel claims he has never been defeated. The matches are for good sized stakes and if O'Loughlin wins today he will enter the open championship tournament at Chicago the last of the month.

Not only did O'Loughlin win his match yesterday but on the first nine holes he broke the record of the course, making a score of 32 against 33 which was previously held by Frank O. Reinhart. "Marty" went out on the first round in 32 and returned with 38. In the afternoon he made a score of 35 going out and returned with 38, a total of 143.

"Marty" made several noteworthy plays during the day. On the third hole of 250 yards he made a drive of 255 yards, and he made the seventh hole of 390 yards in three strokes. On the fifteenth hole of 325 yards he drove his ball 290 yards, just a little short of the green. All of this brilliant play was made during a heavy downpour of rain and many strokes were made with the wind driving the rain in the player's face.

In the morning Doebel went out in 37 and returned with the same number of strokes, a 74 for the first eighteen holes, and in the afternoon he went out in 39 and returned in 38, a 77 for the second eighteen holes, or a total of 151 for the thirty-six holes. Doebel pushed "Marty" pretty hard in the morning, but in the afternoon play he did not appear quite so strong.

The cards for the day were as follows:

CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Graduating Class of City High School Held Final Class Festivities Last Night.

A CLEVER PROGRAMME

Topical Songs, Take-Offs on the Class and Entertainment by "The Fays."

With the receiving of diplomas of graduation tomorrow evening, the senior class of the City High School will become alumni. The final festivities and jollification of the class of 1906 took place at the High School last evening at the annual class day exercises. Originality marked the entire programme of the evening, which was worked up by a committee of the class officers. The first number was a song by the class to the tune of the hymn "There is a Happy Land." This was sung by the entire class, forty-seven members, seated on the platform. Each member of the class had a pair of light wings attached to the shoulders and sang the song, the words of which were by Miss Elizabeth Winter, with hands folded as in prayer. The members of the class wore broad belts of the class colors.

Following this was a well worked up burlesque on the Fays. "Mr. Fay," Stewart Freeman, the class president, lead "Mrs. Fay," Miss Louise Klein, up on the platform, and put her in a mesmeric trance before the audience. In this condition, the members of the class "concentrated their minds" on some question and "Mrs. Fay" answered these questions in a way that developed many local hits on the members of the class.

Following this was a song to the tune of "Robinson Crusoe" from "Moonshine." The words of this were by Miss Elizabeth Winter. Malcolm Davis sang the verses and the class joined in the chorus. Class statistics were next in order, and "prize ribbons" were awarded by Stewart Freeman to "superlative" members of the class. Ribbons were awarded to the boy and the girl who had done most for the High School, for the class, to the "superlative" athletics, to the handsomest, the brainiest—then the "heaviest," the biggest "faculty rushers," "fussers," "butters-in" and "fussers."

"Give Our Regards to the High School"—to the air of "Give My Regards to Broadway," proved a clever success as written by Miss Gertrude Hunter. This was a song by the class—a farewell to the school from the senior class.

Miss Gertrude Hunter read the class history—Summing up the achievements of 1906 during their school career. The programme was interrupted by the arrival of His Satanic Majesty Satan, who forcasted the fate and treatment of the members of the class in the hereafter. This was full of local hits on the class.

After Miss Elizabeth Winter had read the class poem, composed by her for the occasion, the class sang their farewell to the school in song, the concluding lines of which were:

"Where oh where are the grave old seniors;
Safe now in the wide wide world."

Informal dancing concluded the evening's entertainment.

SINGING SECTION HONORED.

Reception Tendered Prize Winners by the Gesang Turn Verein.

The Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein tendered a reception to the Singing Section, last night, in honor of its capturing a silver trophy in the recent contest at Union Hill. There was a large attendance and the singers were cheered and applauded repeatedly. Supper was served and in the social intermissions addresses were made by Henry Haurand, president of the Singing Section; Herman Eichorn, its leader, and August Wolf. The Section sang the selections that won prizes for it at Union Hill and Trenton.

The tables in the supper hall were tastefully decorated with flowers gathered and arranged by Rudolph Spiegel.

The committee which had charge of the reception consisted of August Wolf, Ernest Seiller and Paul Nachtway.

Miss Laura Runyon Honored.

Miss Laura L. Runyon, professor of history in the Missouri State Normal School at Warrensburg, Mo., formerly of this city, recently received the degree of master of philosophy at the University of Chicago and sails June 20 on the Potsdam for Europe.

Mrs. James Clark, of West Seventh street, left today for Wequeponsing, Mich, where she has a cottage. She will spend the summer there, going later to St. Louis, where she will make her home.

PEARCE GETS A LICENSE

Divinity Student's Belief is Sound Enough For Elizabeth Presbytery.

TO BE A MISSIONARY

Had Denied the Immaculate Conception, But Is Said to Have Modified His Views.

Rev. Henry Arthur Pearce, of Essex street, was licensed to preach by the Elizabeth Presbytery at its quarterly meeting held in the Presbyterian church, Connecticut Farms, yesterday. Owing to views out of harmony with the Presbyterian church, Mr. Pearce failed to secure a license at the meeting of the Presbytery held in Elizabeth a number of weeks ago, and his examination was laid over until yesterday. One of the Plainfield delegates who attended the meeting says that everything was harmonious, that Mr. Pearce's views conformed to the doctrine of the church sufficiently to warrant the granting of a license. So far as is known now Mr. Pearce will take charge of a mission station in the mountains of North Carolina. He was given until July 1 to accept or decline the call, and it is the belief that he will accept. He will be married on Thursday, June 28, to Miss Viola Walker, of Schenectady, N. Y., and will likely go South soon afterwards.

Mr. Pearce was graduated from Union College in the Class of '03 and from Union Seminary in the Class of '06. Several weeks ago he appeared before the Elizabeth Presbytery for examination and for the purpose of securing a license to preach. At that time, it is said, he gave the Presbytery a great surprise by stating among other things that he did not believe that Christ was born of the Virgin Mary. It was also said that he expressed other views which were greatly at variance with the creed of the Presbyterian church. It seemed impossible at the time for the Presbytery to harmonize the candidate's views with those of the church and it was decided to lay the whole matter over until yesterday, in the hope that Mr. Pearce's ideas might change on the more essential points.

It is said that Mr. Pearce has not changed his mind as to the views he expressed at the meeting of the Presbytery in Elizabeth, at least the more important ones, but that they were modified sufficiently to meet the requirements of the Presbyterian church.

At the first examination Mr. Pearce said that his views were in harmony with the teachings at Union Seminary and this again surprised those in attendance, who could scarcely believe the young man's statements to be true.

Rev. William Stuchell, of Rahway, presided at the meeting, and Rev. Dr. Kerr, of Elizabeth, was the clerk. Those present from Plainfield were Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. L. R. Howard, Rev. C. E. Herring, Rev. F. D. Tildon, Rev. Henry A Pearce and H. C. Squier.

WOMAN'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Stricken With Convulsions, Mrs. Irene Washington Dies.

Officer John Payne was patrolling his beat on West Second tsereet at 11 o'clock last night when a man rushed up to him and said a colored woman was dying on the sidewalk at Madison avenue. Hurrying to the spot he found Mrs. Irene Washington of East Second street, in the last throes of convulsions. He called Dr. Martha Rose Stillman but the woman died before the physician arrived. She had evidently been stricken as she was on her way home.

Mrs. Washington was fifty years old and leaves one son, Edward Washington. She had been employed by Mrs. J. R. Truell for the past twenty years. The funeral will be held from her late home Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Halstead C. Compton, of West Front street, have decided to spend their summer vacation at Orr's Island, Maine, and will leave for that place soon. Mr. and Mrs. Compton have received word of the safe arrival of their son, Alfred H. Compton in Nebraska. He will remain there for several weeks.

Strawberry Festival.

The strawberry and ice cream festival held at the Christian church last week, will be repeated tonight on the church grounds on Grove street. The proceeds will be used to buy paint and supplies for painting the church.

Sentence Day at Elizabeth.

Today was sentence day in the Union County Court, but aside from the case of Daniel Harvey, colored, charged with stealing a pair of shoes, there were no Plainfielders arraigned for sentence.

PASTOR SAYS IT'S NO SIN TO BE WEALTHY

EVERYTHING IS ALL RIGHT IF USED RIGHTLY, SAYS MR. MAC MURRAY.

Rev. John MacMurray, pastor of Browne M. E. church, Jersey City, and former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, in this city, preached an interesting sermon on Sunday night, entitled: "Is it a sin to be a millionaire?" He said that Christ mingled alike with the poor and the rich and made no distinction between classes. The pall-bearers at his funeral were two millionaires of Jerusalem and Jacob, Solomon and Joseph were what would be termed millionaires.

"It is not a sin to be a millionaire, though many millionaires are sinful," he said, "and it is not sinful in itself to own and acquire wealth. If a man has a right to own his own house, he has a right to own a larger territory. The right of possession is a divine right. If it is right to have five dollars in the bank, it is right to have a thousand or a million. We would not be justified in saying that it was a sin to be the rightful possessor of a million dollars, if that million were earned by one's ability. The sin lies only in the mode of its acquisition, or in the manner of its use. A man may acquire a million dollars honestly and in the sight of God or he may never possess more than five cents and yet acquire that dishonestly.

"Some men are so physically and mentally constituted that they have a capacity amounting almost to genius for the acquisition of wealth. The millionaire is very often the man who incessantly works while others dream, and saves, while others spend and these qualities are commendable.

"Use of wealth is sinful only when used to corrupt the electorate, to unduly influence legislation and when it makes men reckless of their misdoings."

HORSE CASE ENDED.

Fritz Myers Wins In Action Brought by John J. Coryell.

The case of James J. Coryell against Fritz Myers, of this city, was tried Monday and yesterday in the County Court at Somerville, and resulted in an almost immediate verdict in favor of the defendant. The cause of action arose out of a horse deal. The plaintiff claimed that he had purchased a team of horses of the defendant and had paid a part of the purchase money, the balance to be paid him when he took away the second horse which was to held one month by the defendant; that he went within the time with the balance of the money and demanded the horse but that it had been sold by the defendant to another purchaser. His suit was brought to recover damages for the breach of the contract.

The defendant claimed that the plaintiff had purchased but one of the horses and that he was to have one month within which to purchase the second horse but that he had not put in his appearance with the price. There have been two trials of the cause and the court house at Somerville was visited on both days with interested spectators from the neighborhood in which the cause of action arose.

Myers was represented by Codington & Swackhamer, of this city, and Coryell by Horace Codington, of Somerville.

Miss Martin Graduated.

Miss Elizabeth Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin, of Marion avenue, was graduated from the Madame Krause-Bolte Kindergarten Academy, Seventy-second street, New York, Monday, with unusually high honors. For merit in her work she was made valedictorian in a class of thirty-two and was also credited with exceptional proficiency in studies during the year. Her classmates elected her president and she presided at their gatherings in connection with the closing exercises. This was the first time in the history of the school that a public commencement was held, the graduation hitherto being conducted quietly. Miss Martin will go to Point Pleasant soon and with a lcassmate organize a summer school in kindergarten work. In the fall she will assume an important position in teaching.

In Judge Swift's Place.

TUMULTUOUS APPLAUSE RESOUNDS THROUGH PLAINFIELD THEATRE AS COLBYITES DEAL SLEDGE HAMMER BLOWS AT POLITICAL CORRUPTION

PANDEMONIUM REIGNS AS RUNYON DECLARES HIMSELF A CANDIDATE FOR THE ASSEMBLY

A Wonderful Demonstration Lasting Five Minutes Follows Announcement.

In an atmosphere surcharged and throbbing with the New Idea, City Judge William N. Runyon announced his candidacy for the Assembly nomination on the reform platform at the Colbyite mass meeting in the theatre last night. The announcement was greeted with a tumult of applause that bordered on a frenzy of enthusiasm.

The announcement came as a surprise. It was understood that the Colby candidate for Assembly might be presented at the meeting, but no direct hint of the nomination or of the nominee was made until the Judge raised his standard on the platform. The declaration came as the enthusiasm aroused by ringing speeches by Corporation Counsel George L. Record and Senator Everett Colby was stirring in the breasts of the audience. It brought the emotions that had been quickened to climacteric pitch, and men and women in the seats all over the hall gave way to their feelings without restraint.

For full five minutes after the Judge had made the formal statement of candidacy tumult reigned in the auditorium. A rattle of handclaps swelled to a roar of cheers, sustained and throaty; cheers that strong men give when something inside them seems to be tearing its way out through their throats. As the tumult died down, it swelled again and yet again, gray-haired men cheering as lustily as the youngest men about them, until the cheerers gave way to weariness.

Judge Runyon was deeply affected by the tribute of trust and popularity. Trained as he is to public speaking, his composure gave way before the spontaneous display of feeling that greeted him. His voice shook with emotion as he continued his speech, and he was breathing deeply when he finished.

Chairman Henry L. Hall called Judge Runyon to the platform after Corporation Counsel Record's speech. In bringing him forward from a seat at the front of the auditorium, Mr. Hall described him as "a man at the acme of popularity; a man who knows his own mind; and a man to be trusted."

Full-throated cheers and thunders of applause greeted the Judge when he stepped to the front of the platform. The men who knew the announcement he was about to make foresaw then the tremendous acclaim that greeted it. Before and after that one great outburst, applause and cheers punctured the speech at every opening the crowd could seize upon. A second sustained burst marked its close.

Judge Runyon's speech was as follows:

"In 1896 fresh from college and with the ideas and ideals that every young man should take some part in politics, I allied myself with the regular Republican organization and since that time have labored hard and long and faithfully, and with what success I leave others to say. All I maintain is that I have given it of my best. Tonight I stand unalterably opposed to the organization with which I have trained since the beginning.

"From time to time circumstances have arisen which have caused me to have suspicions as to whether everything was right. But it was not until indubitable proof was brought home to me that those in whom I had faith were not acting in good faith that I withdrew. In so doing I proposed remaining outside of political life for the rest of my days. Within a few days, however, of that time, Senator Colby called upon me and after he had presented to me the condition of affairs in the State as told by him to you tonight, I felt that I should be doing much less than my duty did I not attempt in a small way to bring about a better condition of affairs.

"In pursuance of that resolution, not for the sake of the office, but because I honestly believe that I may in some measure help those who have labored for the accomplishment of the objects stated tonight, I announce myself a candidate for the regular Republican nomination for the office of Assemblyman from this district. And I propose to fight as hard as I know how to accomplish this end. I need the help, however, of every man who believes in righteousness and civic purity, and if you believe in me I solicit your support no matter whether your influence be great or small.

"Of course I expect undivided support of the Plainfield machine. On two separate and distinct occasions I have been proclaimel as their candidate for the office of State Senator and they have discoursed on my eminent fitness for the position. If they were really loyal to me in regard to so important an office as State Senator they must be doubly loyal now when I seek the mere office of Assemblyman. Do you think they will be for me? Decidedly not, and why? If there were in influences working behind the scenes I know I could have their support, but under the present situation with orders coming from high sources I expect to be opposed by them solidly. If you believe in the principles of the Colbyites and believe that I will be faithful to my trust, I ask your support."

MINISTERS STIRRED BY REFORM MEETING

CLERICAL MEMBERS OF AUDIENCE APPLAUDED SPIRITEDLY.

Clerical opinion on the new idea in politics was well represented at the Colby mass meeting last night. Rev. Dr. Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church; Rev. George Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, were in the audience, and none was more interested or enthusiastic.

They listened with close attention to all the speakers, and every point scored by the reform orators received vigorous claps from clerical hands. They joined in all the demonstrations of enthusiasm that marked the meeting.

The meeting had peculiar interest for Mr. Goodrich. He was a schoolmate of Mr. Record in early life in New England. He went onto the platform after the meeting to shake his hand for the first time since those days. Both were delighted over the meeting.

GOLD MEDAL TROUPE CELEBRATE SEASON'S CLOSE.

Management Tenders the Artists and Guests a Dinner at Maul's.

Members of Muir's Gold Medal minstrel troupe and guests to the number of twenty-five in all, were tendered a full course dinner at Maul's hotel in the Notch, last night, by the management, in celebration of the success of the past season. The menu was excellent and the blackface artists enjoyed it immensely. Following cigars and coffee the entire first part of the Gold Medal show was given just as it was presented at Scotch Plains, New Market and other stops on the Kerosene circuit with the exception that all the end men introduced a batch of new gags.

During the dinner, Manager B. C. Firstbrook responded to a call for a speech in which he announced that the company would reorganize in September and that in the winter of 1906-07 entirely new territory would be visited. New costumes have been ordered and special scenery will be carried, if the press agent can be relied upon.

Adjourned Owners' Garage Meeting.

An adjourned meeting of automobile owners interested in organizing an owners' garage will be held at the Casino tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. In addition to those who have already signified their approval of the plan, the committee extends an invitation to all automobile owners who are interested in the movement to be present at this meeting.

Assigned to Paterson.

Rev. Father John J. Butscher, of this city, who was ordained to the priesthood on June 9, was yesterday assigned by Bishop O'Connor as curate of St. John's church, Paterson. He will be one of the assistants of Rev. Dean McNulty and will assume his new duties Friday. The field is an important one and will call for Father Butscher's best work.

Colby, Record and Fagan Expound "The New Idea" Convincingly to Representative Throng.

ELECTRIFY AUDIENCE

Machinations of Republican Organization in New Jersey Laid Bare—250 Recruits Mustered Into Reform Ranks.

Citizens of all degrees, from wage-earners to men of wealth and high places, filled the Plainfield theatre last night to hear the apostles of the new idea in politics sound the clarion call to the voters of Plainfield. The mass meeting was a tremendous success. Enthusiasm marked it for its own from beginning to end.

It was the kind of audience that men with a message seek. Taken as a whole, it was beautifully complete as a representative of the best in every station of the Plainfield electorate. From the helper in the machine shops up through the skilled mechanics, small tradesmen and professional men to the wealthy commuters, the types were there. Even the old settler was in evidence. And they were all in earnest. One could almost imagine that he caught their echoing thoughts as the speakers told of the conditions that brought them to the fighting line and the battle that was to be fought. They showed the feelings that moved them in the tense interest they paid to everything that was said. Middle-aged men said it was the finest political meeting they had ever attended.

Women were in evidence among the audience. Their handclaps swelled the plaudits, and some of them were as vigorous in giving expression to their enthusiasm as their escorts.

The meeting started promptly on time. The crowd was in the seats by eight o'clock and Chairman Henry L. Hall opened it a few minutes later. He made a most admirable chairman.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said in opening, "we are here for business, and we will get down to it at once," and he brought Senator Everett Colby forward as the first speaker with the briefest of brief introductions. That was the nearest approach the chairman made to speech-making during the evening. He introduced the other three speakers with Spartan brevity.

Senator Colby's companions in the trinity of Reform, Corporation Counsel George L. Record and Mayor Mark Fagan, of Jersey City, spoke after him. Mr. Record's speech was the pre-eminent one of the evening. Eloquent, logical, forceful and convincing, he worked on the audience and aroused them to a pitch that carried them beyond themselves. Judge Runyon's announcement of his candidacy for the Assembly nomination, which came after Mr. Record's speech, aroused the greatest show of feeling that marked the meeting, but that was a display of heart interest. Mr. Record scored the triumph of pure oratory. The man who started the story that George Record was not an interesting speaker was proven a liar last night.

There were some people at the meeting who interested the audience, in a way almost as much as the men on the platform. Senator Ackerman was there, and so was Former Senator Charles A. Reed, and Mayor Smalley, and Charles J. Fisk, who is chairman of the Republican City Committee, Tax Commissioner F. H. Andrews, and Tax Commission Clerk Thomas Hanna, and George Weaver, who is assistant city clerk and stenographer to City Clerk MacMurray. James E. Martine was there, frankly delighted with the resounding whacks administered to party corruptionists. He jumped up on the platform after the meeting and shook hands warmly with Record and Fagan.

Senator Colby had left earlier in the evening.

"It makes me feel good to see rascals of any stripe pilloried," said the former orator. "There is no city any needier for reform than this."

Senator Colby's speech was not extended, but it was crammed full of meat. He told the story of his awakening, of how his eyes had been opened to the way in which the legislative machine worked, and fight

TRAP SHOOTING ILLEGAL.

New Jersey Law in a Test Case Upheld by Court of Last Resort.

Trenton, June 20.—The Court of Errors and Appeals dealt a last blow to trap shooting at live birds Monday by handing down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the law under which this practice is proprohibited. The decision sustains the conviction of Charles W. Davis and Rudolph F. Harned, two members of the Riverton Gun Club, who, after the passage of the act, arranged to test its validity by shooting at live pigeons released from traps in the presence of a constable. They were at once arrested. To cover all the legal points involved one of the men killed his bird and the other missed his. Both were convicted.

The Supreme Court in an opinion by Justice Fort sustained each conviction and declared the law constitutional. The Court of Errors based its decision upon Justice Fort's opinion.

English in England.

"Like I did" and "whom he said was his brother" are now frequently to be met in the press; indeed, the latter solecism is almost universal. We constantly read in novels of "a non-committal shake of the head."

We are shaky about our "shalls" and "wills." A precocious child well known to the writer, recently in saying the Lord's Prayer at his mother's knee surprised her by the phrase, "Thy shall be done." Being corrected, he defended his version in the words: "No, only servants says 'will'; papa always says 'shall'; and now I will not say any prayers at all."—From the Fortnightly Review.

Heretofore, in order to reach the shore from North Jersey, it was necessary to travel a circuitous route to New Brunswick, to Old Bridge, but by opening the new span between Perth Amboy and South Amboy there will be a direct road to Matawan and along the coast.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Old Home Week in New Jersey.

"Old Home Week," a celebration such as Louisville, Ky., is having, is a New England idea. The Kentucky celebration, in a more elaborate scale, has attracted wider attention, and has encouraged those who advocate the establishment of the custom in other States. The Jersey City Journal seconds a suggestion when it asks "How would it do to have an 'Old Home Day' for New Jersey people who have wandered from their homes?" and to this question we believe the answer comes in full approval of the proposition. State pride and home-loving instinct are as strong in Jerseymen as in the natives of any State in the Union, and there is abundant reason for it. Kentucky's motto, "Once a Kentuckian always a Kentuckian," may be paraphrased by Jerseymen now living away from New Jersey, with strict fidelity to truth. Back to "Old Kentucky" more than 100,000 of the 600,000 Kentuckians living in other States responded to the invitation for the "Old Home Week," and are singing "My Old Kentucky Home," and enjoying the visit to their formed homes. The invitation to the Jerseymen abroad would arouse a like enthusiasm to visit their own beloved State. In looking over the census figures the Jersey City Journal has found that 225,333 natives of New Jersey were living in other States when the last general census was compiled. New York has 77,535 natives of New Jersey and Pennsylvania has 54,859, the aggregate in the two representing more than half of the wanderers, though every State has some of them, even Alaska having 98 and Hawaii 62, while in addition to these there are 1,761 in the naval and military service over the earth. New England has 17,556 of our wanderers and the South Atlantic States 11,435. Illinois has the largest colony in the Western States, numbering 11,807. Besides all these there is scarcely a nation that has not some Jerseymen. We believe, with our Jersey City contemporary, that a large number of these wanderers would be pleased to visit their old homes on the occasion of an "Old Home Week," and that even if a small portion of them responded to the invitation the celebration would be a joyful event and worth while trying. How would it do for Elizabeth to inaugurate the "home-coming celebration" for Jerseymen? An opportune time for this city to fix for such an occasion would be in Septehber, 1909, during the week planned for the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Hudson river. Before Hendrik Hudson's men discovered the river a crew from the little ship Half Moon sailed through Staten Island Sound and landed upon the site of this town. Elizabeth has, therefore, a peculiar interest in the Hudson celebration, and should not let go by the opportunity it will afford for a home celebration. Among the many thousands who, to do honor to Hudson, will gather in this vicinity from all parts of the Union and from abroad, a considerable number will be natives of New Jersey, and to them the "Old Home Week" feature would be pleasing. September, 1909, is three years off, it is true, but it is none too early to begin to plan for a celebration which would be worthy and notable.—Elizabeth Journal.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

George Primrose and his big minstrel company of comedians, vocalists, dancers and musicians will be the special attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, June 29, presenting genuine black-face minstrelsy amid Southern plantation surroundings. It was Mr. Primrose's complaint for several years past that real minstrelry was receiving too little attention in the so-called minstrel entertainments. For that reason, when he decided to exploit the real thing last season, his earnest and fondest desire was to have the biggest and best black-face minstrel organization ever organized. The result has satisfied his most sanguine anticipations, and he again promises theatre-goers a minstrel performance that shall be replete with clever comedy, brilliant music, surprising and entertaining specialties, and best of all, the old-time minstrel songs and darkey characters. Burnt cork will cover the faces of all the performers. The big spectacular number of the entertainment is entitled, "The Evolution of the Negro." It comes at the close of the performance and comprises five pictures, depicting a negro plantation, Old Kentucky home, emancipation and the Darkey Heaven. George Primrose himself has an act, said to be the best in which he has ever appeared. It has two beautiful scenes and is entitled, "Twilight on the Plantation." The first scene is a representation of a lob cabin "Way down South in Dixie," while overhead droop the protecting shadows of a spreading oak. The other scene presents a fascinating view of a cotton field in bloom with hill and river environment, the whole reviewed at sunrise, sunset and nightfall, while the radiance of the moon bathes them in a soft, tranquil light. It is in this moonlight scene that Mr. Primrose will give a soft-shoe dance, assisted by the Cotton Blossom coons.

Alden E. Moore, of Williams College, has returned home for the summer vacation.

SOME RULES TO GOVERN THE UNTRAINED NURSE.

Little Annoyances Which Should Be Avoided in the Sick Room.

Obey the physician unquestionably.

Don't talk about the patient's condition in her hearing.

Never give medicine without the advice of the doctor.

Don't talk to the patient nor to any one else, of what she talks of in a delirium.

Move around the room in a light gentle way, letting your very step bespeak the cheer of your heart.

Show your confidence in the swift recovery of your patient.

Act as if it were a pleasure to do the task before you.

If you have not naturally a low, firm, pleasant voice, cultivate one. It can be done. Recoveries have been retarded by a hoarse, rasping voice or a shrill one that grated on the nerves of the pateint.

Don't fuss and fidget about the room. Calmness, an air of knowing what you are about to do, will inspire confidence and respect in the patient.

If you are inclined to be fidgety, provide yourself with sewing or embroidery, and sit quietly. Don't talk to the patient unless her recovery is so far progressed that you are expected to entertain her.

Don't seem to be in a hurry at anything. Nothing so composes the patient as a composed nurse.

Never trust to your eye in giving medicine. Always measure accurately with a dropper or marked glass, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Never give anything inwardly or outwardly, without carefully reading the label twice. Fatal mistakes have been made by nurses who "thought" they knew.

Don't arrange your hair, work over your nails or fuss over any part of your toilet in the presence of the patient.

Don't wear squeaky shoes or clothing that rustles and rattles. Rubber heels are necessary in a sick room. A pair of white canvas shoes, such as were worn in the summer, are nice for this purpose.

Never sit down on the bed, nor lean upon it. An inexperienced nurse will do this without dreaming of the extent to which it irritates the patient. Have a chair handy, or stoop over.

Do not touch with your hands anything the patient is to put in her mouth. In offering the patient a pill, place it first upon a teaspoon.

Don't taste the food you offer her. Don't bring more than she can eat and never let it stand around, in the hope that she may eat it later. Every vestige of the meat must be removed as soon as the patient has finished.

Much of the above may sound like platitudes, but it is perfectly true that many home nurses whose concientiousness would not permit any great eversight, may yet with the best intention in the world be guilty of many of these little annoyances which set the nerves of a sensitive patient on edge.—Exchange.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Plainfield Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

Danger signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Plainfield proof:

Oliver H. Voorhees, job printer, living at 21 Stone street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was suffering from kidney weakness for a long time, due, probably, to my being compelled to be on my feet so much of the time. On arising in the morning I would find myself very weak, and suffering from severe pain in the back and sides, accompanied with headache. The kidney secretions were of bad odor, and the desire to pass them was too frequent. I could not seem to find either a doctor to cure me, or a medicine that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy. Before I took three boxes I was relieved of my aches and pains, and my kidneys were well again."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

FATHER NOTIFIED SON HE WOULD KILL HIMSELF.

Told Him He Would Find Parent's Body in Cellar, and the Son Found It.

When Milton Unger arose yesterday morning at his home, No. 217 North Sixth street, Newark, he found a note addressed to him in his father's handwriting, which read:

"Milton: Get the check cashed at once before Weinberg gets his cashed. I am all broke down and cannot stand any more troubles like I have. So good-bye. Take care of Miss Hattie. My body you will find in the cellar."

Unger went to the cellar and found the body of his father, Aaron Unger, fifty-two years old, suspended by a rope from a beam.

Milton Unger said the "Miss Hattie" referred to his sister, but none of the family has any knowledge of a check, nor does any one know of any Weinberg with whom the father had dealings.

Unger told County Physician McKenzie that his father sustained a severe fall about a week ago and he suspected the injury he then received had resulted in the loss of his mind.

JUDGE W. N. RUNYON.

The most remarkable demonstration ever made in honor of any citizen of Plainfield was accorded to Judge William N. Runyon at the Colbyites mass meeting last night when he announced himself as a candidate to serve the people in the Assembly. The bewildering scene was one that must have made his good father, Judge Nelson Runyon, feel proud that he has a son who has so won the merited regard of his fellow citizens.

When the young judge appeared before a veritable sea of faces he was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm and when he had concluded his brief remarks the crowd broke loose again in wild applause. Especially flattering was the tribute when it is considered that men of affluence and wealth, clergymen, doctors, lawyers, bankers, brokers and merchants as well as hundreds of skilled mechanics, all sober thinking men, vied with one another in paying homage to the man who had declined a proffered judgeship with emoluments of $5,000 a year in order that he might better consecrate himself to the cause of good government.

While the tribute paid to Runyon was a most sincere and enthusiastic one, it is to be noted that Senator Colby, Mayor Fagan and Corporation Counsel came in for unusual honors, the big audience heartily applauding their every expression. Veteran politicians, who have attended political gatherings for many decades said that no such a demonstration was ever witnessed in Plainfield and that augured well for the success of the popular young judge who then and there submitted his cause to the people.

JOHNSON SEES STOKES

Closeted For a Long Time With Governor—Briggs Was Absent.

DENIES AN ALLEGIANCE

Bergen's Possibility Says He's Not Committed on Senatorship.

There was very little politics around the State House at Trenton yesterday. The eloquent tributes paid to the late Justice Dixon by the combined courts in the morning, and the examination of teachers by the State Board of Medical Examiners on Hygiene and Medical Jurisprudence in the Assembly Chamber, were the features of the day.

Yet there were many little incidents of a political nature. Governor Stokes did not arrive from Philadelphia until nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The groups of visitors and inquirers that had been awaiting him in the executive chamber for some hours mostly dispersed, and only a small fringe of anxious men sat around. They were chiefly those who wanted to know whether the remaining appointments of the county boards of equalization were ever to be made, or whether it was true that politics was obstructing them.

The fact that several big railroad experts and lawyers were present added to the gossip on the subject. When interrogated, however, they declared that they were there only to listen to some arguments on the tax question, which did not in the least involve the boards.

The most impatient visitor who awaited the Governor, and at once went into private conference with him, was ex-Senator William M. Johnson. This is the second time within the last month that Mr. Johnson has come over quietly to see the Governor when he could not be interrupted. The Bergen statesman, who has a host of advocates for his candidacy for Governor, said he came down on private business and called to pay his respects. The fact that he waited a long time to get in his respects and the absence of State Treasurer Briggs, his possible rival for the governorship, were not regarded as at all remarkable. Perhaps the story afloat in Bergen county that Mr. Johnson was for Dryden for Senator and had recently written a letter to a friend denouncing the reformers was the real cause of the visit.

Mr. Johnson is a shrewd, conservative politician, and emphatically denied yesterday that he had committed himself in any way to anybody. He is a great friend of the Governor, and likes to talk over the situation with him. The truth is that Stokes is always glad to see Johnson and get his views.

Whatever may have occurred at the conference yesterday, it is safe to state that Johnson did not inform Stokes that he was for Dryden, nor did he withdraw his gubernatorial aspirations in favor of Briggs, as was rumored. Johnson is very much in evidence.

While Stokes was obliged to stay in Philadelphia, Colonel Anthony R. Kuser, Senator Dryden's son-in-law, walked down the corridor of the State House. He had been here since he put out his interview declaring the Governor was for Dryden. It was soon after non. The colonel, with head erect, walked past the entrance to the executive chamber. Receiving a jip, he thanked the tipster and, walking down through the Assembly chamber, where the teachers were trying to answer the question, "Why does the air in summer contain more bacetria than the air in winter?" entered the Speaker's room. That is the room temporarily occupied by the State Board of Assessors.

The colonel greeted Major Lentz, of Newark, and David Baird, of Camden. After an earnest but rather brief talk the colonel took the rear elevator of the building and went to the banking and insurance department to see Superintendent Watkins. The latter had departed for the day, however.

Chairman Hillery was not here, nor did he give any intimation as to the date of the next meeting of the Insurance Committee.

Senator Avis, chairman of the Riparian Investigating Committee, was here yesterday, and seemed very much disappointed because Wakelee was not on hand to prepare for starting the committee's work.

Frank S. Hyatt, who is thought by many to have made one of the best examiners in the history of the department, has resigned to take effect when he completes the investigation he is now making at Asbury Park. His resignation has been accepted with regret by Superintendent Watkins in a letter expressing high appreciation of Mr. Hyatt's work. Hyatt resigns to take the management of a big industrial concern in Brooklyn, founded by his father, who died recently.

George L. Record stopped off yesterday morning from Burlington county, where he spoke at the large reform meeting the night previous. He shid it was a splendid meeting in every way.

"I saw Speaker Robbins in the back of the hall," said Mr. Record, "and he looked down in the dumps."

A few minutes later, Speaker Robbins came down the corridor. When told what Mr. Record had said, the Speaker answered: "Yes, I was there; but I did not smile." He admitted it was a pretty good meeting.

After some discussion between Attorney General McCarter and Edwin R. Walker, counsel for County Clerk Baker of Mercer county in the Court of Errors and Appeals, it was agreed that the argument in the suit to test the constitutionality of the new Assembly Redistricting bill shall begin on Wednesday, June 27.

COLBYITES' INVASION

he made to beat its allies and its influences in his county.

In opening Mr. Colby spoke of the big crowd and what a measure of success it promised here. In Essex, the first meeting had been of a handful of men in a private house who met to pledge adherence to the doctrine of the new idea in politics. He explained what the new idea meant; the discussion of political matters openly and by all the people, not by the machine behind closed doors.

Some people had said, he continued, that if the idea was carried out it would be too dangerous, that the fathers of the country had meant to guard against that, and they pointed to the electoral college as a support of that contention. That had been a machine argument since Tweed's day. But time had changed; newspapers and the habits of the people, the spread of reading and of education had made it easy for the people to exchange views rapidly, and the people of today knew what they wanted. There was no reason for a political machine.

For 12 or 15 years the people had allowed the management of their affairs to go into the hands of a few men while they chased the almighty dollar. The few had learned that they could combine business and politics, and the corporations had allied themselves with the machine. The government of the State now rested in the hands of about six men. It was time to take away their power and put it where it belonged, with the people.

For the guidance of the young man in politics, the speaker, with an apology for the personal allusions, traced his own experience. He told how he had been picked up and nominated by the boss of Essex county and how his first year at Trenton he had done as he was bidden. The second year, at the request of his constituents, he had sought to establish the principle of limited franchises, and his eyes were opened. He was warned by the leaders that if he pressed a limited franchise bill he would lose every friend he had in Essex county. Now why, asked Mr. Colby, was he then supposed to be facing the loss of all his friends? Because he was trying to give his constituents what they wanted.

The speaker told how every influence of the corporations was arrayed against him in the places of legislative power, and recounted his battle for the principle on the floor of the house. He told how a state leader had called him to his office, where he sat with P. S. C. officials, and he was told that "our friends here were very much annoyed by his resolution. They had amended it, and would let it pass as amended." Mr. Colby then asked how they came to be dictating what the legislature should do, and he was told "not to be ridiculous."

His experience with railroad taxation reform was the same. He had gone into a party caucus with a bill on it, and no man there could give him a good reason against it. He went to ne of them afterwards and asked them why the bill was not supported by the caucus. "Don't you know, Colby, that the Pennsylvania Railroad will raise h——?" was the answer, and it was the only one he got.

He went back to Essex and started his fight at the primaries. He found all the corporations and the entire organization against him. Not because he was not honest, not because he was incompetent—worse men had been sent to the legislature by the organization—but because they couldn't afford to have a man in the legislature who would introduce bills on his own hook and for the good of the people. He was too apt to ask awkward questions and start the people talking.

Mr. Colby showed how bills were smothered in committee, and how pernicious legislation went through quickly while good bills were shuffled away and killed in the dark. He spoke for the passage of a law compelling chairmen of committees to report bills when a certain percentage of legislators demanded it.

He said he believed the great majority of legislators were honest, and only needed a chance to vote for a good bill. Darkness and backstairs methods killed the good bills and exalted the bad ones. The movement for reform was spreading to every county, but the independents must work to carry it to successful climax. They must leave work and family for a time and think of representative government as it should be, and no power could prevent their success.

Corporation Counsel Record said that the existing situation reminded him of Rip Van Winkle's story. The country had just awaked to the fact that things were wrong politically, and men were looking at one another and asking what it all meant. It was a splendid time, the beginning of an era, as in 1830 when the anti-slavery agitation started. The conviction that a wrong was anchored somewhere in the laws was beginning to take hold of the people.

The wrong had its different phases, political, commercial, religious and social. He felt he had a message to tell of the political side.

Mr. Record told the story of his own political experience, recounting his entrance into the Democratic party when he came to Jersey City from New England as a young man, and how he had gradually realized the fact that the party was controlled by gangsters and corruptionists. How he went over to the Republican party in search of representative government, and how the awakening to the fact that things were wrong then came on him.

He told of Fagan's nomination as a forlorn hope, his election by 5,000 majority over the son-in-law of the Democratic boss, and the beginning of the battle for reform that has now spread through the State. Mr. Record told, as he did at Elizabeth when the Colby league was organized, how the corporations were understood, and how they fought to block an increase, using Republican leaders as facilely as they had used Democratic ones. He told how the State leaders declared they must not press an equalization of taxation bill, and how they showed their teeth when the Jersey City reformers dared to go n, and sought to destroy them.

There was no politics between the leaders of the two parties, Mr. Record said, simply business, with the P. S. C. and the associated railroads of the State in control of the whole machinery. The corporations did not care what party won the election, so long as the regular organization made the "regular" nominations.

A generation had grown up that stayed away from the primaries, and the machine men controlled nominations. They had a nice little system of furnishing legislative dummies. It was not common for them to send outright grafters to Trenton. They usually picked respectable nominees, but men of negative character and no courage. Men who were led by slaps on the back and hearty greetings from the "great" men. Resolutions were slipped into their hands and they introduced things "by request." They were either too simple to see they were being used or too weak to protest. Young men had been ruined by the insidious flattery of the leaders and the tempting bait of future officers and other forms of "easy money."

The way to cure the evils, Mr. Record said earnestly, was to speak everywhere of the new idea and to come out at the primaries. He urged that September 25 be observed as a new day of independence—Primary Day, the beginning of the voter's independence of the boss. He would speak as if they were are Republicans, he said, and urge them to go solidly to the primaries of the party. To go to Democracy was to jump from the frying pan into the fire and an independent party was a wasted effort. Let them rally as members of the Republican party and wrest the control of nominations from the clique.

Mr. Record urged the voters to make every candidate pledge himself to definite things. Under the new idea he believed that in five years young men would come forward seeking nominations at the hands of the people, with high ideals of politics and personal honor, and the Democratic party, seeing the manner in which Republicanism flourished in decency and righteousness, would be rejuvenated on exactly the same lines; then the people would control nominations and not the corporations.

The Colby leaders had been charged with ambitions. Of course they were ambitious. No decent, warm-blooded man, who amounted to anything, was without ambition. Their ambition was decent and seemly; they were ambitious to win honors from their fellow citizens, not rewards from corporations.

Mr. Record referred to Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, as the type of ambitious young men with the new idea. He aroused a storm of applause in referring to the departure of the two senators of New Jersey from the Senate when La Follette spoke on the Rate Bill, by saying, "The fools! Within six years the people will permanently vacate the seats they left temporarily that day."

A new way must be established, the speaker said. The seekers for office must come before the people in the old-fasioned way. Two questions only concerned the people: Are the principles of, and the services promised, by the candidate what the people want; and can he be believed? Those questions answered, what difference does it make to the people if the candidate present himself or be named by a clique.

Mr. Record made his one personal illusion of the evening at this point. He was a candidate for the United States senatorship, he said, because he did not purpose to see the fight go by default. Vigorous applause greeted the statement. "Don't let any man go to the assembly this year unless he tells you who he is for," said Mr. Record. "Insist on a declaration."

That would put the candidate of the machine in a dilemma, he said. If he said he was for Dryden he stood no chance of election; if he said he was against Dryden, he couldn't get a cent from the machine.

Mr. Record closed with an urgent appeal to turn out at the primaries. If they did that and made the candidates say who they are for, nothing, no political machine, no association of wealth could stop the onward march of the movement.

Mr. Fagan arose to speak after 10 o'clock. He said it was too late and too hot to speak at length, and he made a very brief address. If the citizens wanted political reform, he said, they must begin at home and take an active interest in their party organization. He urged the voters to remember Primary Day, "Your Independence Day," he called it.

He intimated that he would return to the city at another time and tell what he knew of the things that made the reform movement necessary. It was not a spasm, he said: it was as broad as it was deep, and was spreading broadcast over the State. Every night, in every corner of the field they have covered, the reform leads have met the same large, earnest audiences.

Before the meeting closed enrollment cards were passed through the audience. Judge Runyon asked those who believed in the principles of the League to sign them, and announced that steps for the organization of ward branches would be started shortly. He repeated his exposure of the threats that had been made by the organization to attack the supporters of the Colby movement, and he pledged himself to keep secret the names of those who were vulnerable to the attack.

Over 250 signed cards and turned them over to the Judge as the audience filed out.

Among those who gave him his card was D. E. Titsworth, of the Potter Press Works. "Don't keep my name secret," he said with grim earnestness.

Rev. George Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Mr. Titsworth's pastor, shook the Judge warmly by the hand. "I am going to work for you," he said.

Mr. Shaw is also pastor of Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Republican county committee.

MASTER BAKERS WILL DISCUSS STATE LAWS.

First Annual Session of State Association to Take Place Today at Trenton.

Trenton, June 20.—The first annual convention of the Master Bakers' Association of New Jersey took place in this city yesterday in the headquarters of the Retail Grocers' Association, 224 South Warren street.

Delegates to the number of nearly threescore arrived in this city this morning, and after dinner at the Hotel Sterling the convention was called to order at 2 p. m. by the president, Willard C. Cutter, of this city. The principal business of the session will be the consideration of resolutions relative to new laws by the next Legislature pertaining to the bakery business.

The State laws as applied to sanitary arrangements and employment of apprentices is not to the liking of the association, and the legislative committee of the organization will be directed by resolution to endeavor to have the law amended in this respect. At present the age limit for apprentices is eighteen years, and this is too exacting according to the belief of the members. The association will ask that the age limit be placed at sixteen years.

The law as applied to the sanitary arrangements anent the bringing of bread into this State from New York and Philadelphia will also be considered. It is charged that some dealers in the North and South Jersey towns who buy from New York and Philadelphia bakeries are negligent as regards protecting the breadstuff against contamination en route.

The membership of the association is 176, and the officers are as follows: President, W. C. Cutter, Trenton; vice-president, secretary, Chas. Keisler, Jersey City; treasurer, E. E. Voles, Elizabeth. The association was organized in June, 1905, at Elizabeth, with a membership of 150.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS ARE FOR BRYAN.

Judge Vroom, Colonel Hurley, Edward M. Reading and Others Want Him for President.

Trenton, June 20.—"The best follower of William J. Bryan today is the present occupant of the White House, Theodore Roosevelt." This sentiment, expressed by Judge Garret D. W. Vroom, one of the lay judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals and a Democrat of the old line, is one of the signs that the revivified Bryan boom has struck Trenton.

Judge Vroom voted for Bryan in 1900, and he says he is good enough for him for 1908. "I believe him one of the greatest men in the country today politically," said Judge Vroom.

Colonel Michael Hudley, a member of the Democratic State Committee, said:

"There seems to be nothing to stop Mr. Bryan from being the next Democratic nominee, and no one is desirous of stopping him. He is clearly one of the greatest statesmen the country has ever seen, and the occupant of the White House has been trying to force on the Republican party the things which Bryan has been advocating for ten years."

Edward M. Reading, former chairman of the Democratic county committee of Mercer, declares that Bryan is the greatest commoner in the world and the man who should be elected next President of the United States. Similar views are expressed by Counselor William J. Jamieson, Counselor Martin Devlin and other prominent Democratic leaders.

LAW OR NO LAW, THEY WOULD BE MARRIED.

Couple Could Not Wait, So Jersey City Justice Obligingly Tied the Knot.

A fashionably dressed couple went Monday to the County Clerk's office in Jersey City and inquired about the marriage laws. They were told that to be married at once one of the contracting parties must be a resident of the State; that if both were non-residents a marriage license would be necessary and that five days must elaspse between the date of the granting of the license and the performance of the ceremony.

"My!" the woman said. "That won't do at all," the man replied.

After a moment's consultation the man said he would like to have the ceremony performed at once. Justice of the Peace Charles Sweeney, who is a clerk in the Surrogate's office, was summoned and he led the couple into the Grand Jury room.

The man said he was Edward Harris Metcalf, civil engineer, of Pasadena, Cal. The woman said she was Eva M. Coombs. To comply with the law she gave a Jersey City address, though it is believed from her conversation that she, too, is a resident of California. Both gave their age as twenty-seven years.

After the ceremony was performed the bridegroom thanked Justice Sweeney and slipped a greenback into his hand.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Azienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Azienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." LITERARY NOTES.

An examination of The Red Book Magazine for July leads to the conclusion that the interest of the stories in the issue is no less great than the charm of the distinctly American canoe-girl whose portrait forms the cover. Some account of timeliness is taken in giving Henry Louis Mencken's Fourth-of-July story, "The King and Tommy Cripps," the first place in the number. Poor little Tommy's patrotic attempt to celebrate his nation's natal day in a foreign land was marked by ill luck for Tommy, but all came aright in the end—even for the king. William Hamilton Osborne's story in the July issue, entitled, "The Wicked Waste at Wilkinson's" is concerned with a girl's extraordinary management of a cotton mill in the face of strikes and trusts; and Campbell MacCulloch's account of "Trimming an Infant," may perhaps deter other infants from being "trimmed." Readers of magazines have learned to look to the far west for those stories of broad humor which make for laughter rather than for smiles.

There is a touch of Edgar Allan Poe in the strong, weird story, "The Hat and the Man," by Henry Irving Dodge, in the Woman's Home Companion for July, that is heightened by Dan Beard's effective illustratians. Among other original tales and sketches are Clara Morris' reminiscence, "My Pirate;" "A Nice Little Thing in Blue," by Miriam Michelson; "From the Van Cleeve Jewel-Box," by Anne O'Hagan; "The Adopted Doll," "The Studio Baby," and a touching little Japanese picture, "The Honorable Gust of the Mother-Heart." The real feature of the magazine is the strong article by John Spargo entitled "Child Slaves of the Slums," practically the first gun of the great fight the Woman's Home Companion is waging against child labor. Two interesting questions are raised by the articles entitled "Shall We Reform Our Spelling?" by Mary Bronson Hartt; "Has the Club-Women Supplanted the Church-Woman?" by Charlotte Perkins Gilman. "The Vagaries of the Hat-Maker" is an amusing bit of everyday philosophy by Sophie Kerr Underwood.

ADAM NOT FIRST MAN.

Pastor Startles Orthodox Hearers by Citing Prehistoric Facts.

Central Valley, Conn., June 20.—Rev. Andrew McLeod, Congregational pastor here, startled his hearers Sunday evening by saying that Adam was not the first man, that the earth was very old when Adam came upon it and was inhabited by a pre-Adamic race.

In Egypt and China, as well as in Mexico and Old America, have been found writings and skeletons of mammalia that point to a race long existing before Adam's time. The sermon created much discussion with his orthodox hearers. In a former sermon he took the liberty to dispute the inspiration of the Old Testiment in its entirety.

If the county boards of taxation provided for under a law of this year's Legislature suppose that they will be performing the functions with which they are invested by employing a force of clerks, opening an office and notifying the public that they are ready for business they are very much mistaken. These officials are charged with certain specific and important duties, which they are well paid for performing and which the people will expect them to perform. There are three members in each of the twenty-one counties. In Essex and Hudson counties they get $2,400 a year each; in Passaic, $2,00 each; in Bergen, Camden, Mercer and Union, $1,600 each; in Middlesex and Monmouth, $1,400 each; in Atlantic, Burlington, Cumberland and Morris, $1,200 each, and in Cape May, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Ocean, Salem, Somerset, Sussex and Warren, $1,000 each. They are required "to view and inspect, so far as possible in all cases, the various assessed properties in the various taxing districts in their respective counties and to make their revision and corrections after such view and inspection."

This does not, of course, mean that the members shall personally examine as tax experts all the taxable properties in the county whether the assessments made by the local assessors are accepted and agreed to or not, but it plainly means that they must carefully examine for themselves all properties on which the assessment is remonstrated against as excessive. It will not do for them to content themselves with hearing reports from others and depending on their clerks to do most of the work. It will be demanded by the people of New Jersey that this new taxing body, costing the taxpayers probably not far from $75,000 a year shall perform with thoroughness the efficiency the important work the law imposes upon them. These are not sinecures and soft snaps.

Former Mayor and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk and family, of West Seventh street, left yesterday for East Hampton, L. I., where they will occupy their summer home for the season.

Col. Mason W. Tyler, of this city, is attending the exercises attendant upon the installation of Dr. Demarest as president of Rutgers College, today. He represents Amherst College.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

It was heady wine for the morning. He described himself briefly as a lunatic, and walked on again. But the crazy notion would not be gone. The day before he had been passive. Now he was active, acutely aware of himself and all his wants. He walked a mile trying to dismiss the idea. He sat down again, and it flooded back upon him with new force.

Her people were gone. She had even intimated a wish to talk with him again. It could be done quickly. He knew. He felt the primitive superiority of man's mere brute force over woman. He gloried in his knotted muscles and the crushing power of his desires.

Afterward, she would reproach him bitterly. They would both be unhappy. It was no matter. It was the present, the time when he should be living. He would have her, and Shepler—Shepler might have had the One Girl mine—but this girl, never!

He crossed the ferry and went to the hotel, where he shaved and freshened himself. He found Grant, the porter, waiting for him when he went downstairs, and gave him written directions to the railroad people to have the car attached to the Chicago express leaving at eight the next morning; also instructions about his baggage.

"I expect there will be two of us, Grant; see that the car is well stocked; and here, take this; go to a florist's and get about four dozen pink roses—La France—can you remember?—pink—don't take any other color, and be sure they're fresh. Have breakfast ready by the time the train starts."

"Yes, Mistah Puhs'val!" said Grant, and added to himself: "Yo suttiny do ca'y yo'self mighty han'some, Mistah Man!"

Going out of the hotel, he met Launton Oldaker, with whom he chatted a few moments, and then bade good-by.

Oldaker, with a sensitive regard for the decencies, refrained from expressing the hearty sympathy he felt for a man who would henceforth be compelled to live out of the world.

Percival walked out to Broadway, revolving his plan. He saw it was six o'clock. He could do nothing for at least an hour. When he noted this he became conscious of his hunger. He had eaten nothing since morning. He turned into a restaurant on Madison square and ordered dinner. When he had eaten, he sat with his coffee for a final smoke of deliberation. He went over once more the day's arguments for and against the novel emprise. He had become insensible, however, to all the dissenting ones. As a last rally, he tried to picture the difficulties he might encounter. He faced all he could imagine.

"By God, I'll do it!"

"Oui, monsieur!" said the waiter, who had been standing dreamily near, startled into attention by the spoken words.

"That's all—give me the check."

He drove first to the Milbrey house, on the chance that she might be at home. Jarvis answered his ring.

"Miss Milbrey is with Mrs. Van Geist, sir." Jarvis spoke regretfully. He had reasons of his own for believing that the severance of the Milbrey relationship with Mr. Bines had been nothing short of calamitous.

He rang Mrs. Van Geist's bell, five minutes later.

"The ladies haven't come back, sir. I don't know where they might be. Perhaps at the Valners', in Fifty-second street, sir."

He rang the Valners' bell.

"Mrs. Van Geist and Miss Milbrey? They left at least half an hour ago, sir."

"Go down the avenue slowly, driver!"

At Fortieth street he looked down to the middle of the block.

Mrs. Van Geist, alone, was just alighting from her coupe.

He signaled the driver.

"Go to the other address again, in Thirty-seventh street."

Jarvis opened the door.

"Yes, sir, thank you, sir—Miss Milbrey is in, sir. I'll see, sir."

He crossed the Rubicon of a doormat and stood in the unlighted hall. At the far end he saw light coming from a door that he knew opened into the library.

Jarvis came into the light. Behind him appeared Miss Milbrey in the doorway.

"Miss Milbrey says will you enter the library, Mr. Bines?"

CHAPTER XXX.

SOME RUDE BEHAVIOR, OF WHICH ONLY A WESTERN MAN COULD BE GUILTY.

He walked quickly back. At the doorway she gave him her hand, which he took in silence.

"Why—Mr. Bines!—you wouldn't have surprised me last night. To-night I pictured you on your way west."

Her gown was of dull blue dimity. She still wore her hat, an arch of straw over her face, with ripe red cherries nodding upon it as she moved. He closed the door behind him.

"Do come in. I've been having a solitary rummage among old things. It is my last night here. We're leaving for the country to-morrow, you know."

She stood by the table, the light from a shaded lamp making her color glow.

Now she noted that he had not spoken. She turned quickly to him as if to question.

He took a swift little step toward her, still without speaking. She stepped back with a sudden instinct of fright.

He took two quick steps forward and grasped one of her wrists. He spoke in cool, even tones, but the words came fast:

"I've come to marry you to-night; to take you away with me to that western country. You may not like the life. You may grieve to death for all I know—but you're going. I won't plead, I won't beg, but I am going to take you."

She had begun to pull away in alarm when he seized her wrist. His grasp did not bruise, it did not seem to be tight; but the hand that held it was immovable.

"Mr. Bines, you forget yourself. Really, this is—"

"Don't waste time. You can say all that needs to be said—I'll give you time for that before we start—but don't waste the time saying all those useless things. Don't waste time telling me I'm crazy. Perhaps I am. We can settle that later."

"Mr. Bines—how absurd! Oh! let me go! You're hurting my wrist! Oh!—don't—don't—don't! Oh!"

When he felt the slender wrist trying to writhe from his grasp he had closed upon it more tightly, and thrusting his other arm quickly behind her, had drawn her closely to him. Her cries and pleadings were being smothered down on his breast. Her struggles met only the unbending, pitiless resistance of steel.

"Don't waste time, I tell you—can't you understand? Be sensible—talk if you must—only talk sense."

"Let me go at once—I demand it—quick—oh!"

"Take this hat off!"

He forced the wrist he had been holding down between them, so that she could not free the hand, and with his own hand thus freed, he drew out the two long hat pins and flung the hat with its storm-tossed cherries across the room. Still holding her tightly, he put the free hand on her brow and thrust her head back, so that she was forced to look up at him.

The Ash Accumulation
It is often a real question what to do with the accumulation of ashes before the ash-man comes for them. The best answer to that question is "don't have any ashes to accumulate."
Get a gas range and do away with this as well as much other unnecessary labor. Every additional step adds to the burden of general housework. Why carry coal and dump ashes on hot summer days when that time could be saved for pleasuring and the house kept cool and comfortable by the use of a gas range.
Ranges $9.50 to $15.00. $2.00 down; $2.00 a month. Connections Free.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

The premier feature on Coney Island of the bids for patronage among the shows on Coney Island, The Deluge, which succeeds the ohnstown Flood, will undobutedly win the same approbation that its predecessor won during its long run for five years. The new presentation is based on the thrilling bibical story of Noah, the Ark and the great act of rertibution. The first scene shows the Ark being built in the wilderness. Noah uses his power of persuasion to turn the human race from the vortex of iniquity into which they have gradually degenerated. The second scene shows the licentious multitude intoxicated by wealth and power in a saturnalia of vice. Warnings are unheeded, and then the terrible calamity occurs that brings death to a million souls; humans fight with the lower animals for life, but that one boon, priceless now, is denied them. The lightnings play, thunder rolls, the waters rise gradually higher and higher until every building is inundated, the highest peaks are submerged, and death reigns supreme, to all save Noah and his family, who, under the protection of Omnipotence, escapes the general destruction. The waters gradually subside. Mt. Ararat appears and becomes the resting-place of the Ark; the animals come forth, and Noah and his family return thanks for Divine guidance and care. The ultimate end of the seed of Noah is then pictured in the betterment of the human race and an idea of the Millenium is presented. The Angels, under direction of Gabriel, sound Hallelujahs with their trumpets and unfold to wondering eyes the beauties of the Heavenly Kingdom, concluding with the reproduction of the beautiful allegorical pictures of the Millenium; when the child, holding in his hand the beautiful emblem of Christian civilization, bids lion and lamb to lie down together in harmony and peace.

One of the marvelous spectacles at Dreamland this season is one called "Pahroah's Daughter." This is by Roltair, the same man who conceived and executed "Creation." Hell Gate, which had great vogue last year, has been greatly improved and increased in capacity. The watters of the whirlpool are swifter and the general effect more exciting and exhilarating. The Miniature Railway and the House of Mirth, attractive feature of last season, are again in evidence, while Venice, particularly remembered by those who care for the quiter forms of amusement has been redecorated and will no doubt be liberally patronized during the coming season. Hale's Tours of the World in which the patron takes his trip in Pullman pallace cars, are represented by two of the biggest ones that have yet been built. A trip from New York to Dreamland in an air ship will be one of the most enjoyable of this season's forms of amusement. The Moki Indian village is expected to prove one of the sensations of the present season at the new Dreamland. A whole tribe of these Indians have been brought from the "painted desert" county and will give an exhibition of their mode of life and their native religious ceremonies and dances. One of the chiefs is a medicine man who does wonderful "stunts" with rattle snakes and other poisonous reptiles and is the leader in the famous "snake dances" of the tribe. There are no scouts, plainsmen or whites employed in this exhibition and it is a thoroughly "all-Indian" show. Ozark, the greatest shooting gallery in the world, is again to be the paradise of the amateur sportsman.

Between the "cowboy" and the "vaquero" there is but a slight line of demarcation. The former is generally an American, inured from youth to the vicissitudes and dangers of his avocation, and in the latter's veins flows the blood of the Mexican, or it may be that of the half-breed. The methods of the two in their work upon the cattle ranges are similar, and their associations have much in common. Your real vaquero, however, is much more of a study and sartorial swell than his strenuous colleague. He is fond of gaudy clothes and quite often the sombrero he wears, rich with its fanciful designs in gold and silver bullion, represents an outlay up into the hundreds of dollars. Rich embroidered jackets and high-heeled riding boots equipped with enormous spurs are also to his especial liking and help to make of the genuine Mexican vaquero an interesting and picturesque type. True tyes of this particular class are to be found with Pawnee Bill's Wild West, at Brighton Beach Park. The men illustrate methods pursued by them in connection with their life and calling, together with feats of horsemanship for which they are justly renowned. Besides the Pawnee Bill Wild West show there are lots of other attractions at Brighton Beach Park. Ferari's Wild Animal Kingdom, with its many groups of savage beasts with whom daring trainers do re-arena. And then there is "The Pike" where there is amusement for the multitude and ti suit every taste. The big bath houses are now open and hardy men and women make dailyy pilgrimages to get a dip in "old ocean."

Miss Jennie Anderson, of Somerville, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward, of New York, who have been visiting relatives here, have returned.

DIAMOND DUST.

Westfield will be here Saturday again to battle against the undefeated Plainfields. From some unknown source a report started out that the game will be played in Westfield, but there was no foundation for such an idea and the game will be played on Crescent Oval. The Mt. Ararat aggregation is fully peppered up to win the contest and promise to be here with the goods. The same nine that appeared in the fourteen-inning contest a few weeks ago will be on hand and Phil. Smith will oppose the invaders on the slab. Manager Daab had a game scheduled with the Philadelphia Quaker Giants but owing to the first class exhibition put up by the Westfields on their last trip here and to appease many fans he cancelled the contest to make room for the Westfields. The game will be started at 3 p. m.

Jimmy Bertwhistle will be unable to play with Plainfield on account of his Bridgeport engagement, and Manager Daab is out with hooks for a new left-fielder.

Jimmy Montross continues to pitch gilt-edged ball for Auburn in the Empire State League. His club is at the time leading the league.

Mintford and Overton, of this city, are executing fine battery work for East Millstone, and are the mainstay of the Middlesex county champions.

Kid Brogan is playing a star game for Hartford and has found his batting eye.

This is a good year for pitchers hitting the ball, when Waller and Deegan are cracking out home runs and three-baggers.

GOLF.

The events at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday will be the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup, play for the June cup and the semi-scratch competition. On Saturday, June 26, there will be the initial play for the boys' championship medal.

Play will be resumed on Saturday at the Park Golf Club for the President's and club trophies. The rain on Saturday last seriously interfered with this competition.

A big list of events is scheduled for the Plainfield Country Club on July 4, opening with play for the Indepedence Day cup, morning or afternoon; men's championship, first round; men's consolation and third eight cups, first round; and clock golf for women.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the pro at the Plainfield Country Club, has and is receiving much encouragement from the members of the club in perfecting his play of the game of golf. It is the general opinion that he is one of the best professionals in this part of the country. He is especially strong on driving and is constantly improving in putting and approaching. He has an almost perfect swing and keen eye, indispensable things in playing the game.

The cups for clock golf competition for women, presented by Miss VanBoskerck, will be played for on Saturday at the Plainfield Country Club.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional at the Plainfield Country Club, will leave Saturday night for the Inwood Country Club, Far Rockaway, where on Sunday he will meet the professional of that club in a match.

NETHERWOODITE'S LUCK SOMETHING PHENOMINAL

A prominent Netherwoodite of this city is without doubt one of the luckiest men living. Luck came his way last year, when he won a $1,200 automobile at the annual hospital carnival on a raffle ticket which cost him just $1. Last week he increased his bank roll by $1,600 in transactions where the Goddess of Luck played the leading role.

The man, who is engaged in business in New York stopped in a Broadway billiard parlor one day last week and watched a game in which a difficult shot was engaging the attention of two contestants. One player said to his opponent: "If you succeed in makin that shot everybody in the room will die of gout," giving the accent on the "o."

"It isn't gou-t," chimed in the Netherwoodite, who was listening to the talk; "the correct pronunciation is guu-t."

"Bet you $1,000 to $600 you're wrong," shouted the New Yorker. The Netherwoodite, however, laughed the matter off. Then another difficult shot turned up. The Jersey man butted in again, this time declaring the shot couldn't be made. "Bet you $1,000 to $600 I'll make it," shouted the New Yorker, flashing a fat roll in the Jersey man's face. The money was put up, and the shot was missed. The Netherwoodite took the money.

The next day he was going down Cortlandt street when a Plainfield friend met him. "Say, old man," the Plainfielder stammered, "loan me $25. I'll be honest with you. I'm going to play the races. I've got a good thing. Tell you what I'll do. I'll give you half of what I win."

The Netherwoodite shoved his hand down into his trousers pocket and handed out $25. The next day he met his friend again with his face wreathed in smiles. Out of one pocket he pulled out $25, saying: "This is what I borrowed from you yesterday." Putting his hand into another pocket he drew forth a big wad of greenbacks, and counting out $600 said to the Netherwoodites, "Here, take this. This is half the profits on yesterday's bet."

Well' I'll be gum-swizzler," muttered the Nethewoodite as he hustled over to the Liberty street ferry to catch the first train out to Plainfield.

Foresters Told of Relief Work.

At its meeting last night, the members of Court Watchung, No. 3871, I. O. F., were told of the relief work among Foresters that is being carried on in San Francisco by the order. In the great disaster four members lost their lives and 240 were rendered homeless. In the business part of Watchung's meeting, one candidate was initiated.

Archibald Watt Dies.

Archibald Watt, the well known yachtsman whose name was before the public recently because of a suit for divorce brought by his wife, died at his home in New York yesterday. When the action was brought in the courts, Mrs. Watt lived in North Plainfield but has since moved away.

Preparing for the Big Show.

John E. Coutts, advance representative for Primrose's minstrels, is in town today making final arrangements for the fireworks parade on Thursday night, June 28, and the show's appearance at the New Plainfield the following night.

Let Last Contract.

MARTY' DEFEATS DOEBEL

Plainfielder Again Victorious in Contest With Other Crack Professional.

EIGHT UP, SEVEN TO GO

On Monday "Marty" Leaves for Chicago, Where He Will Fight for Professional Championship.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional of the Plainfield Country Club, won the final half of the 72-hole match with Joseph Doebel, the professional at the Fairfield Country Club, Greenwich, Conn., yesterday, being 8 up and 7 to go at the end of the match. As a result "Marty" will leave on Monday for Chicago where he will play in the open championship for professionals. There he will meet the crack professionals of the country and will have a severe test of his ability.

Joseph Doebel, the defeated player in yesterday's match, has defeated Findlay S. Douglass and it was the first time that he has lost on the Fairfield Country Club course. This course, a 9-hole one, is exceedingly difficult, and it required a good part of the first round for the Plainfielder to get his bearings. However, despite the fact that "Marty" presented his opponent with one hole, owing to a matter in dispute, he outdrove Doeble on an average of fifty to seventy yards.

At the end of the first round Doebel was 5 up, but "Marty" recovered himself and was 1 up at the end of the second round. At the end of the third round the Plainfield boy was 4 up and he finished the fourth round with 7 to go 8 up. "Marty" drove his ball a distance of 255 yards on the fourth hole, a very difficult one, and 235 on the ninth hole. Manager Keiser, of the Fairfield Country Club, accompanied Doebel during the match, and Daniel Shay, the clerk at the Plainfield Country Club, accompanied O'Loughlin. The cards for the day were as follows:

ASSEMBLY DISTRICTS TO HAVE EARLY TEST.

Attorney General Wins Order for Quick Trial Despite Counsel's Plea for Time.

Trenton, N. J., June 20.—At the opening of the June term of the Court of Errors and Appeals yesterday, Attorney General McCarter moved that the court fix as early a date as possible for the argument in the case of Harry F. Smith against County Clerk Charles H. Baker, which is the suit to test the constitutionality of the new Assembly redistricting law.

Edwin Robert Walker was present as counsel for Mr. Baker, and said that he was not ready to argue the case immediately. He asked that a date be fixed as late in the term as possible.

Attorney General McCarter said the case was a most important one, as it would affect every member of the Assembly next fall; he therefore objected to any great delay, and suggested that the argument be fixed for next Monday.

After considerable sparring as to the time for the argument, it was finally set down for Wednesday, June 28, when it will be taken up at the close of any case then pending.

HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI MET

MEMBERSHIP NOW 184

Photographs of Classes of 1872 and 1873 Presented By Franklin S. Smith—W. D. Murray in the Chair.

By the adoption of constitution and bylaws at a meeting in the city High School last evening, the Plainfield High School Alumni Association has become a firmly founded organization in the city. Alumni, old and young, including a good representation of the class of 1906, turned out to the meeting, which was presided over by William D. Murray, '75.

In his report of what had been accomplished since the last meeting, Franklin S. Smith, '80, secretary of the association, spoke especially of what had been done to increase the membership and announced 184 members at present in the association. There are 601 supposed living graduates of the school, but many have left Plainfield, and their homes are now distributed all over the country.

Mr. Smith also spoke of an alumni fund of $550, which has been amassed by subscription. This money represents financial donation from each and every class in the association, including the class of 1906.

E. J. Patterson, '90, made the report on the drafting of a constitution and bylaws for the association. The committee for this work, appointed by the chair at the last meeting, consisted of Franklin S. Smith, '80, E. J. Patterson, '90, and C. L. Reilly, '94. The constitution presented and finally accepted at last night's meeting was essentially the same as that published in the Plainfield High School "Oracle" in April. The object of the organization is primarily to keep the alumni in touch with one another after graduation and to sustain their interest in the High School. The government of the organization will be in charge of an executive committee consisting of officers, and this will work in conjunction with a general committee, formed of one member of each of the classes. The regular meetings of the association are to be held on February 22, of each year. Contrary to expectation, the regular officers of the association, who were to take the place of those elected temporarily at the organization of the association in February, were not elected at last night's meeting.

A presentation of two pictures, class groups of the class of 1872 and 1873 was made by Franklin S. Smith. The pictures used to hang in the principal's office at the Stillman High School, and were recently found among rubbish at the old building. The pictures will be hung in the hall of the High School.

Andrew M. Parker, '74, was introduced by Mr. Murray for an address and spoke briefly on the disposition of the alumni fund which has been amassed. No action was taken.

At the adjourning of the meeitng the floor was cleared for dancing. A programme of fifteen dances was rendered by members of the High School orchestra. The committee in charge of the meeting, which also formed the floor committee for the dancing, consisted of William C. Hubbard, '84, chairman; Robert A. Pruden, '99, Vincent B. Miner, '03, T. O. Gavett, '05, Martin B. Stutsman, '05, and Miss Lulu M. Stryker, '05.

BRUTALLY TREATED CHILD

Evidence at Trial Before Justice Mundy Showed Daughter Was Beaten.

WOMEN COMPLAINANTS

Mrs. John Entwistle Fined $75—Her Lawyer Appeals the Case.

Adjudged guilty on three separate charges of shamefully abusing her eleven-year-old daughter, Rosie Fisk, Mrs. Josephine Entwistle, of East Front street, was fined $25 and costs on each count by Justice S. C. Mundy in the borough court last night. The defendant entered a general denial of the charges with one exception but the weight of evidence was against her and in addition her manner was flippant throughout the trial. At one time she made an attempt to strike Mrs. Caroline Ohl, who was one of the complaining witnesses, and would have done so but for interference on the part of bystanders.

The Entwistles came to this city from England and for a time resided on West End avenue in the borough. The mother's attitude toward the child caused comment from the time of their appearance and it was frequently asserted that she was subjected to terrible beatins and almost inhuman treatment. Finally Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh, a Miss Smith, who owns the house where the Entwistles lived, and Mrs. Ohl saw enough to warrant their calling the attention of the Organized Aid Association to the matter and their representative investigated. As a result formal charges were preferred against Mrs. Entwistle by Lawyer Louis O. Barton acting for the society, the family in the meantime having moved to the city side.

When trial was called last night the witnesses declared that the mother at various times had given the child fearful beatings with a horsewhip, that she would strike her about the head and face with a razor strop having a nickel attachment at one end and that it was frequently the custom for her to catch the girl by the hair and bang her head against anything that happened to be handy. The testimony was given in a straightforward manner, all the complainants having witnessed these things, adding that others who had refused to come forward had stated that Rosie was not allowed to play with other children and that her face was seldom without a cut or a bruise of some kind.

Mrs. Entwistle declared on the stand that all the charges were false with the exception of the horsewhipping but explained that the whip was a small affair, less than two feet long. While this particular charge was being threshed out, the defendant exclaimed to the justice:

"I guess you or nobody else can stop me from whipping my child if I want to."

The court didn't go into any lengthy explanation as to whether he could or not but he observed that it was in his power to "sweeten her up a little" and subsequent happenings bore him out.

Charles Gould and his wife were called by Mrs. Entwistle's lawyer, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., to testify as to her general character. They gave her first class recommendations but when asked about the abuse of the child they admitted that they knew nothing about it. When sentence was pronounced, Lawyer Hetfield at once gave notice of appeal and will carry the case to Somerville.

The Fisk child is still with Mrs. Entwistle but an effort is being made by the Organized Aid Association to have it taken from her.

COUNTY TAX BOARD HERE

Meeting With Local Assessors to Explain the Law and Their Duties.

DUPLICATE BOOKS NOW

Tax Rate Cannot Be Fixed Until September at Least Under New Conditions.

Frederic H. Andrews, C. C. Pollard and Mulford Scudder, composing the Union County Board of Taxation, and the clerk, Thomas Hanna, met the Plainfield Board of Assessors in the Common Council rooms this morning, completing their conferences with the various boards of assessors in the county.

The object of the county board's visit here was to learn how the local board is doing their work, and whether it is adhering to the provisions of the new law that personal property and real estate be assessed at full value. The county board was assured that the law is being followed closely, although that fact cannot be definitely learned until the work is completed and the county board has an opportunity of going over the books and making personal observations. The county board informed the Plainfield assessors of the progress and method of work in other parts of the county and gave full instructions as to what is expected.

According to the new law the Plainfield assessors must make out a duplicate set of books for the county board to which body the books must be returned on Tuesday, August 14. The county board will be given one month to go over the books and ascertain whether the work has been done properly. At the end of that time or about the first or second Tuesday in September, the Plainfield assessors will meet with the Union County Board of Assessors at Elizabeth. If the books are confirmed then the Common Council will have the opportunity of examining the books and determining whether the amount to be raised will be sufficient to cover the city's expenses for the coming year.

The Board of Assessors in reality establishes the rate for Plainfield and this will be fixed after the meeting with the Union County Board of Assessors. At present no idea as to what the rate will be can be learned.

MINSTREL PRIMROSE TO APPEAR AT FISK DINNER.

Famous Black Face Artist And His Men Volunteer to Entertain.

Acting on a suggestion made by Manager Counihan, George Primrose, "The King of Minstrels," has volunteered to make the testimonial dinner to former Mayor Charles J. Fisk a still greater success than was anticipated by taking care of part of the entertainment end. The inimitable George and half a dozen or more of his best singers and dancers have volunteered to attend and will present a programme of singing and dancing as the Casino has never witnessed.

"Why certainly I'l like to help out," is the way the world-famed black face artist put it when "Bill" Counihan observed that it would be a nice thing to have some of the company at the dinner, "A Mr. Fisk is mayor up in my home city and I have a kindly feeling toward all men of that name; they're all right."

Every member of the Primrose company now rehearsing at the New Plainfield theatre wanted to be the ones to go along with their chief but Mr. Primrose has selected six of the best and they are now getting "stunts" arranged.

New Trolley Barn.

Plans have been drawn by the P. S. C. for the construction of a barn for the storage of cars and materials at Dewey Park, in connection with the terminus recently established at the loop near the west line of Dunellen. A hearing before the township committee will be held July 3.

The culprits owned up to the charge and were fined $1 each.

ANDERSON LOSES SUIT

LONG LITIGATION ENDS

Both of the Direct Heirs of Mrs. Anderson Have Died Since Case Was Begun In 1904.

After two years of litigation, the case growing out of the death claim of James Anderson's estate against the Catholic Benevolent Legion has been finally settled by the Court of Errors and Appeals in favor of the wife's heirs. The case is the first one of its sort in the history of the courts. No case with quite the same features has ever been decided before, and an unusual feature has developed since it began.

The case arose from the conflicting claims for a benefit of $1,000 on James Anderson's life between his father and the mother and sister of Anderson's wife. In the assignment clause of the certificate Mrs. Anderson was named as the beneficiary. She died before her husband, but he never changed the clause, and the wife's name still stood as that of the beneficiary when he died. Mrs. Bridget Burke and Miss Julia Burke, both of this city, mother and sister of the dead woman, claimed the money as her heirs. John C. Anderson, father of the policyholder and his heir, claimed the money on the ground that the wife having died before the certificate became inoperative the right to the money reverted to the husband's estate.

The Catholic Benevolent Legion has a by-law providing that in the event of a beneficiary's death before that of thte policyholder and the name is not changed, the money goes to thte former's estate, and it started to pay over the money to the Burkes. Counsellor William Newcorn, for Anderson, secured a restraining order and started litigation to secure the money for the father. The organization paid the money over into chancery, and left the litigants to fight it out among themselves.

The action was started in April, 1904. It was argued before Vice Chancellor Emory, John P. Owens appearing for the Burkes, and in May, 1905, the Vice Chancellor, in his decision, ordered the money paid to the wife's heirs. Judge Newcorn carried the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

It was down on the calendar for November, but the judges did not reach it until the present term. Counsellor Owens received a copy of the opinion affirming the decision of the Vice Chancellor, this morning.

Now Mr. Owens wants the court to tell him what to do with the money. Since the litigation started both of his clients have died. Miss Burke died over a year ago and Mrs. Burke died last spring. No other heirs have qualified.

Following the ceremony a lunch was served and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Torbert left on a wedding trip. On returning they will make their home at Maplewood. The groom is the New Yorw representative of a large manufacturing concern and it well known in the mertopolitan business world.

DR. ELLIS H. HEDGES TALKS ON APPENDICITIS

DISTINGUISHED PLAINFIELD PHYSICIAN ADDRESSES STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, who attended the sessions of the New Jersey State Medical Society at Atlantic City, yesterday, took part in the afternoon discussion regarding appendicitis.

"There are no known positive symptoms by which a physician can tell of the presence of appendicitis," said Dr. Hedges. "For this reason so many false operations are made that I would suggest a policy of elimination before the knife is used."

Dr. Henry L. Coit, of Newark, was the leader of a discussion on the proper methods of conserving the health of infants. He said that babies of the present day are suffering from the strenuous life led by their mothers, and advocated a return to the simpler life as a better method than recourse to patent foods.

These officers have been elected for the ensuing year: President, Alexander Marcy, Jr., of Riverton; first vice-president, Edward J. ALEXANDER MUIR BECOMES A BENEDICT

MISS MINNIE MEYER, OF SCOTCH PLAINS, IS HIS BRIDE.

Miss Minnie Helen Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Meyer, of Scotch Plains, and Alexander Muir, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir, of Essex street, were married at 7:30 last evening in the Methodist Episcopal church, Scotch Plains. Rev. James F. Hoffman, of Madison, formerly pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of 200 relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

Miss Meyer was attended by her sister, Miss Louise Meyer, as maid-of-honor; Miss Florence M. Wade and Miss Marian E. Goodwin, as bridesmaids. Miss Esther L. Meyer, also sister of the bride, was flower girl, and Robert M. Muir, brother, acted as page. The groom had for his best man his brother, Thomas M. Muir. The ushers were Edward G. Meyer, of New York; Leonce A. Texier, Berlin S. J. Banks and Harry L. Keen, of this city. The bride was given away by her father. Miss Sadie E. Reger presided at the organ and played the wedding marches.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine, princess, trimmed with lace, and a veil which was caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. The maid-of-honor was gowned in white silk mulle, princess, and carried pink carnations. The flower girl's dress was of white lawn and she carried a basket of pink sweet peas.

The church was prettily decorated for the event, there being an arrangement of palms, ferns and a profusion of the season's flowers to add to the attractiveness of the scene.

Owing to illness in the home of the bride, no reception was held last night, but after the ceremony the bridal party was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hand, Scotch Plains, where supper was served. At its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Muir were driven to this city and they departed on a wedding trip. They will visit Niagara Falls, Detroit and other places, remaining away about two weeks. On returning they will make their home in Newark, where the groom is employed as foreman in one of the large machine shops.

The bride received a large number of very handsome and costly presents. In the exchange of gifts among the members of the bridal party, the groom gave the bride a brooch of pearls and to the best man and ushers scarf pins of pearls. The bride's gift to the groom was a diamond scarf pin set with pearls and to the maid-of-honor a ring set with pearls. Her gifts to the bridesmands were gold bracelets and to the flower girl and page signet rings.

ANTI-CUT RATE LAWYERS

Local Barristers' Organization to Stop Alleged Under-Bidding on Business.

ORGANIZE ON TUESDAY

Meetings to Be Held Monthly—Dues To Be $3 or $5 a Year—The Plans.

One of the principles of the proposed Plainfield Bar Association to be organized on Tuesday, June 26, following the session of the district court, will discourage a somewhat prevalent custom, that of cutting fees and rates. The idea will be to bring about a more uniform scale of prices for legal services, especially in the drawing up of bonds, mortgages, etc. In some cities the cut rate habit is more pronounced than in Plainfield, but the legal lights here desire to prevent any widespread effort in that direction.

Notices for the meeting to be held on Tuesday were sent out yesterday, and Judge Newcorn has granted the lawyers permission to use the district court rooms after the session of court. It is hoped at that time to effect an organization. There are about thirty-nine lawyers in the city and it is estimated that thirty-five will identify themselves with the new association.

It is proposed to hold a meeting once a month and to form the association for the protection of the interests of the lawyers and to advance perhaps more especiallly the interests of the young lawyers, giving them an opportunity to profit by the experience of older members of the bar.

At the monthly meetings it is also proposed to have one of the members give an address or present a paper on some timely subject. There will also be an opportunity for general discussion on topics pertaining to the profession.

While the dues in the Union County Bar Association are $1 a month, it is proposed to fix the dues in the local association at $3 or $5 a year. From such a fund as may be established as annual dinner will be planned to be held in Plainfield, thereby combining business and pleasure.

It is likely that the association will petition the Board of Freeholders and Common Council for a contribution towards the establishment of a law library in the district court, where lawyers can have an opportunity to read. Such assistance was sought and given by the freeholders to the Union County Bar Association, and it is believed that it can be obtained here.

No Change in Law.

Game Warden Hawkins, of Elizabeth, is authority for the statement that there has been no change in this year's laws regarding the open season for catching pickerel. This question was raised over an item appearing in the State papers that because the date for the open season happened to fall on Sunday this year, the date had been changed to Monday. In consequence many local fishermen did not go out on the first day, not willing to take the risk. Mr. Hawkins says that the law is the same this year as before.

Local Man's View of 'Frisco.

Evarts Tracy, of the firm of Tracy & Swartout, architects, has returned from a trip to San Francisco, where he went in the interest of large building operations in the plan to restore the stricken city to its former condition. He says that words fail to describe the awful condition to be found there and he believes that it will be a long time before anything like substantial progress is made in rebuilding the city.

HUDSON MAN FOR U. S. SENATORSHIP

NAME OF FORMER JUSTICE GILBERT COLLINS WHISPERED.

Organization Republicans of Hudson county are to have a favorite son as a candidate for United States Senator. Who he will be has not been announced, but the impression prevails among the followers of Col. Samuel D. Dickinson that former Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Collins is the man whom the organization has in mind.

Prosecutor of the Pleas William H. Speer, in a speech on Republicanism at the celebration Monday night of the anniversary of the birth of the Republican party, under the auspices of the Minkahwa Club of Jersey City, said the Republican party in Hudson county did not accept either George L. Record or John F. Dryden as its candidate for United States Senator.

"If I were obliged to choose between the two I should unhesitatingly select John R. Dryden," Mr. Speer said, "but I am not obliged to make any such selection, and unless I much mistaken the sentiment of the Republicans of my county, Hudson will put her own candidates in the field, and that right soon. He will be a stanch, sterling and true Republican. No true Republican can support George L. Record for United States Senator. He is not and neveh has been in full sympathy with the principles of the Republican party. He has time and again avowed himself to be a free-trader, while the Republican party stands pledged to the principles of protection."

Mr. Speer declared that Record was trying to disrupt the Republican party.

The rivalry between the organization or Dickinson epublicans and the Fagan Republicans is so intense that it is predicted that there will be two sets of Republican Assembly candidates in the field in Hudson county at the next election. Here is an instance of the ill-feeling that exists between the two factions:

When the Minkahwa Club, which is composed of followers of Colonel Dickinson, decision to hold its anniversary celebration, the Fremont Club in the Hudson City section arranged for a rival meeting. John Doscher, the Dickinson leader in that part of the city, who is one of the prominent members of the Fremont Club, protested strongly against this action. He said it made no difference whether the Fremont Club held a reception or not he and his friends would attend the Minkahwa Club celebration.

This only made the Fagan members of the Fremont Club work all the harder to make the Fremont celebration a success. When everything was in readiness to open up the club room for the reception of the guests it was found that the gas meter had been removed and the room could not be lighted. The Faganites charged the organization members with having removed the meter so no meeting could be held. This Doscher and his followers indignantly denied, and they declared it was a trick of the Faganites to win the sympathy of the public. Candles and oil lamps were substituted for gas and the meeting was held. All of the speakers referred to the mean trick of the organization Republicans.

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide Is In Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair vigors may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of use."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease.

ALL SOUTH JERSEY IS FOR E. C. STOKES

REPUBLICANS OF THAT SECTION NOT CHANGED BY DRYDEN ANNOUNCEMENT

Philadelphia, June 21.—New Jersey's unique Senatorial situation has been a fruitful topic of consideration among the delegates from that State who are here in attendance upon the convention of the National Republican League. The most outspoken upon the subject are the men from South Jersey, who openly declare that their section of the State is practically unanimous for Governor Stokes for United States Senator.

When asked if the Governor has declared himself to his friends and is a bona fide candidate, they say that that is all right. It doesn't make any difference what the Governor says, the people will rise up and make a demand that he represent them in the United States Senate in such a way that it will simply be impossible for him to resist the call.

In this connection a citizen who is recognized as a leader in his section of the State, told yesterday an interesting, if not strictly true, story apropos of the dollar dinner which the colored Republicans of Newark gave the other day, an account of which has been published. An attempt to get up a demonstration at the mention of Dryden's name failed because of a missed cue by one of the engineers of the movement.

The friends of Governor Stokes, who firmly believe that the time is rapidly coming when "such a popular demand will arise from the people that he be their next representative in the United States Senate that it will be simply impossible for him to refuse," can scarcely conceal the satisfaction they feel at the outcome of the dinner, while those who favor Mr. Dryden's re-election have difficulty in preventing their disgust from asserting itself.

As the story goes, one of the diners circulated among the men at the dinner and discovered a unanimity of opinion against Mr. Dryden which surprised him. The junior Senator, he was told by almost all with whom he spoke, was no friend of the colored man, and as a proof of that assertion his attention was called to the fact that no colored men were employed in the big Prudential building. Of all the small army that ran the lightning lifts, that mopped the tiled floors and polished up the handles of the big brass doors, not one was a colored man.

A prominent Republican from Monmouth who has received several political gifts at the hands of the machine and said that there was a spirit of unrest and a desire for a change of party leaders among the Republicans in his county which might redound to the interest of the Colby movement. This spirit of unrest, he said, had not been quieted by the Governor's appointments to the new County Tax Board and the growing conviction that these new tax bodies were created solely for the purpose of aiding the railroads in keeping down their taxes.

PRESIDENT BRADLEY GRAND JURY FOREMAN.

Pesiding Officer of State Senate Heads the Federal Grand Inquest.

Trenton, N. J., June 21.—There are several South Jerseymen on the June term Grand Jury of the United States District Court, which was sworn in yesterday by Judge Joseph Cross. President of the Senate William J. Bradley, of Camden, was chosen foreman. Other members are as follows:

Edward W. Evans, Robert W. Kennedy, Theodore C. Maple, Elwood Moore, Jr., Dr. George B. Wight, Trenton; Henry F. Apgar, Flemington; Senator John Boyd Axis, Woodbury; William L. Butler, Beach Haven; John T. Hanks, Ridgewood; Robert A. Haggerty and William Paul, Newark; George W. Jenkins, Morristown; William I. Kelchner, Camden; George C. Lower, New Egypt; Edward Mills, Camden; Charles H. Olden, Princeton; William Pintard and John H. Patterson, Red Bank; Charles N. Reading, Frenchtown; Samuel M. Robinson, Pittstown; Theodore Sayer, Morristown; Henry M. Stone, Caldwell; J. W. Wright, New Brunswick.

Judge Cross charged the jurors particularly concerning the growing practice of outsiders endeavoring to influence the work of the grand inquest. He said that all such persons should be reported to him, as they were guilty of high contempt of court.

HOW TO VOTE IN SEPT.

The Amendments to Primary Act Set Forth in Detail.

PRIMARIES 4th TUESDAY

Voters May Register Then For the Ensuing General Election—Sitting of Election Board.

Several requests have been received for an exact statement of the rights of citizens to vote at the open primaries in September. All of the questions which have been asked cannot be answered at this time. In the main, however, it may be said that the primaries of both parties are to be held this year on the fourth Tuesday in September.

Regular election boards sitting as boards of registry will conduct them. Primary ballots may be cast between 1 o'clock and 9 o'clock p. m. There must be one box for Democrats, one box for Republicans and one for each of the other parties. Ballot and other primary expenses will be paid by the State.

As amended this year the primary act says:

"At such primary election the voters registered, or who thereupon register for the ensuing general election shall be qualified to vote at such primary.

"Each voter shall request the party ticket he desires to vote, and thereupon he shall receive from the Board of Registry and Election an official ballot of said political party, prepared as aforesaid, and no other.

"The voter shall then retire to the voting booth and there prepare his ballot so as to indicate his choice for the candidates of his party to be there nominated, or his choice for the delegates to the political convention of his political party, as the case may be, by erasing all names thereon other than those voted for, and shall then deposit said ballot in the ballot-box of his party, unless challenged, and if challenged, make oath that he is a member of the said political party; that at the last election for members of Assembly at which he voted he voted for a majority of the candidates whose names were printed upon the party ticket of said party, and intends to support the candidates of the said party at the ensuing election.

"In the case of any voter voting for the first time in this State the portion of the said oath or affirmation in reference to previous voting shall be dispensed with.

"Any voter who shall vote in the ballot-box of one political party at any primary election held under this act shall not be allowed to vote in the ballot-box of an other political party at the next thereafter succeeding primary election.

"The said Board of Registry and Election shall indicate in the registry book the name of the political party whose primary ticket each voter voting at such primary election voted, by writing opposite the name of each such voters, in a column prepared for that purpose, in such registry book, the first letter of the name of such political party, as for example, 'D' for Democratic party, the letter 'R' for Republican party, the letter 'P' for Prohibition party and in like manner for other political parties."

PERTH AMBOY BRIDGE IS OFFICIALLY OPENED.

Mayor John Pfeiffer Makes Address in Rain Before Crowd of 500. Hitch in Proceedings.

Perth Amboy, June 21.—With the official opening of the bridge between this place and South Amboy Monday, a long drawn out legal battle ended. The span was officially opened before a crowd of about 500, who heard Mayor John Pfeiffer make a speech in the heavy rain.

As soon os the draw was closed the spectators did not wait until it had been locked, but rushed out on the structure with the result that the bridge was thrown slightly out of gear and there was a delay of an hour.

An automobile was among the first vehicles to cross the span. A furniture van also went over shortly after the opening.

Plainfield, N. J., June 21, 1906.

In New York it takes about five year after an arrest to dispense justice to an offender. In Philadelphia a kidnapper was arraigned, indicted, tried, found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment in less than three hours. And yet they do say that Philadelphia is slow.

It is announced that George L. Record has engaged United States Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, to come here and speak for him. When a man running for a public office is compelled to go outside of his own State to get somebody to sing his praises, he is in a bad way.—Trenton State Gazette.

And how about the man who has to get his son-in-law to announce his own candidacy for office?

How very patriotic are those upright "business" men who cry out because the President has ruined this country's foreign trade in the rotten stuff by condemning the alleged embalmed beef and canned poison. They would sacrifice America's reputation and the lives of human beings by smothering up the scandal rather than allow the guilty to suffer any pecuniary loss. Patriotism with the dollar mark attached is a poor brand to say the least.

MISS CLEGGETT BURIED.

Funeral of English Girl Who Died on Visit Here.

With a gathering of neighbors and friends in attendance, the funeral of Miss Minnie Beatrice Cleggett, who died shortly after coming from England to Plainfield, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of her uncle, Fred Ivany, of West Second street. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, who read comforting scriptural passages, followed by a prayer filled with sympathy for the bereaved parents across the ocean and the members of the household where she had come to visit. Two solos, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Lead, Kindly Light," were sung by Miss Etta Raybert, after which Dr. Parsons made an address in which he spoke briefly but tenderly to the afflicted and referred to the Christian character of the young woman. She was a member of the Wesley Primative Methodist church in her native city and taught in the Sunday school. There was a beautiful display of floral tributes from friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ivany, among them many set pieces.

Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being Fred Moore, Frank Eick, Eric Erickson, William G. DeMeza, Daniel Galbraith and William Feiring.

Harvey Pleaded Guilty.

Nathaniel Harvey, colored, charged with stealing a watch and a pair of shoes, retracted his plea of innocence before Judge Atwater yesterday, and pleaded guilty. He was put in charge of the probation officer. Lawyer William G. DeMeza appeared for him.

COLBYISM IN SOMERSET

I. P. Runyon's Friends Boom Him For Assembly Nomination.

NON-COMMITTAL-NOW

Says Legislators Shall Be Pledged Against Dryden or Dryden-McCarter-Kean Man.

In North Plainfield particularly, the Somerset county movement for Colbyism is making marked headway, and preliminary plans are now being made for a mass meeting in that borough. Those who claim to have the matter at heart say that they will use every effort to keep factional leaders from using the movement for their own benefit and will see to it that no man attempts to use the reform wave to land himself in power.

Rumor has it that friends of I. P. Runyon are booming him for the assembly as a Colbyite candidate. When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press he refused to confirm or deny whether he will come out as a candidate. "I have nothing to say; see me later," is all that he would say.

In referring to the movement in Somerset, however, Mr. Runyon said:

"The Republican League for equal taxation is certain to be successful providing the voters who are in favor of it do their duty and vote at the primaries in September, and the factional fights of the past are merged in a battle not of personal antagonism, but one of broad principles such as are enunciated by the Colby movement. There is not a citizen of either party but who believes in the principles composing the New Republican League, because the principles set forth are for the benefit of the masses and absolutely necessary to good government and a government by the people which is oppressive to none.

"The grasping corporations have by years of scheming and millions of money successfully blocked the people from bringing them to justice through the medium of political bosses and appointment to office of men, not because of merit, but because they were subservient to the interest of the bosses who in turn are controlled by this class of corporations.

"The Republican League under the guidance of which Essex and Hudson counties have been rescued from the Dryden and McCarter yoke which was fast sapping out their political respectability will succeed in every county in the State. Whether or not the Republican party in the county of Somerset needs reform is not the question; the issue is one affecting every part of the State of New Jersey, and Somerset county has representatives in the Legislature who if they vote for deserving legislation will assist not only Somerset but every county in the State and which without the vote of Somerset representatives might be lost and the people thereby deprived of beneficial legislation. It is certain that no member of the Senate or Assembly nominated or elected by the present organization is going to vote on any measure against the desires of those in control of the State Republican Committee. The last session of the Legislature demonstrates this fact; therefore, it is necessary to endorse the principles and past efforts of the New Republican League by electing, if possible, an Assemblyman that stands for those principles and one who will not vote for John F. Dryden or any other man controlled by the present Dryden, McCarter, Kean combination, for United States Senator. Will factional disputes have anything to do with the Colby movement? It certainly ought not to have the remotest connection with it. The New Republican League has nothing to do with personal battles of the past. There are four or five of our Republicans who were prominent in the citizens movement last fall. I am frank to say who get together and resolve that we are the Republicans of the borough and they are sincere and believe it and then tney further resolve that no man who did not wage war with us last fall ought to be allowed to come into the New Republican League movement; and by sub-terranean channels try and convince all willing listners that no man is straight unless he did exactly as they did last fall; but, I am happy to say that the majority of the Republican voters of both factions of the borough are broad minded and will not allow these few to prevail to the serious detriment of this New Republican League. It should be so arranged that every Republican voter who is in sympathy with this movement should feel welcome to come in and work for the good of the cause without feeling that he must have a jury of four or five men suffering from political blisters to pass upon his eligibility. Lets have all Republicans, and as many Democrats as we can get on Election day work for the success of the New Republican League."

Henry Eggerding, Jr., of Arlington avenue, is home on a two weeks' vacation. He is in the engineering department of the Buffalo and Susquehanna Coal Mining Company at DuBois, Pa.

STATE JOB NO BAR TO ARCHITECT'S WORK.

Attorney General Decides Drawings for School Must Be Made By State Officer.

Trenton, June 21.—Attorney General McCarter gave an opinion to the State Board of Education yesterday, holding that State Architect George Poole is the only man who can be employed to make the plans for the new normal school at upper Montclair.

The Board of Education has held that they could hire another architect, because the school board could not come under the depatment of charities and corrections, to which department Mr. Poole is attached.

The Attorney General holds that the position of State Architect is not upset by Mr. Poole's appointment as Deputy Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

IDEALS FOR GRADUATES

Henry M. Maxson Makes an Address to Graduating Class This Morning.

CONCLUDING EXERCISES

Singing a Feature of the Exercises —School Formally Closed This Morning.

Speaking before the members of the city High School at the regular morning exercises today, Professor Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of local schools, addressed the senior class in a farewell speech of their course in the high school.

Prof. Maxson spoke on "Ideals." In a summary way he alluded to the high school education of boy and girl as of greatest value in preparation for after life.

"The life ideals of people vary," said Mr. Maxson, "some have a life philosophy of pleasure, some seek power, some wealth, and some educational advancement. Some of these are good, others are bad ideals. None is the perfect ideals. To my mind the perfect ideal is development of the soul—development of the inner self in life. This is brought about by all of our relations in life, our social and religious work with our fellow men. Pre-eminence in community and amassed wealth are ideals subordinate to self development and the education you get here in the high school aims to give you a firm foundation for the formation of high ideals in life.

"Last year, when I spoke to the graduating class. I alluded to the powerful moulding element of our lives as the spirit of 'noblesse oblige' —'my honor compels me.' I want to speak of that same element today from the negative side—that sort of 'noblesse oblige' which makes us hold back from doing wrong. Our attitude should be to guard against speaking or thinking evil and thus to guard against degrading the nobility within us. As a rule man wishes his fellow man good, not evil, in this world.

"In our journey through life we win the place we make for ourselves through work. The personal value of work depends solely upon your attitude toward it. To those of you who go through the performance of your duties carefully and conscientiously, work proves an opportunity and a blessing. We can use our work as a means of self development, and this should be our attitude toward it. Wealth and strong position in the community is attained by fighting successfully against life and winning our battles with work. Work proves a curse only to him who voluntarily uses it otherwise than as a blessing. The fidelity and efficiency for which your neighbor relies on you to undertake carry through with honesty and sincerity.

"Another life ideal includes our co-operation with our fellow men. The best of help is the help we receive from our fellow men. Co-operation is the secret of a life success. Take for example our teams here at the High School. Their successes have been due to co-operation in sports—"team work," as we call it. We cannot all be leaders, but we can all co-operate with those who are the leaders. Give yourself up to team work and be a helping hand. Whatever you undertake, carry through with all honesty and sincerity. Find your place in society and fill it to the best of your ability.

"May you live to amass great successes and wealth of the kind that moth nor rust corrupt not, and that thieves cannot break through and steal from you."

The programme of exercises consisted mainly in music—the school sang all the favorite songs of the year. The singing was in charge of Music Instructor Charles L. Lewis. There were many members of previously graduated classes present.

With the conclusion of the exercises school closed formally for the summer vacation. The senior class adjourned to the First Baptist church, where commencement ceremonies were rehearsed with Principal Ira W. Travell.

Rheumatism is one of the most painful and aggrevating maladies. Many persons have spent fortunes to effect a cure.

P. H. S. SENIORS' POEM.

The class poem of the senior class of the City High School, composed by Miss Elizabeth Winter, of the class, was read by her at the class day exercises at the school Tuesday evening. The entire poem follows:

Up, gentle knight, gird on thy shining sword;
Thy vigil thou hast watched; forth to the fray!
Thy mettle in thy Master's cause display,
Thy valor in the service of thy Lord.

The king hath spoken, low his servant bends,
And hastes to do the thing his Lord commands.
His gleaming arms be dons with eager hands,
And gaily from the castle gate descends.

Before him stretch the tender fields of spring,
Warmed by the climbing sun of early day;
And louder, as he hurries on his way
The echoes backward sounds of tumult fling.

Straight through the struggling host of friend and foe,
With sword unsheathed and helmet proudly high
His hand untired, undimmed his ardent eye,
The knight, full brave in youthful strength doth go.

And some the stanchly stand and some they fall,
Unnoted, while the battle still roars on;
Here these have lost, there those the conflict won;
The day wears on in ceaseless strife for all.

His helmet gone, his arms no longer bright,
The knight yet plies his sword with weary thrust;
His garment all befouled with blood and dust,
No pageantries to battle now incite.

A cruel wound is sapping at his life,
Sore tempted be to leave the doubtful fight,
To snatch a single hope in coward flight,—
But still he presses onward in the strife.

Nay, now, my gentle knight thou must cease,
Another thrust and thou are pale and still,
Thou seemst with buoyant life no more to thrill;
Thou wert a noble knight. May'st sleep in peace.

Up to the castle gate they bear him. Yea!
The door is opened. Steps the master down,
"My noble knight! Receive thy Victor's crown!"
And in his arms the drooping knight they lay.

MR. DRYDEN'S CANAL SPEECH.

He Advocated a Lock and Not a Sea-level Canal.

Washington, June 21.—The recent item in this correspondence in relation to the compliments Senator Dryden was receiving on his speech on the Panama Canal, and the requests tnat were coming from Senators and others for copies thereof, inadvertently spoke of the speech as favoring a "sea-level canal," when it was intended to say "lock canal." It is well known that the Senator favors a lock rather than a sea-level canal, and he spoke in favor of that type of a canal, and not for a sea-level one.

Senator Dryden has received and filed the resolutions forwarded to him by James M. Reilly, on behalf of the Newark Board of Trade, which resolutions were adopted on the thirteenth instant, and which urge the Senate promptly to ratify the pending treaty between the United States and Santo Domingo.

Senator Kean has been notified of the increase of the pension of Joseph Lacey, of Paterson, to $12 a month.

Congressman Loudenslager has also been notified of the allowance of pensions as follows: To Benjamin Karr, of Camden, at the rate of $12 a month; to Benjamin F. Straddling, of Woodbury, at the rate of $8 a month, and to Gennetta Brown, of Laurel Springs, at the rate of $8 a month from February 8, 1902.

Trenton, June 21.—Governor Stokes yesterday signed Senator Hutchinson's bill authorizing incorporated cities, boroughs, towns, villages and townships to borrow money and negotiate temporary loans in anticipation of the receipt of taxes and assessments and to secure the repayment of moneys so borrowed.

Another bill signed yesterday was Senator Avis' measure validating bonds issued for street improvements in certain cases.

Senator McKee's bill to protect deer in this State for thre years was also signed.

DRUGS CONDEMNED FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Dr. Senseman, Before State Medical Society, Advises Diet of Eggs and Milk.

Atlantic City, June 21.—Dr. Theodore Senseman, a prominent physician of this city, and a specialist in the treatment of tuberculosis, yesterday afternoon treated members of the New Jersey Medical Society to a big surprise in an attack on the use of drugs in treating consumptive patients, at the annual convention of the association in the Hotel Chelsea.

A daily bath was advocated, in substitution for the drugs with which many a patient, the speaker said, is dosed until "he fairly reeks with creosote, emits a breath that does not belong outside the bareroom, and sweats codliver oil from every pour of his body." He also declared as farcical the idea that mountain air is more beneficial to consumptives that that of the seashore or inland.

"We have no specific—no peanacea with which to combat the bachilla, and all our treatment can but help the pationet to help himself. Hence, we have adopted, and with good results, forced feeding, which, however, if improperly applied, is capable of much more harm than good. The habit of giving the patient three large meals a day of solid food and forcing eggs and milk, before and after those meals, is, I believe, a bad one.

"Our consumptive patients should not be instructed to follow the plan of the man who said: 'I eat until it hurts, and then stop while the pain lasts.' No well digestion can stand this overburdening for any length of time without deleterious effects resulting, and it is not reasonable to suppose that a digestion already showing a tendency toward weakness can do more than when in a healthy condition. While the patient should be fed to the utmost limits of his digestive ability, we must see that the food is being assimilated.

"I believe the most satisfactory plan is to have the patient make two or three meals a day on raw eggs and milk entirely, and make these meals cover some time, so that more can be taken, and between-meal feeding will not be necessary—then allow him one meal of solid food—plain but nutritious.

"Patients should early be educated to a proper appreciation of the beneficial results derived from the daily bath. It has been my experience that where well borne, the morning sponge with tepid, or better, cold water, gives the best results. The cold bath, however, should never be taken while the body is cold. At such times it is better to precede the cold sponge with a hot one so that the body may be warm, for in this way, the cold sponge following, produces a greater shock but a quicker reaction."

Normal School Exercises.

Trenton, June 21.—The annual class day exercises of the normal graduating class of 1906 took place in the auditorium of the State schools Tuesday afternoon. Seven hundred were present. The platform on which the members of the class were seated represented a large yacht, with two large sails. Each member of the class was attired in a white dress and wore a white hat. The only male member of the class was dressed in blue.

Library Fund Entertainment.

An entertainment for the benefit of the library of Trinity Reformed church will be held in the lecture room of the church on Thursday night, June 28. It will be of a musical and literary character and of a very high class.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 24.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—What and how should a Christian read?—Phil. iv, 8.

The importance of what a Christian should read, and especially the young Christian, is at once apparent, as well as how what is read should be read. "Of the making of books there is no end." And if this were true in Solomon's time how much truer it is today. There are papers, periodicals and books without number. All that is written and printed cannot possibly be read, and hence the increased necessity of extra carefulness in the selection of what we read. The dangerous character of much that is written adds also to the importance of selection. Not so many years ago there was little choice in selection. In Christian homes there was little variety of reading matter. A home was fortunate to have a few books, and in Christian homes these were usually limited to a few religious books written by pious men. Under such conditions the young could hardly go astray, but how different the conditions today! There is scarcely a home without its library and its quota of magazines and papers, and in addition to reading matter to be found in the home the multiplication of circulating libraries of one kind and another has made almost every book published accessible to all readers. Under these changed conditions the selection of what we read and the methods of our reading assume a very grave importance.

The purpose of reading may assist us in the solution of these problems. The main purpose in reading should be to develop thinking, and thinking should inspire action. "Read, know, think and be wise." Such a purpose should guard against too much reading, one of the prevalent sins of today. Much reading means little thinking. It produces mental inertia instead of mental inspiration. Intellectual indigestion through overreading is as possible and as serious as physical indigestion through overeating. Since reading is to produce thought and action this purpose should determine a Christian's reading. It demands the reading of honest literature, of just literature, and, above all, of pure literature. Christians should have pure thoughts and live pure lives, but how can they if their minds be fed upon that which is unclean and impure? But let it be known that a book is off color morally, that it reeks with impurity, and how eagerly it is sought and read. And yet nothing so insidiously destroys the purity and sweetness of a young mind and heart as an unclean book. Its foul breath is breathed into the innermost recesses of mind and heart and blasts the purity of both. And thus millions of young, sweet, pure minds, hearts and lives are blasted. Above all, the young Christian should read clean and pure books. Girls should never read a book which they would be ashamed to have their mothers see and which brings the blush of shame to their own cheeks. There are too many sweet and beautiful romances even to make such literature a necessity. The least taint of impurity in a book should forever debar it from a place on the list of books we are to read.

The purpose of reading should suggest less light reading and the reading of books of a more serious character. Much of present day literature is light and frivolous, to say the least. Nor is light literature altogether to be decried. There are times for reading such literature to while away an hour, to rest the mind or for entertainment and amusement. But, after all, life is serious, and while it would not be healthy to be always reading "Baxter's Saints' Rest" or Thomas a Kempis, yet serious, uplifting literature should receive our chief attention—poetry, history, biography, the masterpieces of fiction and of course the best religious literary productions and, above all, the Bible. When we think how rich the world's literature is in that which inspires noble thoughts and noble deeds, in that which is "honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report," the wonder is that we waste so much time on books unworthy to be called by the name of literature.

Endeavorers, let me plead with you to exercise supreme care in your reading. A book is a most intimate companion. No human companion gets so close to your hearts. One book may make or mar a human life. Read only the books that make manhood and womanhood. Shun the others as you would a deadly poison. A poisoned mind is far worse than a poisoned body. From the body it may be removed, but from the mind never. Above all, make God's book your daily companion. The world's greatest men and women have done so, and it has been their inspiration, their life. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Deut. vi, 6-9; xi, 18; Ps. xxxvii, 31; cxix, 9-16, 105-112; Eccl. i, 17, 18; xii, 12-14; Acts xvii, 10-12; xix, 17-20; Matt. iv, 1-4; v, 8.

Notes From New South Wales.

The following paragraphs were taken from a Sydney (N. S. W.) convention notebook:

Two tons of statuary are better than ten tons of marble. The Christian Endeavor movement is making statuary out of the church's marble.

Over a hundred Australian Endeavorers have gone as missionaries to the foreign field.

Christian Endeavor means Christ exalted, Christianity exemplified, church energized and consecrated effort.

A convention that does not lead people to go out and work for Jesus is a humbug.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!

"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." June 24: "Surprised People"—Matt. vii, 22, 23; xxv, 37-39, 44; xxiv, 44-51; I Pet. iii, 10-12; II Pet. iii, 10; Rev. xxii, 12.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

"Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to render to each man according as his work is."

This life is so full of surprises that it does often seem to be fact that it is the unexpected which always happens.

Many of these surprises come because we have never traveled this track before, and new combinations of circumstances are continually forming, so that no human foresight could possibly have seen how things would occur.

Many more of our surprises come from our lack of attention to what is happening. Often we could have known what would take place if we had given proper thought to the matter. Two people run into each other on the street, are surprised and usually angered because of the other person's heedlessness, when the truth was that each was walking one way and looking another. So we run up against people's prejudices, opinions, rights, duties and sentiments, shock them and anger ourselves because our toes turn one way and our eyes another. We all were told when very little to "look where you are going," but we still persist in thinking that we can violate the rule when we please, while every one else should keep it.

It will be much the same in the next world as it is and ever has been in this one. There will be many surprised ones in the "great morning," who will find that the laws of the moral universe have not been suspended for their special benefit.

Some never really mean any great harm, but when they see a sign, "Keep off the grass," "No crossing," "Dangerous passing," "No admission," "Street closed," or any warning of similar character, they seem possessed by some spirit of contrariness to do the thing prohibited. Then when disaster follows they blame the man who put up the sign to "tempt them," as they call it.

There is another spirit in us quite as dangerous but not so easily detected as this last, which leads to unpleasant surprises in the end.

Great numbers of people are self deceived as to their own nature and character. It is doubtful if many ever take the pains to accurately know themselves. Others read them readily, but to themselves they appear as to no one else. Sometimes this self deception is laughable, at other times pitiful. It is as dangerous as it is ridiculous. Fancy a person talking holiness and acting as prophet of Christ and assuming to rebuke the evil spirits in others and all the time having no likeness to Christ and yet never being conscious of the fact that he is all the time only playing a part without a fiber of moral earnestness in his whole bulk! Yet there are many such.

It will be a great surprise morning when each person appears just exactly as he is. What a shrinking there will be in size in some places and what a glad, exultant adoration of the Master in others, which have been genuine though inconspicuous.

"What a man soweth that shall he also reap." That is a truth well worth keeping constantly in mind until one learns what is worth reaping and then stops all attempts to cheat by putting wild oats for seed when he means to get first class grain in harvest.

"Be ye not deceived; God is not mocked." And He gives the harvest justly.

Better live so as not to be greatly surprised. Live daily the eternal life here and now, and you shall live it right on into the eternal glory of heaven.

Worse Than Insanity.

There is an insanity that is worse than lack of mental balance. It is a more serious thing to be lacking in moral and spiritual power—to be soul mad—than to be lacking in intellectual power—to be mind mad. The madness of Festus as he said to Paul, "Thou art mad," was a more fatal madness than that of Paul. Dr. Samuel Johnson had a friend named Smart who was insane and whose insanity took the shape of casting himself on his knees in the middle of London streets, earnestly and seriously praying. Johnson used often to say, so Boswell tells us, "Rationally speaking, it is a greater madness not to pray at all than to pray as Smart does, but I am afraid there are so many who do not pray at all that their understanding is not called in question." An insane prayer that shows soul is less of a falling short than a mental brightness that shows lack of soul. God, who made the gifted mind, made also for the complete man the aspiring spirit. Only as that spiritual manhood is developed are we completely sane.—Sunday School Times.

Center of Church Life.

Missionary work is the center of the life of every church, the supreme test of loyalty to the Master.—Samuel B. Capen.

Foregleams of Heaven's Dawn.

As when, above some mountain wall,
The sun climbs late,
First from the peaks night's shadows fall,
Day's at the gate,

And travelers in the valleys dark
Look up to see
A light upon the crags and mark
Their dawn to be,

So, in some lighted faces clear
And eyes serene,
The foregleams of heaven's dawn appear;
God's joy is seen.

Lord, I would walk with lifted eyes
That I may mark
Thy dawn of joy with glad surprise,
Even in earth's dark.

—Isaac Ogden Rankin in Forward

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

"Let me see you—I want to see your eyes—they're my eyes now."

Her head strained against his hand to be down again, and all her strength was exerted to be away. She found she could not move in any direction.

"Oh, you're hurting my neck. What shall I do? I can't scream—think what it would mean!—you're hurting my neck!"

"You are hurting your own neck—stop it!"

He kissed her face, softly, her cheeks, her eyes, her chin.

"I've loved you so—don't—what's the use? Be sensible. My arms have starved for you so—do you think they're going to loosen now? Avice Milbrey—Avice Milbrey—Avice Milbrey!"

His arms tightened about her as he said the name over and over.

"That's poetry—it's all the poetry there is in the world. It's a verse I say over in the night. You can't understand it yet—it's too deep for you. It means I must have you—and the next verse means that you must have me—a poor man—be a poor man's wife—and all the other verses—millions of them—mean that I'll never give you up—and there's a lot more verses for you to write, when you understand—meaning that you'll never give me up—and there's one in the beginning means I'm going to carry you out and marry you to-night—now, do you understand?—right off—this very night!"

"Oh! Oh! this is so terrible! Oh, it's so awful!"

Her voice broke, and he felt her body quiver with sobs. Her face was pitifully convulsed, and tears welled in her eyes.

"Let me go—let—me—go!"

He released her head, but still held her closely to him. Her sobs had become uncontrollable.

"Here—" he reached for the little lace-edged handkerchief that lay beside her long gloves and her purse, on the table.

She took it mechanically.

"Please—oh, please let me go—I beg you." She managed it with difficulty between the convulsions that were rending her.

He put his lips down upon the soft hair.

"I won't—do you understand that? Stop talking nonsense."

He thought there would no end to the sobs.

"Have it out, dear—there's plenty of time."

Once she seemed to have stopped the tears. He turned her face up to his own again, and softly kissed her wet eyes. Her full lips were parted before him, but he did not kiss them. The sobs came again.

"There—there!—it will soon be over."

At last she ceased to cry from sheer exhaustion, and when, with his hand under her chin, he forced up her head again, she looked at him a full minute and then closed her eyes.

He kissed their lids.

There came from time to time the involuntary quick little indrawings of breath—the aftermath of her weeping.

He held her so for a time while neither spoke. She had become too weak to struggle.

"My arms have starved for you so," he murmured. She gave no sign.

"Come over here." He led her, unresisting, around to the couch at the other side of the table.

"Sit here, and we'll talk it over sensibly, before you get ready."

When he released her, she started quickly up toward the door that led into the hall.

"Don't do that—please don't be foolish."

He locked the door, and put the key in his pocket. Then he went over to the big folding doors and satisfied himself they were locked from the other side. He went back and stood in front of her. She had watched him with dumb terror in her face.

"Now we can talk—but there isn't much to be said. How soon can you be ready?"

"You are crazy!"

"Possibly—believe what you like."

"How did you ever dare? Oh, how awful!"

"If you haven't passed that stage, I'll hold you again."

"No, no—please don't—please stand up again. Sit over there—I can think better."

"Think quickly. This is Saturday, and to-morrow is their busy day. They may not sit up late to-night."

She arose with a little shrug of desperation that proclaimed her to be in the power of a mad man. She looked at her face in the oval mirror, wiping her eyes and making little passes and pats at her disordered hair. He went over to her.

"No, no—please go over there again. Sit down a moment—let me think. I'll talk to you presently."

There was silence for five minutes. He watched her, while she narrowed her eyes in deep thought.

Then he looked at his watch.

"I can give you an hour, if you've anything to say before it's done—not longer."

She drew a long breath.

"Mr. Bines, are you mad? Can't you be rational?"

"I haven't been irrational. I give you my word, not once since I came here."

He looked at her steadily. All at once he saw her face go crimson. She turned her eyes from his with an effort.

"I'm going back to Montana in the morning. I want you to marry me to-night—I won't even wait one more day—one more hour. I know it's a thing you never dreamed of—marrying a poor man. You'll look at it as the most disgraceful act of folly you could possibly commit, and so will every one else here—but you'll do it. To-morrow at this time you'll be half-way to Chicago with me."

"Mr. Bines—I'm perfectly reasonable and serious—I mean it—are you quite sure you didn't lose your wits when you lost your money?"

"It may be considered a witless thing to marry a girl who would marry for money—but never mind that—I'm used to taking chances."

She glanced up at him curiously.

"You know I'm to marry Mr. Shepler the tenth of next month."

"Your grammar is faulty—tense is wrong—You should say 'was to have married Mr. Shepler.' I'm fastidious about those little things, I confess."

"How can you jest?"

"I can't. Don't think this is any joke. He'll find out."

"Who will find out—what, pray?"

"He will. He's already said he was afraid there might have been some nonsense between you and me, because we talked that evening at the Oldakers'. He told my grandfather he wasn't at all sure of you until that day I lost my money."

"Oh, I see—and of course you'd like your revenge—carrying me off from him just to hurt him."

"If you say that I'll hold you in my arms again." He started toward her. "I've loved you so. I tell you—all the time—all the time."

"Or perhaps it's a brutal revenge on me—after thinking I'd only marry for money."

"I've loved you always. I tell you."

He came up to her, more gently now, and took up her hand to kiss it. He saw the ring.

"Take his ring off!"

She looked up at him with an amused little smile, but did not move. He reached for the hand, and she put it behind her.

"Take it off," he said, harshly.

He forced her hand out, took off the ring with its gleaming stone, none too gently, and laid it on the table behind him. Then he covered the hand with kisses.

Stay at Home And Get Well

Piso's Cure for Consumption and the Plain and Practical Little Book, "How a Consumptive Ought to Live," Will Show You How to Stay at Home and Cure Yourself As Certainly As If You Went Thousands of Miles and Spent Thousands of Dollars.

Fresh air and plenty of it, sunshine unstinted, a full and nutritious diet, daily bathing and oil inunctions, the regular use of Piso's great medicine, that heals and soothes and tones, are all treated on plainly and sensibly by the author and are the crystallized truths of a thousand doctors' observation in every part of the world.

The Piso Cure for Consumption that has for 50 years held a prominent place in the treatment and cure of consumption, coughs, colds and all forms of throat and lung diseases, has just won a great victory in the Superior Court of Cincinnati, Ohio, against those pirates who were trying to steal their name and trade upon their marvelous reputation. Witnesses came from every part of the country, rich and poor alike, and testified what Piso's had done for them or their relatives after doctors, whose names were given, had pronounced them consumptive and incurable. Doctors themselves testified under oath to using it with the best results in both their private and hospital practice. It is a wonderful array of evidence.

Every sensible person ought to read the "Piso Book" and if you send for it today you will get a copy by return mail. Don't forget the address, The Piso Co., 198 Piso Building, Warren, Pa.

DANDELION IS FAVORITE FOR THE SUBURBAN.

Classic Event of the American Turf Will Be Raced for Today by Third Class Horses.

This is Suburban handicap day.

Down in Sheepshead Bay this afternoon at the Coney Island Jockey Club track eleven thoroughbreds, all that are left of the sixty great racers that were entered for the Suburban Handicap on January 3, will strive for this $20,000 turf "classis."

Of the eleven horses there is not one that can be called first class. The field is made up of third and fourth raters only, and the race promises to be no better than those usually seen on a ordinary day.

Dandelion, the handsome chestnut four-year-old colt of Hamburg, that finished second in both the Metropolitan and Brooklyn handicaps this spring, is the favorite for the race. In the list of odds against the eleven horses furnished to The World by George Rose, the prominent bookmaker, Frank R. Hitchcock's horse holds the post of honor in the betting at 11 to 5.

He is chosen to win because he has shown the best form, and it is believed by the majority of racegoers that, barring an accident, he will win.

The fact that Jockey Miller will have the mount, instead of O'Neil, has much to do with his position of favorite. Miller is a better jockey than O'Neil, and as the latter was beaten on Dandelion twice, when he should have won, and made many blunders, it is thought that Miller will profit by the mistakes made and will ride the horse to better advantage. He is in first-class fettle, and John E. Madden's trainer has trained him with one object in view—to win the Suburban Handicap.

Cairngorm is the second choice in the betting, and is regarded as Dandelion's most dangerous opponent. Like the favorite, his trials and races have been with one object—to win this important race. Jack Joyner, who has had Cairngorm in his care ever since the horse was a yearling, was in no hurry to prepare the big son of Star Ruby for early racing; he sought by means of slow work and races at long intervals to work Cairngorm's condition up to the point where it was perfect.

This he has achieved, and Cairngorm is now better and faster than at any time in his career. He was to have been ridden by J. J. Jones, but the accident to that lad at the Gravesend track yesterday forced Sydney Paget to hunt around for a new rider. After a good deal of trouble Lyne was mentioned as the best and most available rider to take Jones' place, and in all probability Roseben's pilot will have the mount on Cairngorm. The odds against the latter were 3 to 1 last night.

Eastern Professionals in Tournament

Thus far there are six eastern professionals who will leave on Monday for Chicago to take part in the open golf championship for professionals. Those who have decided to enter are "Marty" O'Loughlin, of the Plainfield Country Club; Isaac Mackey, of the Fox Hills Golf Club; George Lowe, of the Baltusrol Golf Club; Jack Hobens, of the Englewood Golf Club, and Willie Norton, of Deal Beach. The first prize in the open tournament is $300, but it is estimated that the championship will be worth a few thousand dollars to the winner. The Plainfield Country Club has entered "Marty" O'Loughlin in the tournament and it hopes to see him make a good showing.

Gun Club Shoot.

The second big shoot of the Plainfield Gun Club opened this morning at 10 o'clock. It will last all day, with lunch served on the grounds. Crack shots from all the big cartridge and gun firms will be at the traps, and the local shooters will have a string of handsome prizes to try for.

FROM BOUND BROOK TO MORRISTOWN BY TROLLEY.

Line Seems to Be Assured—Consents Come in Rapidly.

A trolley line between Bound Brook and Morristown seems assured. Rights of way are being secured rapidly.

Freeholder John Whiteneck, of Bernards Township, together with civil engineers and surveyors, are engaged by the Morristown Traction Company in securing singers of property-owners for the right of way of the line. It is to run by the way of Chimney Rock and Martinsville.

Practically every property-owner between Bound Brook and Martinsville has signed and given the company the right of way and the improvement seems assured. From Martinsville to Morristown the trolley will run over what is known as the back road and it will touch Bernardsville. This will afford the only direct and short route between Morristown and Bound Brook, the need for which has been felt for a long time.

The property-owners who have been seen have been assured that if the necessary consents can be secured work on the line will be started within a short time and pushed rapidly forward to completion.

WOULD ELECTRIFY ALL BUT MAIN LINE ROADS.

Electric and Liquid Fuel Motors Are Fast Supplanting Steam Power.

Atlantic City, June 21.—Rapid changes in modern transportation systems was shown in a report submitted to the American Master Mechanics' Association, at the closing session of its convention yesterday afternoon, by a committee to investigate the matter of electrification of steam railroads. The committee virtually recommends the adoption of electricity on all branch roads, and on all but main line long-distance trains.

The report points out that electric and liquid fuel motors are fast supplanting all other systems on urban and suburban roads, and during the discussion of the subject it was predicted that it is but a question of a short time before cheaper operation of electric lines will revolutionize the transportation business of the world.

Electrification of many steam roads is now under way, several varied methods of applying the power being adopted. The development in electric cars has been marked not only by their increase in size and carrying capacity, but also in the size of motors employed. From the 15 and 20 horsepower equipment of early trolley cars, the suburban cars of today are equipped, in some cases, with as high as 400 horsepower.

It was declared by C. A. Seley, of the Rock Island system, that in many sections of the country, where a steam road had been found a poor-paying venture, it could be developed into a well-paying territory.

Gasoline, gasoline-electric and steam motor cars have been tried with success on several roads, especially in the West. The most advanced types are seen in the gasoline engine electric generator cars of the St. Joseph Valley Traction Company's line and the Strang car, which has lately made a successful run from New York to Kansas City. The newest thing in the railroad world, is seen, however, in the Union Pacific motor car, a type of which is now on exhibition in Atlantic City after a run across the continent.

Comparison of the cost of operation of the various systems, per mile, was estimated by the committee as about 24 cents for steam, 18 cents for electricity and 15 cents for gasoline. Alcohol, said W. R. McKeen, Jr., of the Union Pacific, would prove, should its price be reduced to that of gasoline, a strong rival of the latter.

The American Master Mechanics' Association elected the following officers: President, J. F. Deems, New York; first vice president, William McIntosh, Jersey City; second vice president, H. H. Vaughan, Montreal; third vice president, George W. Wildin, Erie; treasurer, Angus Sinclair, New York; secretary, Joseph W. Taylor, Chicago; executive committee, F. H. Clark, Chicago; C. E. Fuller, Chicago; F. H. Curtis, Louisville; F. N. Whyte, New York.

SAYS HE WHIPPED HIS WIFE'S ESCORT.

Testimony was heard yesterday at Newark by Vice-Chancellor Stevens, in the divorce suit of Samuel Male, of Newark, against Hazel S. Male. Several men were named in the bill filed by the plaintiff. The defendant was not present in court. She sent a letter to the Vice-Chancellor saying she was in the Catskills suffering from spine trouble, which might make an operation necessary. The court allowed her until next Tuesday to appear and present her side of the case.

Male testified that he was married to the defendant at Cohoes, N. Y., March 7, 1900, and resided with her first in Brooklyn and later in Newark. He said that because of his wife's conduct with other men, he was compelled to move his residence several times.

Finally, he declared, after he had condoned her offenses several times, on her repeated promises to do better, they quarrelled and separated.

"When we quarrelled," Male said, "my wife took off her wedding ring and threw it at me, saying: 'I cannot be any different, and I intend to live the life I want to live.'

"After we separated I met my wife at the Lackawanna Railroad station in Newark. She was accompanied by a man whom she introduced to me as Mr. Reeve. I licked that fellow then and there, but he didn't put up any fight at all."

Dr. Canfield Tells the Largest Class in its History Meaning of Education.

VALEDICTORIAN'S ESSAY

Miss Hunter's Valedictory of Unusual Merit—Miss Winter Delivers a Splendid Address As Salutatorian.

The thirty-sixth annual commencement of the Plainfield High School was held last night at the First Baptist church, when forty-eight young men and women were graduated with the usual honors. The edifice was thronged with parents, friends and former graduates. The platform was occupied with the graduates of the Class '06, members of the Board of Education and invited guests. Frank's orchestra, of New York, furnished the music at the church and the reception which followed. While the orchestra rendered a popular selection the graduates entered the church and took seats on the platform.

The programme opened with an overture, "Beautiful Galathea," Suppe, by the orchestra; the invocation by Rev. Dr. William S. Hubbell; Tone Poem, "Moonlight," Motet, by the orchestra.

The salutatory and essay, "A Deep Sea Mission," was given by Miss Elizabeth Crane Winter, as follows:

We are a prosaic people living in a prosaic age. From the humdrum monotony of our life of today we look back and wonder, incredulity, even, at the fairy-book existences of men of old. Truly, they make excellent reading,—Vikings, braving rocks and tempests in their rude ships; Crusaders, journeying over a weary stretch of continent to fight and die in a strange, far-off land; Knights and Palmers, Squires and eYomen,—they lived when the modern world was young, when civilization was still in the making and there was much to be done.

This indifferentiy are we prone to relegate to the remote past heroism, self-sacrifice and uncomplaining service of our fellow men. But even this romantically unfruitful century may produce men worthy of a place beside any ardent Elizabethan or zealous sea-king. There are still wrongs to be righted and sufferings to be relieved, and there are still men fitted to undertake such tasks for the betterment of mankind.

We need not look so very far for illustrations to prove our text. Upon the desolate coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland a young Englishman is living out his life among the deep-sea-fishermen and sparsely scattered settlers of those waste regions. For fourteen years Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, Oxford graduate and physician, has been ministering, summer and winter, to the destitute inhabitants of a bleak land. Summer and winter he has labored among them, striving to allay their suffering, to cheer and uplift them, and to give them a "fair chance" in life. And how well he has succeeded, only Dr. Grenfell and his people can fully appreciate.

Years ago, while still a medical student in London, Dr. Grenfell became interested in the work being carried on among the deep-sea fishermen of the western coast of England. He joined the staff of the Royal National Mission, and worked as only he can work to establish it firmly among the fishermen. When everything was running smoothly, and there were no more obstacles to overcome, his attention was drawn to the necessity for similar work in Labrador, and in 1892 he left England for Canada.

Labador is a large country—larger than all England, France and Austria put together. The interior, however, is practically uninhabitated; along the sea-board is scattered the constantly increasing population. In the summertime these settled members are increased by some twenty thousand fisher folk from Canada and Newfoundland. They, of course, must be cared for, too, when the "catch" is small, or an epidemic breaks out, and their attendance through the short but strenuous season sensibly increases the burdens of the physician-missionary. Fortunately, or not, as we may regard it, the season is short,—barely four months in duration. For the remaining eight months of the year Labrador is shut off entirely from the outside world. Then come the hard times; before the winter is over, most of the people are starving to death. For they are desperately poor, these Labrador fishers. To have enough tea, flour, and molasses,—their staple articles of food,—is, with them, to be in flourishing circumstances.

In the summer, at least, they have enough to maintain existence; but in the winter they have little or no employment by which they may earn a living, and their condition is pitiable. Even while the fishing is good, they never realize the half of what their labor should bring in to them. Unsuspecting and illiterate as they are, they are readily fleeced by unscrupulous traders, who practically own them before many years. After a hard winter they start handicapped. In order to secure the wherewithal to begin work, they must needs mortgage the prospective catch, and thus, living from hand to mouth, they are obliged to continue as long as there are fish to sell.

Such was the state of the Labrador coast before Dr. Grenfell's arrival. There was but one physician to be had—and his visits were few and casual,—a brutal creature, who as often as not refused to attend the people, succored them or left them to die, as the spirit moved him. Here was a condition of affairs sadly in need of reformation. And the man was not wanting. Dr. Grenfell came and immediately set to work, with an energy and precision which foreshadowed great things. In a short time there was a hospital established at St. Anthony on the coast of North Newfoundland, and the new doctor was known over some two thousand miles of sea-board. All his efforts were directed to the extermination of the race-plague—tuberculosis—which the insufficient nourishment and hard lives of the folk rapidly produced.

To gain his end, Dr. Grenfell must in some way better the physical condition of the people, else his work would be totally useless. As a first step, he determined to release them from theb ondage in which they were held by the traders, and to abolish the iniquitous "truck" system, as it was called. So he started a co-operative store. This succeeded so well that now there the eight or ten more scattered along the coast of Labador and Newfoundland, and the people are in much happier circumstances than ever before.

But the assistance of the fishers during the winter was a matter of much concern to the missionary. Little could be done for them, as they scattered as soon as the cold wether fell, in the hope of being able to trap a few fur-bearing animals. Thus widely separated as they were, nothing could be done to educate the children. The problem then was, to provide for the men emplayment which would bring the families together into a small community. But what problem could Dr. Grenfell not solve? Taking up a large grant of government land, he had soon built a saw-mill, gathered the people about it, giving them plenty of work for the terrible winter time, and provided a school for the children.

But quite as important as these medical and missionary stations are the movable ones in which Dr. Grenfell patrols the coast, bearing with him health and cheer. In summer he carries on his work by means of his little steamer, the "Strathcona;" in winter he visits every accessible corner of his territory in his dog-sleigh, dubbed the "Lend-a-Hand."

The "Strathcona" sails up and down the coast from St. John's to Cape Chidley, stopping at the various missionary stations, the three hospitals and the Orphan Asylum, and answers calls from all quarters. No weather is rough enough, no gale too strong to keep the "Strathcona" in harbor when a call comes for help. Seas that appall the staunchest of the Labrador fishermen, tempests that fairly lift the ships from their anchorage—nothing is too formidable for this daring missionary. By the natives he has long been regarded with tolerant amusement as a gentle lunatic, whom Providence preserves miraculously from destruction. Mr. Norman Duncan, who visited him on board his little vessel during a most perilous trip says:

"Doubtless he enjoyed the experience while it lasted—and promptly forgot it as being common-place. I have heard of him caught at night in a winter's gale of wind and sleet, threading a tumultuous, reef strewn sea, his skipper at the wheel, himself on the bowsprit, guiding the ship by the flash and roar of breakers while the sea tumbled over him." Mr. Duncan says of a friend who was with Dr. Grenfell on this trip: "If the chance passenger who told me the story, is to be believed, upon that trying occasion the Doctor had 'the time of his life.'

"All that man wanted, I told the Doctor, was, as he said, 'to bore a hole in the bottom of the ship and crawl out.'

"'Why,' exclaimed the Doctor with a laugh of surprise, 'he wasn't frightened, was he?'"

The "Strathcona" is the fifth boat which Dr. Grenfell has had since he

DEER IN THE MOUNTAIN WOODS NEAR DUNELLEN

DOE WANDERING ABOUT IN WILD STATE RECALLS OLD DAYS.

Memories of pioneer days in this section have been recalled to the residents of the back country near Dunellen the past two weeks by the appearance of a deer in the woods. The animal, a small doe, has been seen several times recently in the mountain neighborhood, and is evidently at home there.

Where the doe came from is a question, but it is supposed to be a lost pet or a stray from some herd on some wealthy man's country estate. It seems quite tame, although too shy to be captured.

It has been on Goldson Smalley's farm, just back of Dunellen, two or three times, and showed no great excitement at the appearance of Mr. Smalley or his men. The latter didn't know just what the game laws have to say about deer so they did not attempt to meddle with it. A big dog started after it one day, but the deer crashed up the mountain slope into the woods, and showed its pursuer a clean pair of heels. It spotted the dog and jumped away to safety as though it was experienced in guarding itself from chase.

STATE BOARD OF TRADE

Local Board to Join In Movement For Its Organization.

WILL HELP POST OFFICE

Proposed Board Would Pay Particular Attention to Matter of Federal Appropriations for New Jersey.

In common with other presidents of boards of trade all over the State, L. B. Woolston will receive an invitation in a few days to join in the organization of a state board of trade. Victor L. Mason, president of the Passaic Board of Trade and a prominent member of the Inter-State Hudson River Bridge Commission, announced his intention, yesterday, of sending out the invitations in pursuance of a plan he has developed after long consideration of the subject.

Mr. Mason made his plan public for the first time to a Daily Press representative who met him at a meeting of the Bridge Commission in New York yesterday afternoon. He said "he was convinced that a State Board of Trade was necessary for the proper and consistent advancement of commercial and maritime interests of the State at large, and believed the organization of such a body could be accomplished readily, and that it would speedily demonstrate its value.

His plan of organization is for the election of from five to ten representatives from the local boards. Meetings would be held quarterly, or oftener, if necessary, for the discussion of things affecting the State in general and of communities in which industries or conditions might be bettered to the general advantage. Purely local affairs would not be barred, because the association would be essentially of a co-operative nature. Particular attention would be paid to matters of Federal appropriations for, and policy toward, the State. In connection with the latter aspect of the board's work, Mr. Mason pointed out that New Jersey got no river and harbor money from Congress this term, and he believed it was simply because no such organization as the proposed board was in existence to watch such things and demand recognition from the National lawmakers. Plainfield's desire for a Federal postoffice building would be one of the things to which a State board would give the weight of its influence.

BRIDE AND ALUMNA IN MONTH OF ROSES.

Dr. J. L. Hurlbut's Daughter Becomes the Wife of Rev. Dougherty.

The Rev. George P. Dougherty, pastor of the Broad Street Park M. E. church, Trenton, and Miss Bertha Grace Hurlbut, daughter of the Rev. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, of Bloomfield, N. J., and formerly of this city, were married yesterday in Bloomfield. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father.

Last week the bride was graduated from Vassar college. Her father is pastor of the First M. E. church, Bloomfield, and a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Conference. He was formerly secretary of the Sunday School and Tract Society of the M. E. church, and is author of "Sunday School Topics."

The Rev. Mr. Dougherty is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Doughterty, of Bordentown. He is now serving his second year as pastor of the Broad Street Park M. E. church, Trenton. He is a graduate of the Wesleyan university and Drew seminary.

No Decision on Street Pavement.

The street committee of the Common Council has not yet decided what sort of a permanent pavement, if any, will be laid in Park avenue, where the street is to be widened. No provisions have been made in the annual tax budget for the raising of money for this improvement and it is possible that a permanent pavement may not be laid at present if the city finances will not permit it. If a permanent pavement is not laid now the street will be macadamized to conform to the other part of the avenue.

McIntyre Won the Booby.

John Watson, of Grant avenue, gave a euchre party to a number of friends at his home Wednesday night. Six tables were used and there was some very spirited playing for the prizes. The consolation prize was awarded Frank McIntyre.

—Neuman Brothers have a new offering for tomorrow in luscious muskmelons, the kind that cut right and bring joy to the palate. They have been selected especially for the Plainfield trade.

GIDDES KNEW HE WAS IN NEED OF A GUARDIAN

SO HE HAD HIMSELF STORED AWAY IN A CELL.

George Giddes, who lives somewhere in the foothills back of Watchung, wandered into police headquarters yesterday forenoon and asked to be cared for. He was just a leetle bit off his pins, he explained, and there was some money in his pants that might be throwed away, and he guessed he would be better off all 'round if he was kept somewhere out of trouble. Doorman McCue put him in Coop No. 6, and locked the door on extravagance and all other forms of trouble.

George was moved to put himself in a place of safety by a narrow escape from going under the hoofs of a carriage team at Park avenue and Front street a few minutes before. Chief Kiely saved him by a quick jump from the sidewalk, though the Chief told George to go on about his business and gave him a chance to get home. George decided that he wasn't fit to be trusted alone and made his plea for a place in the shelter of the steel cells.

Judge Runyon commended George's good sense in the city court this morning, and suspended sentence. George started for the Notch with a beaming face and his hand on his money.

WARREN CHAPEL GREETS NEW SUPERINTENDENT

ALL ORGANIZATIONS UNITE IN RECEPTION—JR. C. E. ENTERTAINS.

The various societies of Warren chapel united last night in tendering a reception to E. E. Parvin, the new chapel superintendent. Members of the congregation and their friends attended in large numbers. In connection with the event, the Junior Christian Endeavor Society gave its annual entertainment.

The chapel was prettily decorated with flowers, and the delightful spirit of informal sociability that marks Warren affairs was a distinct feature of the evening.

The programme opened with the entrance of the juniors in a body, singing, "Onward Soldiers of Christian Endeavor." A recitation by Miss Case followed; and was greeted with warm applause; Miss Nora Schenck sang a solo in excellent voice; a double quartette rendition of "Penny Song" by little girls scored a great success; after another recitation by Miss Case, the Misses Ida and Edith Wheeler played a piano duet with much skill; Miss Edna Green recited cleverly, after which Miss Schenck again sang and Miss Case recited a third selection; a flower drill by twelve girls brought the programme of entertainment to a delightful close.

Rev. J. W. McKelvey, the pastor, welcomed Mr. Parvin to his new charge. Mr. Parvin responded in happy vein.

Refreshments were served, and an hour of social intercourse, during which Mr. Parvin was warmly greeted by the chapel members, followed. The refreshments were served under the direction of the Ladies' Aid Society by the members of the Christion Endeavor Society and the Young Men's Brotherhood. Mrs. John H. Snyder, chairman of the Ladies' Aid entertainment committee, directed the serving.

HIS HEAD WAS CUT.

Damaged Alien, of Hobo Bent, Comes to Police for Repairs.

Salvator Salvicornow, who acknowledged that the name was made abroad, came into police headquarters late last night, to have a damaged head attended to. He said he was hit by a bad man, but the police extracted the fact that he was riding from New York to Philadelphia on a freight train from him, and decided, after further pumping, that Salvator had either fallen from the train or jumped.

Dr. Lufburrow was called in and dressed his cuts. He was not badly injured. The police kept him all night to rest up, but chased him from town with harsh words this morning.

Uplifting the Italians.

Work among the Italians of Newark will be the subject of a talk to be delivered tonight at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Mrs. A. Dessori, who has been engaged in mission labors among the Italians for some time, will be the speaker.

DEFEATED ATTEMPT TO ELECT THURLOW

DEADLOCK IN JERSEY CITY BOARD OVER HEALTH OFFICER.

Because of a tie vote of the members of the Jersey City Board of Health at a special meeting, last night, Leon R. Thurlow, health officer of this city, was defeated for a similar position in Jersey City. It was the second unsuccessful effort made by the Jersey City Board of Health to elect Mr. Thurlow as health officer to succeed Henry Smellie. The names of H. H. Bowby, Dr. Frederick Robertson and Dr. Ferdinand N. Sauer, all of Jersey City, were candidates in opposition to Mr. Thurlow.

There was a deadlock on the resolution calling for the appointment of Mr. Thurlow. Commissioners Lambert, Culver, Rowe and Gille, all physicians, and Hespe, a dentist, voted for Mr. Thurlow, and Commissioners Delaney, Sprouls, Chester Ziegener and Dr. Finnerty, voted against him, showing their preference for a Jersey City man. The health officer to be appointed will receive $2,000 salary. Smellie now receives $1,400.

It is not known what future action may be taken in the matter, but it is believed that another meeting of the Board of Health will be held soon and a Jersey City man decided upon.

RAILROAD VICTIM WAS A RAHWAY MAN.

Newspaper Advertisement Gave Clue That Cleared Mystery.

Through an advertisement in a daily paper, the identity of the man killed on the New Jersey Central at Cranford last Thursday and buried in this city, Monday, was established this morning. He was Nils August Erichson, aged 20 years and made his home with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Johnson, of East Grand street, Rahway. Mrs. Johnson came to Plainfield today and after viewing the clothing and effects of the victim, declared that they had belonged to her boarder.

Erichson was a carpenter by trade and was the support of his mother who lives in Stockholm, Sweden. He left the Johnson home on Tuesday night, June 12, and nothing was heard from him after that. When he failed to return, the Johnsons inserted notices asking about him in various county papers and one of them was read by Miss Susie Steers, of this city. The description of Erichson tallied with the one of the man killed on the railroad, published in The Daily Press, and she wrote Mrs. Johnson. The latter followed up the suggestion with the success indicated.

Erichson had no relatives in this country, and it is not likely that the body will be disinterred.

Serious Fire Averted.

In demonstrating the illuminating power of a Welsbach light to some callers at her home at Manning and Watchung avenues, last night, Mrs. Henry Nitschwitz set fire to some fine netting that was used to cover the chandlier. Instantly, the light flimsy material was ablaze, and serious damage was threatened when other members of the family rushed in and gave their assistance. Miss Nitschwitz with unusual presence of mind picked up a rug and quickly extinguished the fire before any of the furniture caught. Mrs. Nitschwitz was standing in a rocking chair while lighting the lamp and in the excitement narrowly escaped a bad fall.

Death of W. J. Gardner.

Wesley Johnson Gardner, a son of the late Insley Gardner, well known here for many years, died on Friday last in Washington following an attack of typhoid fever. Mr. Gardner, who was named for J. Wesley Johnson, of East Seventh street, was born in Plainfield. He was graduated from Harvard and from the Yale forestry school, and jointed the United States forestry service in 1903. He was planning to go to Europe, when he was taken ill. Mr. Gardner is survived by his mother and a sister, who live in Galveston, Texas, and another sister living in the east.

Leal's Boys Have a Dinner.

Members of this year's and other classes at Leal's School had a dinner at the Plainfield Country Club last niht, in celebrating the closing of the school year. After an excel-Hellstrom, the steward, the young men gathered about a piano and sang popular songs and had a general good time. Those present were Wm. T. Glenney, Edward Browne, John Valiant, Lawrence Stryker, Lawrence Smith, Arthur Wills, Edward T. Booth and Charles P. Lyman. Daniel Guttierez, Charles Chapman and Stanley Bates were out of town and could not attend.

SEWER SYSTEM HEARING

North Plainfield Council to Listen to Taxpayers Views on Improvement.

SUGGEST TWO PLANS

Independent Sewer at Heavy Expense or Joint Use of Plainfield's Model Disposal Plant.

The postponed sewer meeting of the North Plainfield Council will take place in the council chambers tonight. It is to be a public affair and Mayor Smalley and his associates are anxious that every taxpayer in North Plainfield be in attendance. The question of building an independent system or accepting Plainfield's terms to use its disposal beds will be thoroughly discussed and what action takes place later will depend upon how the citizens view it.

Engineer George Pierson, who has been preparing plans and specifications, will be at the meeting and will explain any point that is not clear.

The report of the special committee, of which Councilman M. C. VanArsdale is chairman, presented to the Council on Friday night, June 1, contained these estimates:

"We are able to give some figures which will to some extent show the relative cost of emptying the borough sewage upon the Plainfield beds (if a satisfactory arrangement with the city can be made) and of establishing an independent disposal plant of our own either within or beyond the borough limits.

"Thus it is estimated that a satisfactory system of sewers covering about sixteen miles of our streets (there are something less than fourteen miles of water mains) and about two miles of outfall sewer to Rock avenue, can be installed complete, with 180 manholes, 15 flush tanks, 12 lampholes and 800 specials and including engineering and incidentals for $65,000; also that a disposal plant capable of taking 350,000 gallons daily can be constructed for $35,000; also that the necessary land will probably cost $15,000; making a total cost assuming that disposal plant were located at Rock avenue of $115,000. If the plant is located below Rock avenue the cost would eb increased by about $8,000 for each additional mile but if a point is found where natural materials suitable for sewer beds is found this would be reduced considerably. If having reached Rock avenue a pumping plant is built to pump the sewage to the Plainfield beds the cost of such plant would be about $3,500. Electric power to operate such pump would cost each year about $500.

"Assuming that an agreement with Plainfield can be reached and that the borough should discharge upon the city beds one-fourth of the total number of gallons discharged thereon by the city and borough jointly we reach the following conclusion:

"Total cost of Plainfield disposal plant including land, $145,500; less land not used for disposal purposes, etc., which possibly may be deducted, $25,500; dividing this by four leaves amount in which the borough must pay interest, $30,000; add original cost of pumping plant, $3,500; total, $33,500; interest at 4 per cent. per year on $33,500, $1,340; cost of power for pump, $500; one quarter of operating expenses of Plainfield plant yealy, $619; total, $2,450. Say in round figures that it will cost us to discharge on the Plainfield beds each year $2,500; $2,500 is the interest at 4 per cent. on $62,500. In other words it seems that we will be obliged to pay if we use the Plainfield beds, the interest on say $62,500. While on the other hand it seems that we can establish a plant of our own at a cost which will vary, depending upon whether we locate it within the borough or a mile or two beyond the borough limits, between $60,000 and $70,000.

"There are many phases of this subject to be carefully considered before any definite action is taken, and a change of plans may also considerably change the figures given. Your committee feels that before any plan is adopted an expression of public sentiment should be sought on the whole subject and particularly upon the question of whether we should strive to use the Plainfield plant or build one of our own and if the latter, then where it should be located."

Friends of consolidation oppose the scheme to establish an independent plant in North Plainfield, using the argument that such a step would put an end to merger of the two municipalities. Mayor Smalley, who favors the independent sewage disposal system, is opposed to consolidation before annexation. He bases his opposition to a point use of the Plainfield plant on the ground that he is not satisfied that the latter's system is a success.

MOVING TIME IS HERE.

Many people who have been dissatisfied with their apartments during the past winter would like to move to better themselves, but cannot afford to.

Why not come in and talk with us? If you owe a little back rent or grocery bill or the doctor or coal man, or you need money for rent in advance, it might possibly be an advantage to get a small loan, say $10, $25 or possibly $50, of us, and then pay it back in small amounts, either weekly or monthly, to suit your convenience. We loan from $10 up—any sum—any time. The possession of household goods, piano, or horse and wagon, are sufficient evidence of your ability to pay. A postal will bring us to your door.

Miss Jennie Thorpe, of Paterson, Rescues Plainfield Young Man.

Lake Hopatcong, June 22.—Herman C. Blanchard, seventeen years old, son of John M. Blanchard, of Plainfield, stood up in a rowboat yesterday on Lake Hopatcong. The craft upset and the youth was thrown into the water. He cannot swim and shouted for help.

Miss Jennie Thorpe, of Paterson, who was fishing, heard the cries, jumped from her boat and swam to him. When she reached him Blanchard was sinking for the third time. Miss Thorpe, holding him with her left hand, swam for shore, while a crowd of cottagers and campers cheered.

Almost exhausted she reached the shore. Blanchard was unconscious and was only revived after half an hours hard work.

Children Present a Play.

Morristown, June 22.—"A Midsummer Night's Dream," as interpreted by Mendelssohn's music, was presented in honor of Monsignor Joseph M. Flynn's jubilee by the children of Bayley School in Lyceum Hall Wednesday evening to an audience that crowded the house. The piece was beautifully set upon the stage, reflecting great credit upon the Sisters of Mercy, who trained the children and planned the costumes and stage settings. In the mast were the following: Charles O'Neill, as Lysander; Francis Conway, as Demetrius; Mary Lenox, as Hermia; Genevieve Kenny, as Helena; Lucy Dempsey, as Oberon; Eleanor Sheridan, as Titania; Francis Condon, as Bottom; Robert Burke, as Puck.

Admits Robbing Gas Meters.

Perth Amboy, June 22.—Christian Bastian, aged nineteen, has confessed to the police that he is the slot gas meter thief who has been operating in this city for nearly a year. Bastian has been under suspicion for several months, but efforts to secure evidence on which to arrest him were unsuccessful. He was accused of stealing a diamond ring this week from Mrs. Lizzie Applegate, with whom he boarded. Bastian confessed and gave up the pawn ticket, which showed that he had secured $17 on the ring. Chief P. J. Burke then charged the boy with being the gas meter thief, and Bastian broke down and confessed. An effort will be made to send him to the State Reformatory.

Collector Fry's Son Saved Boy.

Jersey City, June 22.—Clement, thirteen years old, son of City Collector Edward Fry, of this city, is a modest hero. He saved Frederick Maurer, eight years old, from drowning Tuesday. Maurer clasped him about the neck and almost dragged him down. Fry hit Maurer on the head and dazed him. He then swam ashore with him. The Fry boy fell exhausted as he reached the bank. His foot was severely cut in clambering out of the water, and it was through this accident that his parents learned he had been in the bay, an dthen he reluctantly told why he had gone in.

Being stationed two miles from his home, he found that car and cab fare was consuming the greater part of the salary he receives from the city.

Cow Gives Birth to Calf and a Half.

Monroe, June 22.—William Lantz, a well-to-do farmer of this place, has just lost a cow, which gave birth to a calf and a half this week. Several farmers say they never saw anything of the sort before. The calf had one head, but just below the shoulders the body separated, forming two hindquarters, each body having two legs, two tails, while the head and only two feet were on the forequarter. The calf and cow died.

The case has been watched with great interest by the residents of Cumberland county.

HIS CLOTHES AND COIN STOLEN IN CEMETERY.

Boy Declares Three Captors Rushed Growler Until His $3.30 Was Exhausted.

Trenton, June 22.—The police are investigating a story told by James Kenny, of 30 Taylor street, aged 14 years, who alleges that he was locked in a grave digger's tool shanty, in the negro cemetery on Oak street, and detained there, after he had been robbed of his money and all his clothing.

Kenny declares that he was coming from the Trent Tile Works at 9:30 o'clock Monday night when he was met by a gang of three men, gagged, bound and taken to the shanty, where he was stripped of his clothing and robbed of $3.30.

His captors rushed the growler until early in the morning, and then vacated the place, leaving him benumber with the cold. He managed to abstract a piece of jute bagging and improvised a robe for himself, then rushed home.

Kenny's parents believe that he was thus treated, and he declares to the police that he is telling the truth.

George Seeber, of the Rising Sun Brewery Company; Edward Nugent, of Elizabeth, and Judge Hogan, of Staten Island, were in town yesterday on business. They made the trip to Plainfield in an automobile and while here called on a number of friends.

LOCAL MARKSMEN SHINE AT THE SILVER SHOOT

THEIRS THE PRIZES IN ALL EVENTS! ONLY ONE PROFESSIONAL.

Unqualified success attended the silver shoot of the Plainfield Gun Club yesterday. There was a large entry list, and good scores were made.

There were ten events, and handsome silver prizes were offered for local shooters in all of them. The shooting began at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and lasted until late in the afternoon. Lunch was served on the grounds. There was one professional at the shoot, a representative from Schoverling Bros. He made a string of fine scores, but under the terms of the shoot he was debarred from the prizes, so that his presence did not rattle the local marksmen.

The Prize-winners were as follows:

First event, Piercy, Luckey, Truax. Second event, Piercy, Bogart, Luckey. Third event, Piercy, Truax, Vosseller. Fourth event, Truax, Luckey, Vesseller. Fifth event, Truax, Piercy, Luckey. Sixth event, Piercy, Overbaugh, Emmons. Seventh event, Piercy, Emmons, Gille. Eighth event, Emmons, Piercy, Vosseller, Kaeding, Luckey. Ninth event, Piercy, Travers, Truax. Tenth event, Percy, Gille, Travers.

The committee was made up of H. P. Vesseller, Herbert Overbaugh and Harry Dreier.

F. C. Jennings the New Champion.

F. C. Jennings, of the borough, playing as a member of the Garden City Golf Club, is the new champion of the Eastern Trade Golf Association. In the second annual tournament of this body, held on the links of the Atlantic City Country Club on Wednesday, Mr. Jennings returned a card of 41—45—86. M. E. Danforth, of the Columbia Golf Culb, won the second class cup, and H. S. Martin, of the Willow Brook Country Club, the third class prize. Martin also won the approaching and putting contest with a score of 9. There were forty odd starters.

Willing Workers' Lawn Festival.

The Willing Workers of Trinity Reformed church will hold a lawn festival tonight on the grounds surrounding George Kirch's residence at Manning avenue and Somerset street. Ice cream and cake will be sold and the committee will make an effort to give everyone a good time.

Among those attending the wedding or Roderick Stephens, son of Olin J. Stephens, president of the New York Board of Trade, and Miss Marguerite Dulon, of New York, at St. Anne's church, New York, Wednesday night, was Harold L. Smalley, of East Front street.

began his work on the Labrador. All the others have succumbed to hard usage on "the worst coast in the world." The Doctor's disregard of storm and surf has given rise to a new proverb among the fishermen. When the wind blows an exceptionally stiff gale and the sea looks particularly histile, they say, "This will bring Grenfell." And it usually does.

All through the long, desolate winter Dr. Grenfell makes his untiring trips on his sledge, the "Lend-a-Hand." Drawn by a dog-team, over ice an snow, in bitter cold, he never hesitates for an instant to start out whenever he is called upon. In a letter written to a contemporary periodical, he says:

"We have already been over six hunired miles with the dogs. Fortunately, or, I may say, unfortunately, I had forty other patients along the route. Thus, on my second southern trip to a place about sixty miles distant, to fetch a person back for operation, we were away thirteen days and saw seventy sick folk."

In another article he tells most graphically of a typical trip which he made during the winter. Called to the bedside of adying priest many miles away, he prepared to start immediately in his long journey. He was just on the point of setting out, dog-train before the door and driver merrily cracking his whip, when an urgent summons was brought him to attend a small boy who had broken his thigh. "Johnnie's" sufferings relieved and his injured limb plastered in a plaster cast, the doctor hurried forward to his first patient. As they were hastening past a wretched little hut in the wilderness of snow, the Doctor was again hailed and asked to look into the condition of a poor little orphan girl, half dead from starvation. He found the child wrapped in rags and laid on the floor of the shanty, a pitful spectacle. The little one was ministered to and the Doctor set out for the third time, finally reaching his destination in spite of delays and appeals.

Such is the life of Dr. Grenfell. And does he regret the other life in the outside world which he has given up? Does he realize how great is the work he is doing? Perhaps he best answers himself. "I am no martyr," he exclaimed impatiently to a friend who put to him a like question. Indeed no. He is a healthy, hearty, humorous man, eager to get out of life all there may be in it for him, repoicing boyishly in the risk and the danger, glad of his freedom, always merry and brave, cheerful and strong. His ideal of existence seems to be expressed in the words he so often uses: "The great joys of this life are its opportunities for service."

After a selection, "George Washington, Jr.," by the orchestra, the address of the evening was delivered by James H. Canfield, LL. D., librarian at Columbia University and former Chancellor of the University of Nebraska. The speaker took for his subject, "Education." He said that true education is a force which binds men together. A tax is levied for it the same as for anything else and it is not because the taxpayer gets returns that he contributes towards education. Dr. Canfield said that many a man pays taxes for a highway over which he never rides, or for a library or museum he never sees or from which he never gets any direct benefit. The State knows little of John, Peter or Louisa, but it seeks the higher life as in religion. Continuing, Dr. Canfield spoke in part as follows:

"The State has no royal highway of its own, but obtains force in the development of intelligence in the individual. What is it the duty of the State seeks? What has it done for you? It is the duty of the teacher to impart self-control so that you can put yourself to a given task and win out. So long as you attain that mental power it does not matter so much about the process after all. If you find certain mental food disagreeable you must be able and willing to take it, and when you absorb more than another it shows that you are the greater sponge.

"There must be an efficient desire which is something different from other desires. It is not an aspiration mixed with perspiration, but a spirit of self-denial today that you may enjoy more tomorrow. You must remember that an individual represents a unit of power that is not to be overlooked. You as graduates are now free to chose your own way. Less than ever before you are required to go with the crowd and more than ever before you can set your prow into the open rather than enter the enemies' harbor. You may solve problems in your own way, but remember that freedom is a dangerous thing to one not under self-control. This is the day of the electric car, the telegraph and the telephone and if you want to be on the band wagon you must travel with the electric car and learn to use the modern appliances and must understand the mechanism of how the world is small and reduced when it is larger than ever.

"There must be integrity. The kind that will weigh an honest bushel of wheat during the week as conscientiously as one attends service on Sunday. Unselfishness through the daily life in thought, word and deed is needed, so that the breadth of vision will teach that it is best to serve. We select the physician that is best able to serve us and true competition in trade is not the kind that drives the weaker fellow to the wall, but rather the spirit of serving the public the best we know how. The un-repaid and voluntary work after all is the best. What pay does your teacher or member of the Board of Education receive, or what pay does the man receive who devotes his time to building up hospitals and similar institutions that abide?

"Out of our great educational institutions I believe there will yet come that simplicity of life so much desired. The essentials as I understand them include education, integrity, unselfishness and simplicity, combined with self-control, an efficient desire and service."

Another selection, "Loveland," by the orchestra, preceded the presentation of rewards by Leander N. Lovell, member of the Board of Education. The awards will be found in another part of thte paper. The selection, "Dolly Dollars," by the orchestra followed the awards and then Miss Gertrude Laura Hunter delivered the essay and valedictory, entitled, "The Triumphs of Youth." It was as follows:

"There is one respect in which the aging world and the aging individual are alike. With each the limit of usefulness advances as each increases in years. The boy who at ten considered the man of forty as ready for the chimney-corner and Taylor's 'Holy Dying,' himself at forty is carrying a banner of red or orange or blue to football matches, and is splitting his throat over valorous deeds on the diamond or gridiron. So it is with the world. Part of it elected a 'young' man of forty-three to the presidency a year or so ago, and insistently spoke of his youth in connection with such a position of trust. Over a century ago, however, William Pitt, a man twenty years his junior, was managing the office of chancellor of the exchequer, becoming premier of England at twenty-three. We are in the habit of referring to Alphonso as 'the little king of Spain,' imagining him with the curls and the broad white collar of infancy. It would be safe to say, however, that when the world was younger, nobody regarded the eighteen year old Alexander as 'the little prince of Macedon.'

"Whatever the world may regard as the limit of youthfulness, however, there have been prodigies and triumphs of youth in every age. The roll-call of youth in the days before the term included almost all ages under the allotted three-score-and-ten was a remarkable one. Its names were splendid and inspiring, from David the shepherd boy, who began his history as king at eighteen, to Chatterton, the poet, finishing his tragic chronicle at the same age; from Alexander to Macedon, ruler of all the eastern world before he was thirty-three, to James Watts, the Scotch peasant boy of eighteen, who made possible our wonderful steam engine; from Napoleon, sweeping western Europe at twenty-seven, to Raphael, finishing his deathless work at thirty-seven; from Charlemagne, master of a nation at thirty, to Shelley, master of poetry at twenty-one.

"So the list runs, emphasizing more particularly warriors, statesmen, and poets, and most prominent of whom established their right to the name of great before the age of twenty-five, and many of them when not yet out of their teens.

"The stories of the world's famous warrior-youths are especially interesting. Possibly the most picturesque of all is that of David, the shepherd boy who came down from the hills of Judea, where he had tended the flock and watched the courses of the stars, to become champion of his people against their Philistine enemy, Goliath. 'A youth, and ruddy and of a fair countenance,' he was, yet 'he prevailed over the Philistine—and slew him.'

"A story of wonderful power is that of Alexander, world conqueror. It seems almost impossible to account for the boy who pressed from victory to victory throughout the known world, who subjected kings and nations to his will, who knew nothing but triumph and the lust of triumph all his life, and who at last sighed for more worlds to conquer.

"Not only has the military world produced youthful leaders, but political circles also have exhibited precocious geniuses. English history has given us William Pitt, the second Earl of Chatham, whose useful genius displayed itself with an almost unnatural precocity, and whose influence was greater than that of his king before his twenty-fifth year. By the side of Pitt we may place his rival, the celebrated Charles James Fox, whose talents were developed so early that he was elected to Parliament when not yet twenty, and who at twenty-one was a lord of the admiralty and a sharp thorn in George III's side. Our own America has produced such statesmen as Patrick Henry, Alexander Hamilton, and Thomas Jefferson, who, while still comparatively young, helped to win for this country the independence which she has since been cherishing.

"Then, too, there are prodigies of youth in the literary world—men who gave to the world some of the finest works in literature before the age of 'the sere and yellow.' One of these was Thomas Chatterton, who was destined never to know of his triumph. Chatterton claimed to have found in the Church of St. Mary of Redcliffe some poems which he ascribed to a priest of the fifteenth century. It was later discovered, however, that the poems were his own, but it was not until after the poet, tired with the struggle for existence, had committed suicide, in his eighteenth year. Chatterton's poetical work is among the permanent treasure of the English language.

"A trio of youthful poetic prodigies is composed of John Keats, Percy Bysshe Shelley, and Lord Byron. From Keats we have the 'Endymion,' written at the age of twenty-two; Shelley has left 'Queen Mab,' which appeared when he was only twenty-one; and Byron wrote his 'Childe Harold' at twenty-four. What literary masterpieces might have been the production of their versatility can hardly be estimated. All three of the poets died before completing their work.

"The most wonderful of all youthful geniuses, however, must be placed in a separate class. It is she whom the world knows as Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans, she who defied courts and judges, she who, best of all, was the purest of Christians. It was a triumph of the rarest sort when, a girl of eighteen, she took the city of Orleans; it was another triumph as she calmly and wisely and unanswerably furnished her own defense in the faces of some of the world's best jurors; it was a triumph, too, when she lay down her life at the stake, a short time after, in the streets of Rouen. If there have ever been prodigies of youth, Joan of Arc is the first.

"What has been the influence of the lives of these geniuses upon the world we cannot tell with any degree of certainty. What can be their influence upon our individual lives is for each of us to decide. Like them, we must go forth into the world; like them, we must choose our careers. It may be that from among us, this class of 1906, unimportant in the eyes of the world, will arise geniuses such as those whom I have mentioned. It is not for us to know now. But it is enough for us to know that, whatever be our destination, we have the inspiration of all that is good in the past, and the will and determination of the present to succeed.

"Classmates—The time has come for us to say good-bye. The time has come for us to leave the life which has been such a happy one for us all. We art parting now from the friendships that we have cherished so dearly in the years that are gone. We are entering that broader life which must come to us all, that field which separates friend from friend, which sends us into ways that are far apart.

"All this has been said before, classmates, many, many times. Does the word 'good-bye' mean anything t ous? Is there one of us who hears it merely as the barren expression of the formality of parting? I think not. Common as it is, we must all realize its deep significance, and that realization must have cost us all a parting sigh during the past few weeks.

"In a few hours the class of 1906 will have passed out of existence. In a few hours each of us will be starting on one of those separate ways. Good-bye, classmates, I say it with all sincerity. Yet not fareweli forever — simply, Aufwiedersehen — 'Till we meet again.'"

OCCUPATIONS OF FIGHTERS

The following information concerning the occupations of fighters of more or less prominence was recently furnished by Robert Edgreen, of the New York World:

John L. Sullivan was a Boston cabman. He is lecturing on temperance.

Jim Jeffries was a boilermaker. Now he's a farmer.

Jim Corbett was a bank clerk. He's an actor at present.

Bob Fitzsimmons was a blacksmith. He is running a farm now, doing monologue turns and fighting between times.

Tom Sharkey was a sailor. He has a saloon.

Kid McCoy was a clerk in a dry goods store. At present a capitalist.

Gus Ruhlin was a printer and an ironworker. Capitalist too.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien drove a team in the winter and worked in an Atlantic City bathhouse in summer. Also a capitalist, still boxes, acts and draws a "champion's" salary.

Peter Maher was a cooper in a Dublin (Ireland) brewery. At present he drives a milk wagon.

Tommy West was a sailor, then a plasterer. He plasters still.

Joe Choynski was an ironworker. He is travelling for a felt house.

Frank Craig, the "Harlem Coffee Cooler," "slung hash" in a restaurant. He has a roadhouse in England.

Sandy Ferguson was a fisherman. He's still looking for suckers.

Jimmy Britt was a plumber. Now lives on rents from flat-houses bought with his ring earnings.

Young Peter Jackson was a window cleaner. Still fighting.

Joe Gans was employed in a fish market in Baltimore. Fighting too.

Kid Sullivan worked in a billiard room in Washington.

Kid Lavigne was a cooper in Saginaw, Mich. He's giving boxing lessons and training dub fighters.

Joe Walcott worked in a billiard parlor. Out of work.

Jack and Mike Twin Sullivan drove teams. They are both still fighting.

Jack Munroe was a miner and a professional football player. He is fighting now and then in small towns.

George Gardner was a shoemaker; Jimmy a bookbinder; Bill a shoemaker, and Paddy held a government job. George is following the races, with an occasional fight.

Jack Blackburn and Joe Grim were bootblacks. They are both scrapping along on meagre ring earnings.

Jack Root was a gang foreman. He's teaching boxing in Chicago.

Jack McAuliffe and Jack Demsey were coopers in the same shop in Brooklyn. Dempsey is dead. McAuliffe follows the races.

Ex-Champion George Dixon worker in a photographer's shop in Boston. He's living on what he can pick up.

Terry McGovern piled lumber. He fights occasionally and has a little money left from his ring fortune. Most of it went on the races.

Spike and Dave Sullivan were teamsters. When through with the ring Spike became a whiskey drummer. Dave is loafing.

Young Corbett was clerk in a Denver store. Still in the ring.

Eddie Hanlon started fighting and is still at it.

Jimmy Handler worked in a brewery in Newark. He still boxes.

Mysterious Billy Smith was a teamster. He keeps a sailor's boarding house in Portland, Ore.

YOUR HAT

May Be a Stylish One, But It Makes Trouble.

A man usually buys a hat that's "in style," but the modern hat for men has lots to answer for.

Baldheads are growing more numerous every day. Hats make excellent breeding places for the parasitic germs which sap the life from the roots of the hair.

When your hair begins to fall out and your scalp is full of Dandruff it is a sure sign that these countless germs are busily at work.

There is but one way to overcome the trouble and kill the germs—that way is to apply Newbro's Herpicide to the scalp—it will kill the germs and healthy hair is sure to result.

BOGUS LORD DOUGLASS' BRIDE LOST SINCE DECEMBER

Fund to Prosecute Search for Girl Who May Be Dead.

New Iberia, La., June 22.—A fund is being raised here and in Asheville, N. C., to prosecute the search for Miss Josephine Hood of this place, who was married to John C. Cavendish last December. The Secretary of State has already, in compliance with numerous requests, communicated with the Mexican government regarding the case. The last time the bride and bridegroom were seen they were boarding a Southern Pacific train for New Orleans.

After months of anxiety the parents learned that their son-in-law is the bogus "Lord Douglass," a man of many aliases and more wives. He has been in jail in half a dozen cities. The father, mother and brother of the girl have positively identified as that of Cavendish a photograph of "Lord Douglass" taken when he was in jail at Forth Worth, Texas.

Miss Hood, if she is still living, will be 20 years old in September. She returned home last November from a visit to her relatives in Asheville, N. C., and it was then that she met Cavendish. He had come to New Ibera two years before. Periodically he made trips to Mexico, ostensibly to look after a fruit farm. The man told Miss Hood and her mother that there was only one cousin between him and an English title. The father was against the match.

When he left New Iberia with his bride Cavendish said they were going to Mexico.

"You probably won't hear from us for about six weeks," he told Mrs. Hood.

Cavendish has three known aliases. "Lord Douglass" was his favorite and the others were "Duncan" and "Rhodes." The photograph taken by the Chief of Police in Fort Worth is labeled with all four names. The description given by the Fort Worth police is: "Forty years, 140 pounds, blond complexion, iron gray hair, blue-gray eyes, 5 feet 6 inches high, wart over left eye, tooth out on left upper side."

A previous victim of "Lord Douglass" was a Miss Anderson of Fort Worth, Texas. He took her to Monterey, Mexico, and a few days later robbed her of $700 and tried to kill her with a padlock. A Miss Hobbs, of Virginia, was another woman who married "Lord Douglass." He deserted her. Other marriages took place in East St. Louis, South Bend, Denver, and Hot Springs. "Lord Douglass" always went to Mexico for his honeymoon.

SKELETON FOUND IN HIDDEN CAVE.

Millville, N. J., June 22.—When three boys, George Gilbert, Alfred Kline and Wilmer Charlesworth, were roaming yesterday in a lonely spot near Bald Head Hill, just west of this city, they discovered a small cave, which was almost entirely hidden from sight by bushes and stones.

Entering the savern they found an old musket barrel, a portion of the stock and the skelton of a man. Near the bones were several coins. One, a half-dollar, bore the date of 1874. All the others were of earlier date.

The residents of this city were unaware that the cave existed until it was discovered by the three lads. There are several theories as to how the skeleton and the gun happened to be in the cave.

The most plausible one is that advanced by some of the older residents, who tell of an old negro named Wright who disappeared mysteriously nearly thirty years ago from his home near the foot of the hill. A search was made for him, but nothing ever was learned concerning his whereabouts.

The skeleton is that of a man of large proportions, as was the negro.

BISHOP CHANGES PROGRAMME.

Thinks Religious Meeting Preferable to Picture Show to Start Season.

Ocean Grove, June 22.—Bishop James N. FitzGerald, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, believes in keeping the religious services to the front in this famous Methodist resort. In making up the programme of religious and secular entertainments for the summer a moving picture show was scheduled as the opening attraction for Saturday evening. The bishop, in revising the programme, changed the date of the picture entertainment to next Monday evening, that next Sunday's services in the Auditorium might be the opening attraction of the season.

The sermons next Sunday will be preached by Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of Chattanooga, who is also a member of the Camp Meeting Association. All the "side" meetings will begin on that date. These include the young people's, holiness and surf meetings and the summer Sunday-school. The association has not been able to find a competent leader for the young people's meeting, for more than a quarter of a century in charge of the Rev. Charles H. Yatman. They have several well known ministers in view, but a selection will not be made for some time.

In Dr. Bryant's Place.

Rev. Charles Bloom, of Jersey City, has been elected to the place of the late Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryant on the Board of Trustees of the Mt. Tabor Camp Meeting Association.

3 GOVERNORS TO AID UNVEIL BATTLE SHAFT

SHAM FIGHT TAKES PLACE ON HISTORIC FIELD TO INSPIRING MUSIC.

Red Bank, June 22.—The dedication of the stately shaft today at National Park to memoralize the band of 400 heroes who followed Lieutenant Christopher Green and put to flight the 2,000 Hessians under Count Donop, which action renewed hope in General Washington in one of the darkest hours of the struggle for independence, is honored by the presence of three Governors, with their staffs and official parties.

Governor Edward C. Stokes, of New Jersey; Governor George H. Uter, of Rhode Island, and Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, were are participating, besides a detachment of United States marines from League Island and First City Troop Cavalry, of New Jersey, and Third Regiment, National Guard of New Jersey, under command of Colonel John A. Mathers, Jr., and battery of field artillery, Third Regiment, with all the dash and accourtrements of war, will make the scene one to inspire one of the greatest throngs of people that has ever witnessed similar ceremonies in the State.

Governors Utter, of Rhode Island; Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, and Stokes, of this State, were taken down from Philadelphia on a special boat from South street to Gloucester, and driven to Woodbury and accompanied the parade to the park, which formed at 10 o'clock sharp. The chief marshal of the parade was Briegadier General Quincey O'Malley Gilmore, who will have as his aid Lewis Starr, Prosecutor of Gloucester county.

The parade proceeded north to Hessian avenue, and thence westward on a straight line to the Boulevard National Park, where the Wm. B. Hatch Grand Army Post, of Camden, will be met and will act as an escort as far as the old battlefield.

Upon the arrival at the battlefield a salute was fired from the naval squadron in the river, and the troops and guardsmen was at once prepared to engage in the sham battle, which was scheduled for 11:30, and took place on the battlefield where the famous battle was fought.

The dedication exercises commenced at 2 o'clock, and lasted for fully two hours. Addresses were made by Governor Utter, of Rhode Island; Governor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, and Governor Stokes, of New Jersey, from a grandstand which was erected on the field. Following the speeches the monument was presented by Governor Stokes, unveiled by Miss Virginia Andrews, of Woodbury, and accepted by David O. Watkins for Gloucester county.

This evening there will be a display of fireworks at Washington Park, in which prominent figures of the famous battle will be shown.

Less than three years ago Red Bank battlefield was an abandoned military reservation. The Gloucester County Historical Society, then in its infancy, discussed plans for the better care of the historic field, which resulted in a bill being passed in the State Legislature appropriating $15,000 for the rearing of this shaft.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

"Now it's my hand. Perhaps there was a little of both those feelings you accuse me of—perhaps I did want to triumph over both you and Shepler—and the other people who said you'd never marry for anything but money—but do you think I'd have had either one of those desires if I hadn't loved you? Do you think I'd have cared how many Sheplers you married if I hadn't loved you so, night and day—always turning to you in spite of everything—loving you always, under everything—always, I tell you."

"Under what—what 'everything?'"

"When I was sure you had no heart—that you couldn't care for any man except a rich man—that you would marry only for money."

"You thought that?"

"Of course I thought it."

"What has changed you?"

"Nothing. I'm going to change it now by proving differently. I shall take you against your will—but I shall make you love me—in the end. I know you—you're a woman, in spite of yourself."

"You were entirely right about me. I would even have married you because of the money—"

"Tell me what it is you're holding back—don't wait."

"Let me think—don't talk, please!"

She sat a long time silent, motionless, her eyes fixed ahead. At length she stirred herself to speak.

"You were right about me, partly—and partly wrong. I don't think I can make you understand. I've always wanted so much from life—so much more than it seemed possible to have. The only thing for a girl in my position and circumstances was to make what is called a good marriage. I wanted what that would bring, too. I was torn between the desires—or rather the natural instincts and the trained desires. I had ideals about loving and being loved, and I had the material ideals of my experience in this world out here.

"I was untrue to each by turns. Here—I want to show you something."

She took up a book with closely written pages.

"I came here to-night—I won't conceal from you that I thought of you when I came. It was my last time here, and you had gone, I supposed. Among other things I had out this old diary to burn, and I had found this, written on my eighteenth birthday, when I came out—the fond, romantic secret ideal of a foolish girl—listen:

"'The Soul of Love wed the Soul of Truth and their daughter, Joy, was born; who was immortal and in whom they lived forever!'

"You see—that was the sort of moonshine I started in to live. Two or three times I was a grievous disappointment to my people, and once or twice, perhaps, I was disappointed myself. I was never quite sure what I wanted. But if you think I was consistently mercenary you are mistaken.

"I shall tell you something more—something no one knows. There was a man I met while that ideal was still strong and beautiful to me—but after I'd come to see that here, in this life, it was not easily to be kept. He was older than I, experienced with women—a lover of women, I came to understand in time. I was a novelty to him, a fresh recreation—he enjoyed all those romantic ideals of mine. I thought then he loved me, and I worshiped him. He was married, but constantly said he was about to leave his wife, so she would divorce him. I promised to come to him when it was done. He had married for money and he would have been poor again. I didn't mind in the least. I tell you this to show you that I could have loved a poor man, not only well enough to marry him, but to break with the traditions, and brave the scandal of going to him in that common way. With all I felt for him I should have been more than satisfied. But I came in time to see that he was not as earnest as I had been. He wasn't capable of feeling what I felt. He was more cowardly than I—or rather, I was more reckless than he. I suspected it a long time; I became convinced of it a year ago and a little over. He became hateful to me. I had wasted my love. Then he became funny. But—you see—I am not altogether what you believed me. Wait a bit longer, please.

"Then I gave up, almost—and later, I gave up entirely. And when my brother was about to marry that woman, and Mr. Shepler asked me to marry him, I consented. It seemed an easy way to end it all. I'd quit fondling ideals. And you had told me I must do anything I could to keep Fred from marrying that woman—my people came to say the same thing—and so—"

"If he had married her—if they were married now—then you would feel free to marry me?"

"You would still be the absurdest man in New York—but we can't discuss that. He isn't going to marry her."

"But he has married her—"

"What do you mean?"

"I supposed you knew—Oldaker told me as I left the hotel. He and your father were witnesses. The marriage took place this afternoon at the Arlingham."

"You're not deceiving me?"

"Come, come!—girl!"

"Oh, pardon me! please! Of course I didn't mean it—but you stunned me. And papa said nothing to me about it before he left. The money must have been too great a temptation to him and to Fred. She has just made some enormous amount in copper stock or something."

"I know, she had better advice than I had. I'd like to reward the man who gave it to her."

"And I was sure you were going to marry that other woman."

"How could you think so?"

"Of course I'm not the least bit jealous—it isn't my disposition; but I did think Florence Akemit wasn't the woman to make you happy—of course I liked her immensely—and there were reports going about—everybody seemed so sure—and you were with her so much. Oh, how I did hate her!"

"I tell you she is a joke and always was."

"It's funny—that's exactly what I told Aunt Cornelia about that—that man."

"Let's stop joking, then."

"How absurd you are—with my plans all made and the day set—"

There was a knock at the door. He went over and unlocked it. Jarvis was there.

"Mr. Shepler, Miss Avice."

They looked at each other.

"Jarvis, shut that door and wait outside."

"Yes, Mr. Bines."

"You can't see him."

"But I must—we're engaged, don't you understand?—of course I must!"

"I tell you I won't let you. Can't you understand that I'm not talking idly?"

She tried to evade him and reach the door, but she was caught again in his arms—held close to him.

"If you like he shall come in now. But he's not going to take you away from me, as he did in that jeweler's the other night—and you can't see him at all except as you are now."

She struggled to be free.

"Oh, you're so brutal!"

"I haven't begun yet—"

He drew her toward the door.

"Oh, not that—don't open it—I'll tell him—yes, I will!"

"I'm taking no more chances, and the time is short."

Still holding her closely with one arm, he opened the door. The man stared impassively above their heads—a graven image of unconsciousness.

"Jarvis."

"Yes, sir."

"Miss Milbrey wishes you to say to Mr. Shepler that she is engaged—"

"That I'm ill," she interrupted, still making little struggles to twist from his grasp, her head still bent down.

"That she is engaged with Mr. Bines, Jarvis, and can't see him. Say it that way—'Miss Milbrey is engaged with Mr. Bines, and can't see you.'"

"Yes, sir!"

He remained standing motionless, as he had been, his eyes fixed above them. But the eyes of Jarvis, from long training, did not require to be bent upon those things they needed to observe. They saw something now that was at least two feet below their range.

"I WON'T LET YOU."

The girl made a little move with her right arm, which was imprisoned fast between them, and which some intuition led her captor not to restrain. The firm little hand worked its way slowly up, went creepingly over his shoulder and bent tightly about his neck.

"Yes, sir," repeated Jarvis, without the quiver of an eyelid, and went.

He closed the door with his free hand, and they stood as they were until they heard the noise of the front door closing and the soft retreating footsteps of the butler.

"Oh, you were mean—mean—to shame me so," and floods of tears came again.

"I hated to do it, but I had to; it was a critical moment. And you couldn't have made up your mind without it."

She sobbed results in his arms, but her own arm was still tight about his neck. He felt it for the first time.

"But I had made up my mind—I did make it up while we talked."

They were back on the couch. He held her close and she no longer resisted, but nestled in his arms with quick little sighs, as if relieved from a great strain. He kissed her forehead and hair as she dried her eyes.

"Now, rest a little. Then we shall go."

"I've so much to tell you. That day at the jeweler's—well, what could I do but take one poor last little look of you—to keep?"

"Tell me if you care for me."

"Oh, I do, I do, I do care for you. I have—ever since that day we walked in the woods. I do, I do!"

She threw her head back and gave him her lips.

She was crying again and trying to talk.

"I did care for you, and that day I thought you were going to say something, but you didn't—you were so distant and troubled, and seemed not even to like me—though I felt sure you loved me. I had thought you were going to tell me, and I'd have accepted—yes, for the money—though I liked you so much. Why, when I first met you in that mine and thought you were a workman, I'm not sure I wouldn't have married you if you had asked me. But it was different again when I found out about you. And that day in the woods I thought something had come between us. Only after dinner you seemed kinder, and I knew at once you thought better of me, and might even seek me—I knew it in the way a woman knows things she doesn't know at all. I went into the library with a candle to look into the mirror, almost sure you were going to come. Then I heard your steps and I was so glad—but it wasn't you—I'd been mistaken again—you still disliked me. I was so disappointed and hurt and heart-sick, and he kissed me and soothed me. And after that directly I saw through him, and I knew I truly did love you just as I wanted to love the man who would be my husband—only all that nonsense about money that had been dinned into me so long kept me from seeing it at first. But I was sure you didn't care for me when they talked so about you, and that—you never did care for her, did you—you couldn't have cared for her, could you?—and yet, after that night, I'd such a queer little feeling as if you had come for me, and had seen—"

"Surely a gentleman never sees anything he wasn't meant to see."

"I'm so glad—I should have been so ashamed—"

They were still a moment, while he stroked her hair.

"They'll be turning in early to-night, having to get up to-morrow and preach sermons—what a dreary place Heaven must be compared with this!"

She sat up quickly.

"Oh, I'd forgotten. How awful it is. Isn't it awful?"

"It will soon be over."

"But think of my people, and what's expected of me—think of Mr. Shepler."

"Shepler's doing some hard thinking for himself by this time."

"Really, you're a dreadful person—"

There was a knock.

"The cabman outside, sir, says how long is he to wait, sir?"

"Tell him to wait all night if I don't come; tell him if he moves off that spot I'll have his license taken away. Tell him I'm the mayor's brother."

"Yes, sir."

"And, Jarvis, who's in the house besides you?"

"Miss Briggs, the maid, sir—but she's just ready to go out, sir."

"Stop her—say Miss Milbrey wishes to ask a favor of her; and Jarvis."

"Yes, sir!"

"Go put on that neat black street coat of yours that fits you so beautifully in the back, and a purple cravat, and your shiny hat, and wait for us with Briggs. We shall want you in a moment."

"Yes, Mr. Bines."

She looked at him wonderingly.

"We need two witnesses, you know. I learned that from Oldaker just now."

"But do give me a moment, everything is all so whirling and hazy."

"Yes, I know—like the solar system in its nebulous state. Well, hurry and make those worlds take shape. I can give you 60 seconds to find that I'm the north star. Ach! I have the Doctor von Herzlich been ge-speaking with—come, come! What's the use of any more delay? I've wasted nearly three hours here now, dilly-dallying along. But then, a woman never does know her own mind. Put a thing before her—all as plain as the multiplication table—and she must use up just so much good time telling a man that he's crazy—and shedding tears because he won't admit that two times two are 37." She was silent and motionless for another five minutes, thinking intently. "Come, time's up."

She arose.

"I'm ready. I shall marry you, if you think I'm the woman to help you in that big, new life of yours. They meant me not to know about Fred's marriage until afterward."

He kissed her.

"I feel so rested and quiet now, as if I'd taken down a big old gate and let the peace rush in on me. I'm sure it's right. I'm sure I can help you."

She picked up her hat and gloves.

"Now I'll go bathe my eyes and fix my hair."

"I can't let you out of my sight, yet. I'm incredulous. Perhaps in 75 or 80 years—"

"I thought you were so sure."

"While I can reach you, yes."

She gave a low, delicious little laugh. She reached both arms up around him, pulled down his head and kissed him.

LITERARY.

Scribner's Magazine for July, in the series on The Railways of the Future, describes a great Canadian Railway project. The Grand Trunk Pacific is an all-Canadian line, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and far north of existing railways. It will penetrate new territory in Athabasca and Northern British Columbia. Experts say that it will open up the greatest wheat-growing region in North America. Hugh D. Lumsden, chief engineer of the government section, describes the work so far done on this part of the road, and outlines the engineering problems of the remainder. Cy Warman gives a graphic account of the varied regions through which the road will pass, and the tremendous resources which it will make available. The whole project is as romantic and far-reaching as any railroad scheme since the United States backed the Union Pacific. Another article of great practical importance is Frederic C. Howe's account of the workings of municipal ownership in "Glasgow." Much has been written about this city, but never before has such a complete popular exposition by an expert been made. The marvels of management which the people of Glasgow have achieved—a price for gas that makes our 80 cents seem extravagant,, and street-car fares far below the standard of Tom Johnson—are expounded by Mr. Howe, a well-known lawyer of Cleveland, whose book on "The City" has become an authority.

Warm weather creates a desire for easily digested food—bith physical and mental. The July number of Lippincott's Magazine responds generously to this demand by making entertainment the key-note of its contents. Jane Belfield contributes a complete novelette, "The Heart of Paprika." This, as its names implies, is both sweet and spicy and holds the reader's interest in spite of the thermometer. Its author wanted her story to be a tragedy, but her hero took the matter into his own hands and married the right girl. "By Way of the Attic," by Walt Makee, is a humorous tale of a prospective bride in a real estate deal. "Con Appassionata" is one of Joseph Blethen's most characteristic inventions about a prima donna, and a husband whose jealousy rebels against his wife's fame. Inez Haynes Gillmore presents a human picture in "The Brothers," in which, incidentally, the sisters also play an important part. Her contrasts are remarkably well drawn. "The Letters of a Scoffer," by Melville F. Ferguson, is all amusing story which contains an appeal to every lover of cereals. Sarah Comstock's name is making its way steadily into notice. Her story "Faddists of the Road" will bear comparison with any of its kind in originality of plot and keenness of humor. "The Algerian Swordsman," by Fred Gilbert Blakeslee, is the realistic story of a duel with swords. Mr. Blakeslee is the author of "Sword Play for Actors."

NOW PLANNING FOR THE W. J. BRYAN HOME-COMING.

Welcome at Lincoln Won't Interfere With New York's Greeting.

St. Louis, Mo., June 22.—The official home-coming reception for William Jennings Bryan, who is to reach New York August 29, on his return from a tour of the world, will be held in Lincoln, Neb., his home town. This announcement is made today by F. W. Brown, Mayor of Lincoln, and a close friend of Mr. Bryan, who is in St. Louis on personal business, accompanied by E. C. Stroke, City Attorney of Lincoln.

Mayor Brown called on Col. Moses C. Wetmore, who is probably Mr. Bryan's warmest friend in Missouri, and Col. Wetmore gave his commendation to the Lincoln reception plan, saying he expected to attend. Col. Wetmore will leave New York July 4 for London, where he is to meet Mr. Bryan and accompany him home.

The Lincoln reception will not interfere in any way with the occasion being arranged in Mr. Bryan's honor in New Yor,k but it will be the official home-coming. Mr. Brown said:

"Lincoln is the logical place for the official event in Mr. Bryan's honor. I have heard of the proposed demonstration in New York and we are all very proud of the consideration to be shown Mr. Bryan in various sections, but the homecoming proper and the reception will be held in Lincoln."

Storks Brought Little Birds.

It was an opinion held by many in ancient times that small birds in migrating were often carried on the backs of the larger. In Egypt, for example, it was held that wagtails were thus carried by storks. And many years ago a Swedish naturalist, Hedenborg, made some remarkable observations on the subject. During the arrival of the flights of storks at Rhodes from oversea, Hedenborg frequently heard the voices of singing birds without being able to see them. At last, after careful observation, when a flight of storks had just alighted, he saw that they had small birds perched upon their backs. The writer of a recent book, "Recreations of a aturalist," J. E. Harting, has some interesting remarks on this subject. Most ornithologists probably regard the idea as a myth, but Mr. Harting's remarks seem to admit a possibility that there may be some truth in it.—London Globe.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!

"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT WOMEN.

The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who has just passed her 92d birthday, has enjoyed the remarkable experience of seeing her husband returned to Parliament for Westminster on the centenary of her father's first election for that constituency.

Miss Helen Dorothy Clark, of Longwood, a freshman at Vassar, won the running high jump in the annual spring track meet at that college. Although she is a very heavy girl, Miss Clark's performance was so excellent that she tied the college record for the event.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie had the honor the other day of laying the cornerstone of the United Engineers' building in New York city, for the construction of which Mr. Carnegie gave $1,500,000. The building is to be the home of the three national engineering societies.

During the recent session of the New York Legislature a bill was introduced in the Assembly to give to the wife the same share in the personal property of the husband dying without a will that the husband now has in the personal property of the wife under similar conditions of intestacy. This sensible and just measure was approved by the committee on codes, but when it was called up in the Assembly an extraordinary scene was enacted. Mrs. Lillie Devereaux Blake, chairman of the legislative committee of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, who had the bill in charge, says that 'no less than seventy men sprang to their feet and declared with one voice, it would appear that this bill must not pass, because if it should become a law the women would have no more babies!"

Roman Way.

The use of concrete masonry probably begins with the Romans, who employed it in road building and foundation work. Coming down from the time of the Romans, the ancient city of Ciudad Rodrigo has walls existing at the present day in which are buried large bowlders of stone. These walls are in a good state of preservation at the present time; in fact, so much so that they still bear the prints of the boards which made up the forms which held the concrete in its semi-liquid state at teh time it was put in. It is an interesting matter to note that the modern practice of putting large masses of stone in concrete masonry follows exactly the scheme used in building these ancient walls of Ciudad Rodrigo. This method not only reduces the cost of the resulting fabric, but also makes it stronger.—Scientific American.

CONVICT JOINT KEEPERS

Parretti and Brown, the First Two Arraigned are Found Guilty.

CASE EMBARRASES COP

Patrolman Myers Alleged to Have Purchased Stuff in Brown's Place for Two Years and Didn't Report.

Two of the five alleged speakeasy operators were convicted before Judge Atwater in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday. They are James Brown, Sr., whose place is at 1201 North avenue, and Dominick Paretti, 317 St. Mary's avenue.

Seven witnesses appeared against each of the prisoners. The defense contended, in each case, that the prisoner had merely delivered goods to order, and claimed the right to do that under government license. The court ruled that there was no such right.

The witnesses swore to the purchase of liquor on a cash basis. The witnesses against Brown were William Kates, George Conkling, Ira Mullner, James Benson, James Staats, Theodore Voorhees and Patrolman Nicholas Myers. Those who testified against Paretti were Edward Apgar, Anton Stebo, Peter Shubert, George Simon, James Caulfield, David Sisk and Daniel Terry.

The convicted men were remanded for sentence. The rest of the five will be arraigned on Tuesday.

Prosecutor English has worked hard in preparing the cases for trial, and Chief Kiely has had his men hustling for evidence. Both officials deserve a graet deal of credit for enmeshing the offenders, who are old hands at the game and know all the tricks.

Embarrassment for one of the bluecoats has arisen from the campaign. Chief Kiely announced this morning that one of the first things he discovered about Brown's place was that Patrolman Nick Myers had been buying liquor there for nearly two years. Myers, the Chief says, never told him anything was wrong with the place. The Chief wasn't sure whether Myers had gotten stuff while on duty or not, but he intends to seek a formal explanation of his alleged failure to report the place from the officer. The matter will be brought before the Police Committee at its next meeting.

MISS GRACE CARROL ASSISTS BY RENDERING CONTRALTO SOLOS.

The fourth musicale by the pupils of Miss Vincent Whitney attracted a large and appreciative audience of music-lovers to the Park Club, last night. The pupils were assisted by Miss Grace J. Carroll, contralto. The programme was a choice one and the rendition of the several numbers won hearty applause and commendation from all. Their work gave evidence of the careful and painstaking instruction by Miss Whitney and she, too, came in for a large share of approbation and was complimented for the excellent results.

The contralto solos by Miss Carroll were of the usual high standard of excellence and were much enjoyed. In part first she sang "Restless River," by E. German, and in part second her numbers were "Hark, Hark, the Lark," Schubert, and "Irish Folk Song," Foote.

GOFF'S HOTEL IS SOLD

George Seeber Exchanges It For Mc Vey's Hotel and Annex and Private House.

DEAL SIGNIFICANT

Seeber's West Front Street Property Figured in Recent Political Fights and Conviction of Goff.

A large realty deal which is considered by many to be significant, was effected yesterday, whereby George Seeber, of the Rising Sun Brewery Company, of Elizabeth, exchanged his property on West Front street, formerly occupied by John Goff, with John H. McVey for his annex property on North avenue, opCompany, and a residential property at 1020 East Front street, now occupied by Theodore French. Possession of property will be taken about July 1.

Mr. McVey, who conducted a restaurant on North avenue for several years, intends to open a restaurant and boarding-house in his new property on West Front street. It is said that Mr. McVey has no intention of selling liquor or applying to the Common Council for a license, but that it will be strictly a temperance house.

It is not known what Mr. Seeber intends doing with the North avenue property, but there is a rumor tnat he intends to apply next year for a liquor license and that he or his representative will run the place as a hotel. The building is four stories in height and is well-adapted for hotel business. John Madden now conducts a pool and billiard parlor on the ground floor. There will probably be no changes just now in the tenantcy of the building. The articles of agreement have been signed by the interested parties and title will be passed as soon as the search is completed.

The Kest Front street property which Mr. Seeber exchanges, has always been a source of trouble to him. He built it with the intention of securing a license and running it as a hotel. This he proposed to do tarough John Goff. The story of Mr. Goff's experience with the property is well known. He was caught selling liquor without a license, tried, convicted and fined. This year Mr. Goff tried again to secure a license, but the application was refused. It was then that Mr. Goff decided to give up the place. It is understood that ever since Mr. Seeber has been trying to dispose of the property. It was claimed that it originally cost him $18,000. The consideration in the present deal is not known.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION RAISING TROLLEY FUND

MISS ELIZABETH TIFFANY MRKES APPEAL TO LIBERAL PEOPLE.

Plainfield people are asked to contribute to the Relief Association's worthy work as explained in the following communication:

Editor The Daily Press:

May I ask the favor through your columns of soliciting contributions to the Trolley Fund under the supervision of the Relief Association. For several years this fund has provided refreshment and pleasure to many who during the summer's heat have had little opportunity for change and recreation. In the distribution of tickets for these trolley rides a wise discrimination is exercised so that they may be used when most needed. Contributions may be sent to the treasurer of the Relief Association, Miss Lillie E. Moore, 717 Watchung avenue.

Elizabeth Tiffany.

Plainfield, June 22nd.

WATER CO. BUYS BUILDING

Purchases From John F. McIntyre Three-Story Brick Building on North Ave.

CONSIDERATION HELD

No. 171 to 175 North Avenue Included in the Title Transferred on Thursday.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has increased its property holdings in this city by the purchase of the valuable business property on North avenue, where its offices and those of Elston M. French are located. It was owned by John F. McIntyre. The building is three stories in height, and in addition to the offices contains several very desirable flats. It is a brick structure with all modern improvements.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company formerly had its offices in A. D. Thompson's building on North avenue, but desiring more room leased the present office of John F. McIntyre. The company has been located there several years and with the increase in property values here, especially in business property, decided to purchase the building and land occupied by it.

It is not expected that any changes will be made at present. Mr. French has a lease on his offices and all of the flats are rented. The purchase was made as a good investment and to prevent any future changes in the offices of the water company.

The title was passed on Thursday. The consideration is not known.

The programme included plantation melodies and recitations. They were well-rendered and much applauded. Mr. Ware spoke briefly on the work at the university.

After the programme, the Ladies' Aid Society sold ice cream, strawberries and cake. The serving was directed by a committee composed of Mrs. M. W. Clark, chairman; Mrs. C. H. Leland, Mrs. Kratsley, Mrs. Vogel, Mrs. Louis Martin and Mrs. Harry Corliss. The sale was a great success.

TAKING COLBY THUNDER

Somerset Regular Republican Organization Plans to Use Reform Platform.

ASSEMBLY CANDIDATES

Case May Be Named by Organization—I. P. Runyon Also Mentioned for Office.

Republican organization leaders in Somerset county, it is said, have arranged to corrol all the Colby thunder. It is their plan, according to well-founded reports, to espouse every object of the Colby leagues, and blazon them in their banners.

Col. Frelinghuysen and former Senator Charles A. Reed, who control the party between them in Somerset, are said to have reached an agreement on the subject. Their plan is to endorse everything the Colbyites are battling for, and to put the Colby ideas in the platform of the county convention.

Senator Reed has said several times lately that Colby is behind the times in Somerset with his views; that Somerset county Republicans adopted his views years ago and has put them into effect. These are the objects the Somerset Republicans will have to put in their platform if they want to meet the Colbyite specications.

"1. To promote the best interests of the Republican party in the county of Somerset."

"2. To eliminate bossism and corporate control of the Republican party."

"3. To further the cause of equal taxation, limited franchies, taxation of franchises, popular selection of United States Senators, popular interest in primary elections, and such other progressive measures as may be necessary in the interests of the people."

"4. To promote honest elections and prevent political corruption in every form."

Clarence Case, of Somerville, is said to be the man Reed and Frelinghuyser would like to run for the assembly on that platform. He is law partner of A. A. Clark, Democratic leader of the county, who is the father-in-law of Mr. Reed. I. P. Runyon is mentioned by his friends as the straightout Colby candidate.

GETTING READY TO ENFORCE BISHOPS' BILL

ALL THE SIDEROOMS MUST GO BY JULY 4.

The saloon keepers and hotel men are preparing to pull down partitions and things to comply with the Bishops' liquor law, which goes into effect on July 4. The police are preparing to see that they do it on time.

The new law requires the removal of all side and rear rooms, and the noise of falling partitions will be heard in the land of Booze in the next week. All screens must be removed on Sunday and after closing hour. This section of the law makes no appreciable change here. An ordinance compelling the saloon keepers to leave an "unobstructed" view from the street is now in force.

"We will see that the provisions of the law are enforced," said Chief Kiely this morning, "and they will be enforced strictly, the minute the law goes into effect."

Electric Facial Massage.

William B. Randolph, the hustling up-to-date barber, of 206 Watchung avenue, always wishing to please his customers, has installed an electric machine in his shop to give facial massages. Those who have had this treatment know of its advantages and as Mr. Randolph is the first one to install such a machine here, liberal patronage will no doubt be accorded him.

Rev. Dr. Parsons Will Exchange.

Rev. Dr. Charles Wesley Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, will exchange pulpits tomorrow morning with Rev. E. N. Crasto, of the Methodist church, Somerville. In the evening Dr. Parsons will occupy his own pulpit and preach one of a series of sermons on "Men With a Mission," the topic being "Columbus the Man of Faith."

Rev. Dr. Cook Will Speak.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, will be assisted at the services tomorrow morning by Rev. Dr. C. A. Cook, national secretary for the Christian Stewardship Committee. Dr. Cook will make an address along the line of his work, not with a view to collecting money, but to stimulate and encourage Christian life.

WOMAN APPLIED FOR STATION HOUSE LODGING

BUT SHE WOULDN'T CONSENT TO BE TECHNICALLY ARRESTED.

A middle-aged woman who gave her name as Mrs. Mary Allen, and claimed Reading, Pa., as her home, applied for a lodging at police headquarters at 10:30 o'clock last night. She said she was travelling from New York to Reading as cheaply as possible, and while not out of money, she had to figure closely and didn't think she could afford to pay hotel or boarding-house rates.

The sergeant explained that the only way he could give her a lodging was to place her under arrest, but she shrank from that even when he explained that the action would be merely a formality. She was not an ill-kept appearing woman and seemed to be what she claimed. She snowed the sergeant $1.15 tied up in a handkerchief, and said that was all she had to keep her on the way. She thanked the sergeant and went out to get a trolley westward.

The officers were puzzled to decide the woman's class. They tried to believe her story, but they were afraid she was trying to work a new and very slick con game. There is a suspicion in their minds that she would not have refused a contribution from large-hearted officers moved to compassion by the plight of a "respectable widow woman."

P. H. S. GRADUATES LOOK TO THE FUTURE

SOME WILL ENTER COLLEGE AND OTHERS GO INTO BUSINESS.

Now that the Class '06 of the Plainfield High School has been graduated, the young men and women will turn their attention to their future. Some of the pupils will continue their studies in other institutions of learning, while others will take a post graduate course and the remainder will either remain at home or go to business.

Saved Old Man's Life.

Leo Scheuer, head of the Scheuer groceries, who has a number of friends in this city, saved the life of an old man Thursday morning at the Erie station in Paterson. The old man, in driving across the tracks, became frightened at the approach of a train and pulled his horse up helplessly, directly on its path. He seemed spell-bound and would have been struck had not Mr. Scheuer, who saw his danger, leaped forward and hit the horse over the flank with his umbrella, sending it forward on a run, barely in time to escape the locomotive. The act required considerable nerve, and Mr. Scheuer is receiving the congratulations of his friends.

FOR SEWER COMMISSION

Mayor Smalley Empowered to Name a Body to Recommend Best Plan.

AT PUBLIC HEARING

Lengthy Debate During Which Consolidation Figures Conspicuously—Two Schemes In View.

The meeting of North Plainfield citizens in the Common Council chambers, last night, called for the purpose of discussing whether the municipality should build a sewer system with an independent outlet or connect with Plainfield's disposal works, narrowed down to the proposition that the matter should be placed in the hands of a commission to work out the most feasible plan. The suggestion that such a course be adopted was made by William J. Buttfield and he also named Charles W. McCutchen, John F. Wilson, Charles L. Nichols, E. S. Hooley and H. A. McGee as representative citizens who might be willing to serve. A resolution in regard to having the commission was carried by a large majority and it will be appointed by Mayor Smalley at an early date. The names of W. L. Saunders, Joseph O. Osgood and Andrew E. Kenney were also mentioned as being eligible for the personnel.

The gathering was called to order at 8 o'clock by Mayor Smalley and though the number present was much smaller than was expected the men who took part in the discussion were the borough's most prominent residents. Among those who presented their views were former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Henry A. McGee, W. J. Buttfield, George T. Rogers, Andrew E. Kenney, Edward S. Hooley, J. O. Osgood, Captain W. C. Smith, former Councilman James K. Arnold, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, J. W. A. Bauersachs, former Recorder Thomas Doud, W. J. Conroy, W. F. Williams, President L. B. Woolston, of the Plainfield Board of Trade, and Charles Debele. Engineer George Pearson, of New York, who prepared preliminary maps and specifications, was present to answer any questions of a technical nature that might be raised and also did all possible to make everything clear to those who wanted to know what progress had been made.

Several of the men who spoke, touched on "consolidation" in various ways and reference to this subject seemed to stir up a number of Washington Park residents. At one time while Mayor Smalley was expressing his views as to the advisability of a dependent or independent disposal plant he mentioned consolidation and instantly there was a protest from E. S. Hooley and H. A. McGee that "sewage was the subject under discussion, not consolidation."

"We object to hearing the two mentioned together," one of them exclaimed, "they are two separate questions." To this Mayor Smalley replied that it was possible to speak of one without referring to the other and that they would have to hear it.

"No we won't either," said Mr. Hooley; "we will not stay here if it goes on."

At the beginning of the meeting it was explained by Mayor Smalley and Borough Counsel Reed that the sole purpose in having the citizens gather was to learn whether they wanted an independent sewer or not, the kind to be built and the expense being matters to talk about later. Engineer Pearson followed them with a short talk on what plans and specifications had been made. After a few questions had been asked in regard to who was to vote on the subject, how different parts of the borough that were very low could be sewered and the probable cost of different systems, J. V. E. Vanderhoef arose and said:

"If North Plainfield is going to remain alone, we should have our own system; if consolidation is to come, we had ought to use Plainfield's beds."

George T. Rogers wanted to know just what it was that led to the meeting being called to discuss sewers and it was then further explained that the council was anxious to know the public mind.

Captain W. C. Smith declared the original call for sewers was due to trouble with sinks and cesspools, thus resulting in big plumbers' bills.

"I don't care where you run sewers," he exclaimed, "so long as we get them."

At this a voice from the rear broke in and said, "I do; I live in the district where they may go." Continuing Captain Smith said he favored connecting with Plainfield's system if suitable terms could be made, if not, then the installation of an independent plant.

Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman said: "I'm in favor of a sewer system. The borough is being held

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Bishop John J. O'Connor, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Newark, has received a dispensation from the Pope granting Catholics permission to eat meat on Friday, June 29, on the occasion of the Feast of Sts. Peter and Paul. Though no reason for this unusual dispensation has been given, it is believed that it is because this feast is observed with unusual pomp in Rome. Bishop O'Connor says the only other occasion which he recalls when meat was eaten on a Friday, except when Christmas fell on that day, was on the occasion of the jubilee of the establishment of the dogma of the immaculate conception, several years ago.

COL. STEVENS SAYS HE CANNOT BE CANDIDATE.

Gives Reasons for Declination to the Secretary of the Delaware Club.

The boom started Wednesday night for the Delaware Club in Jersey City for Col. Edwin A. Stevens for United States Senator has been cut short by the Colonel. In a letter yesterday to the club's secretary he said:

"Dear Sir: I want to thank you very warmly for your kindness in thinking of me in connection with the nomination for United States Senator. I thoroughly approve of the plan of informing the people who the Democratic candidate for this office will be.

"Whatever the prospects of Democratic success this fall may be, I am thoroughly convinced that the Democratic cause ought to be carefully presented to thte people by whoever is to be the nominee of the party for the Senatorship. This, unfortunately, I am unable to do. I expect to sail for Europe in about three weeks, and most of the work would have to be done during the time covered by my absence.

"I sincerely regret that I am unable to take any different position, but I am none the less thankful to you and to my other friends for thinking of me in so honorable a connection.

"The present days are dark and gloomy enough for the Democrats of New Jersey, but we all feel that the principles of the party remain as true and as necessary for the public weal as they were in the days of Jefferson and Jackson, and feeling thus, we cannot but look forward to the ultimate success of the party."

HILLERY-COLBY DEBATES.

Senators Will Meet in Morris County During September.

The Hillery-Colby debates will be held through Morris county during September. The first will be held in the opening week of that month. Senator Colby and Senator Hillery have talked over the preliminaries. Their meeting is said to have been most cordial.

The debates are the outcome of a remark made by Senator Colby in the course of a recent meeting in Morris county concerning that county's representatives in the Legislature. Senator Hillery construed the remark as a reflection upon his course as one of the State's lawmakers. He thereupon challenged Senator Colby to a debate upon the questions involved. The proposition met with a ready and cordial response.

The delay since then has been because of the death of Mr. Colby's oldest daughter and his subsequent absence from home with Mrs. Colby whose health was impaired.

HELD FOR OPENING LETTER.

Uncle of One of Accused Gives Reason for Alleged Act.

United States Commissioner Nelson, after a preliminary hearing at Paterson, held Edward Vreeland and William Lietch, of Butler, in $1,000 bail each to await the action of the United States Grand Jury sitting at Trenton. The young men are accused of having opened a letter addressed to Frederick Elmer Dawson, of Bloomingdale, uncle of young Vreeland.

At the hearing Dawson charged that the young men went to the post-office and secured the letter, which they took home and opened, afterward leaving it on a mantel until he returned from work.

He said there had been some trouble over real estate in the family and that the letter had been opened because it was supposed to refer to the property in dispute.

Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, of West Seventh street, are at Amherst, Mass.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

There can be no further doubt in the minds of the amusement loving public that Dreamland has within its beautiful gates the feature shows of "dear old Coney Island." The inception, evolution, realization, destruction, incineration and resurrection of San Francisco has made a terrific hit and though the doors of this gigantic spectacular production were only thrown open to the public on Saturday night last it has already been viewed by tens of thousands of delighted spectators. The production of San Francisco calls into requisition a cast of 350 persons, 100 horses, 50 dogs and 75 full-blooded Sioux Indians. The cost of the spectacle is close to $100,000. Too much cannot be said in favor of Roltairs dramatic illusion Pharoah's Daughter. This wonderful illusion tells a dramatic story in its most absorbing form; it deals with the people of Egypt 1,500 years before the coming of Christ. The Egptians were steeped in vice and plague descended upon the land; a high priest arises and proclaims deliverance provided a maiden who is pure shall sacrifice herself in the River Nile. A beautiful maiden from the North of the Land, Lota by name, comes forward and offers herself as a sacrifice; she is accepted and her form bound in chains of garlands and flowers; she is then cast into the waters of the onrushing Nile. The plague as once ceases and the river runs harmlessly and cooling through the land. As a mark of gratitude the populace erected in the Temple of Iscs a statue and named the milk white lily of the Nile the Lotus flower in honor of the maiden's name Lota. Hereupon the kings began to prosecute the Hebrews by forcing them to build the pyramids and as a further tyranny they issued the terrible command to their soldiery to destroy all the children of the Jews. It was at this time that Pharoah's daughter, the Princess Thermuthis, began to grieve for the afflicted mothers whose children had met such an inhuman death. One day, so the Bible tells us, Thermuthis as she went to bathe with the maidens in the Nile was astonished to hear strange sounds coming from the roof of the Temple where the statue of Lota stood. Pharoh's daughter stood in wonderment and prayer; suddenly she notices something strange about the marble face of the Lota statue. A spirit from heaven transformed the mass of marble into life and Lota spoke to Pharoah's daughter and showed her where the child Moses was hidden in the bullrushes. Moses was thereupon drawn out of the water and later led the children of Israel to the promised land. Creation, the End of the World, the Infant Incubattors, the Moqui Indian Village, the Midget City and the numerous other amusements continue to draw record smashing crowds. The vau?deville bill in the Palm Garden for the ensuing week consists of Black Carl's Dixie Graduates, the Albertys, Hayes and Wynee, Jerome and Morrison and the Lorra Trio.

Three changes in the programme at Wistaria Grove, the pretty summer playhouse on top of the New York theatre, on Monday night, served to do what visitors to the resort had said was impossible—to wit, strengthen the capital entertainment given there since June 5 by Messrs. William A. Brady and Jos. Hart, who have succeeded in showing even blase New York city something new in the way of hot-weather entertainment. "Seeing New York" was given in a new edition—or a new "exposure," to carry out the photographic figure of speech in this "musical snapshot," which has provided the Gothamites with more new tunes to whistle, songs to sing, and pretty girls to adore than any Broadway in years. Carrie De Mar added to her triumphs in the role of Dolly Day, the volatils little actress of the Society theatre, by putting on a new specialty of mimiory, in which, attired as a doll, she sang, imitated and danced her way into new favor. Clifton Crawford, Al Leech, Fleurette De Mar, Tom Fortune and Cheridah Simpson continued in their original roles. Then came Ned Wayburn's "Rain-Dears," an exquisite singing and dancing spectacle, in five pretty scenes, showing Dreamland, Toyland, Iceland and 'Way Down Yonder in the Cornfield. Neva Aymar and eight of the prettiest, most graceful girls ever assembled took part in this, which is a spectacle of Fairyland in miniature. It was the last number in the long, clever bill; but the big audience of Monday night remained until the very last drop of a very realistic rainstorm had made very wet the very pretty girl on whim it fell. It was a genuine triumph for Mr. Brady, Mr. Hart, Mr. Wayburn, and all concerned. Indeed, in the matter of success, this change of bill on the 18th quite eclipsed the wonderfully auspicious opening on the 5th.

CURED TO STAY CURED.

How a Plainfield Citizen Found Complete Freedom From Kidney Troubles.

If you suffer from backache—
From any disease of the kidneys,
Be cured to stay cured.
Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.
Plainfield people testify.
Here's one case of it:

Mrs. Anna Holmes, of New Market, N. J., three or four miles from Plainfield, N. J., says: "Some years ago I gave a statement for publication, telling what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me, and I am now glad to confirm what I said then. I used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills for sharp pains in my head and dull beating pains in my back and sides. When I attempted to rise quickly after sitting or lying for any length of time, sharp acute pains would always follow. My kidneys seemed to be weakened in every way, and I became in such a condition that work was impossible. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills curing others of kidney and bladder troubles so I procured a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store. They helped me from the first, and I continued to improve steadily. I am glad to repeat what I said in my former statement for my good opinion of this remedy has in no wise changed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Curing Consumption At Home.

How Even Advanced Cases of Lung Trouble May Be Cured To Stay Cured.

It is a mistaken idea that to successfully treat consumption and lung disease it is necessary to journey to the far west or south, and there fight the battle for life away from friends and loved ones, suffering the countless inconveniences of life in a strange land.

Science and thousands of recorded cases prove conclusively that nine of every ten cases of consumption can be cured at home.

Fresh air, sunshine, diet and special exercises are just as beneficial at your own home as in the most famous health resort, and the Piso Company (which has proven by a multitude of witnesses in the Superior Court of Cincinnati that Piso's Cure for Consumption, and the following simple, easy rules of hygiene, has cured even advanced cases) has issued a practical and valuable book giving complete instructions and directions of priceless worth to every victim of lung trouble. This book will be sent free to anyone. It is a work that should be in every home. It not only tells how consumption may be cured, but how to treat coughs and colds. It shows how Piso's Cure, which contains no opium or dangerous drugs, cures lung troubles not by lulling the cough to quiet, but by removing the cause and clearing the lungs of all decomposing matter. This book is yours for the asking. Send for it today. Address The Piso Company, 198 Piso Building, Warren, Pa.

Piso's Cure for Consumption is for sale in every drug store at 25 cents a bottle. It has been curing coughs, colds and Consumption for more than 50 years.

WHAT THEY SAY.

Judge William N. Runyon, the leader of the Colby movement in Union county, is a candidate for nomination of Assembly. If the courts sustain the act creating election districts Runyon and Perkins will both be in the same district and will have to contest for the nomination or election.—New Jersey Advocate.

The Colbyites have invaded Somerset county and threaten a second attack in the near future. What the ment with the muckrake will accomplish between now and election day is problematical, but so far the enthusiasts in the movement are confined principally to those who have been crossed in love or, in other words, have failed to land positions under the present regime upon which their souls were intent. The notable exception appears to be The Gazette. Everybody supposed it would unfold the reform banner and lead the mighty hosts of regenerated Republicanism on to victory or into the soup, but it had not a single word of comfort nor song of cheer to encourage these arch enemies of bosssism and corruution. It can be depended on, however, to be on the opposite side from Senator Reed and Mayor Smalley, but they, as well as the other prominent Republican leaders of the county, are content to bless the movement at a distance, as St. Patrick did Waterford.—Somerville Messenger.

"William N. Runyon has given affirmation to the rumor that he had changed his mind as to his ambition to hold public office by the announcement at the Colby meeting in Plainfield on Tuesday night of his candidacy for the Assembly. This means that he is to be the opponent of Assemblyman Perkins as both Mr. Runyon and Mr. Perkins would be in the same district, if the Court of Errors and Appeals upholds the new Assembly district law, and it would be for the voters in that particular district to declare at the primary which of these gentlemen should be the Republican candidate at the fall election. Aside from whatever motive there may be back of this self-announced candidacy, the right of Mr. Runyon to ask for the suffrage of his fellow citizens is not to be questioned. The popularity of Mr. Runyon in Plainfield, especially, must be admitted, and if there were no other considerations than that of friendship his strength as a candidate would be formidable. If Mr. Perkins was a candidate for the first time and without the good record as a legislator and the right of recognition due to him, in a contest between men so well known no one could feel safe in making a prediction as to the outcome. Mr. Runyon's candidacy under the present conditions makes certain only that there is to be a contest, and very likely it will be an unusually interesting one. If Mr. Perkins goes back to the Assembly he will probably be the speaker, an honor and advantage to the county fully appreciated. His record cannot be successfully attacked, his personal popularity has been demonstrated, and the majority of the voters are not likely to forget the reward that is due faithful service, nor the interests of the county. The announcement Mr. Runyon has made will have the effect of starting the activities of the canvass earlier than ordinarily. There has been no formal announcement that Mr. Perkins is to be a candidate for renomination, but that has been unnecessary. Party custom and conditions make him the logical candidate."—Elizabeth Journal.

PLAINFIELD AHEAD.

It is a matter of pride with Plainfield that the provisions of the Bishops' bill will necessarily work no change in the regulation of its saloons. The reason is that this city has been away ahead of the times in New Jersey in controlling the liquor traffic. For instance, there is an ordinance, which has been obeyed to the letter, that screens must be removed from the bar rooms on Sunday. Another reason is that no saloon-keeper has ever been accused of selling to minors nor of allowing those under age to frequent his establishment. Again, there is no "side room" evil. The presence of women in "side rooms" is almost unknown and it is safe to say that no one ever heard of young girls being allowed in such annexes. Two things that the new law does make compulsory, leaving Plainfield still ahead of its times, is the closing of all liquor places at 11 o'clock at night. That is not all for Plainfield has actual high licenses and is the only city in New Jersey that has. A fee of $1,000 a year and the restriction of the number of saloons has made the proprietors all the more guarded in living up to the strict letter of the ordiances that were in force long before the Bishops' bill was ever agitated.

THE BABY CAMP.

The time has come again for The Daily Press to appeal to all charitably inclined and public spirited citizens to help the City Union of King's Daughters in its laudable undertaking on the mountainside. The baby camp is one of the best know[illegible] among the many local institutions for the sick, the needy, the orphan and the unfortunate generally and among them all there is none more worthy. The babes of poor women, many of whom must do a day's work for a living and have little time to give their off-spring the care and attention they need particularly during the heated season are the wards of the union. Acknowledgement is made of the receipt of $8.50 representing the proceeds of a lawn party given last night by a number of children under the management of Daisy Robinson. Any contributions sent to this office will be promptly acknowledged and transmitted to the treasurer of the union.

Benefit of Trinity Church Library.

Arrangements are about complete for the musical and literary entertainment to be given at Trinity Reformed church, Thursday night, June 28, for the benefit of the Sunday-school library. Fred Dunavan, who has the programme in charge, has secured excellent talent for the occasion. There will be piano solos by Mrs. Ida Randolph-Smalley; recitations and readings by Miss Justine Roberts and vocal selections by Miss Lidie C. Applegate. The artists are all of Brooklyn, and a fine programme is assured.

Owes $1,080 Alimony.

Mrs. Helen Fitch Trueman brought yesterday an action in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to have her husband, William H. Trueman, punished for contempt. In separation proceedings she was awarded a decree May 8, 1901, with $250 counsel fees and $20 a week alimony. She alleges her husband stopped payments May 2, 1905, and that the arrears of alimony amount to $1,080. She says he lives in Salisbury, Md., and that he has informed her that he will pay her no more alimony. Justice Marean issued an attachment for Trueman's arrest.

Miss Carolyne R. Moore, of Patchogue, L. I., is visiting Miss Helen M. Armstrong, of Duer street.

THREE EMBEZZLERS SENT TO PRISON.

All Had Taken Money of Loan Associations When Acting as Secretaries.

Three former secretaries of building and loan associations were arraigned yesterday in Paterson, for sentence before Judge Scott in the Court of Special Sessions.

They are William H. Speer, former secretary of the People's Building and Loan Association of Passaic, accused of embezzling about $14,000; William Malcolm, former secretary of the Mutual Loan and Building Association of Passaic, who was arrested in Seattle, Wash., and who was indicted for the embezzlement of $4,357, but whose stealings are alleged to have amounted to $150,000, and George W. Alee, former secretary of the Manchester Building and Loan Association of Paterson, who was accused of the embezzlement of $5,257.

All had previously pleaded nonvult. Judge Scott sentenced each of the men to one year in State prison.

Malcolmn has a charge of forgery pending against him and for this alleged offense he will be placed on trial on Monday. The money taken by Speer and Allee is said to have been made good to the companies from which it was stolen.

Mrs. Adam Blair and son, Craig, of Plainfield avenue, left yesterday for Philadelphia, where they will spend a week with Mrs. Blair's parents.

back by the lack of this improvement and I think it would be a saving to join with Plainfield. It will be only a comparatively short time, I am convinced, when the two places will be united and it's useless to duplicate systems. The determination to erect a $300,000 court house at Somerville shows us what this means."

Here Mr. Hooley jumped up and said: "What is this, a sewage or a consolidation meeting?"

The point was accepted by Mr. Hegeman and he continued: "Whatever action is taken by this council will have my support—for sewers, Mr. Hooley."

He was followed by W. J. Conroy who said: "I am in favor of sewers and always have been. As was said before this evening, the need of them is retarding the borough's growth and a good system would greatly increase property values. The question of an individual or the Plainfield sewer depends upon consolidation, but this is not the place to talk about the latter. The borough has been made a political arena every year about election time and this consolidation proposition looks as though something was going on again."

"It's not a question of consolidation," asserted former Recorder Doud, "the talk about sewers was started last January and at that time no mention had been made about consolidation. We need sewers by the best terms and the quickest route and if you gentlemen were in the Board of Health, as I am, you would know pretty quick how the people feel about having them. If it comes to an independent system, there is plenty of room down in the lower end of the township to build the necessary beds."

After J. W. A. Bauersachs had asserted that there was a great demand for sewers from residents east of Somerset street and that he was in favor of an independent plant, a discussion followed as to the capacity of the Plainfield beds and what effect the discharge of the borough's sewage would have upon their working. All questions in this respect were answered in a clear and concise manner by Joseph O. Osgood, who is probably possessed of as much information on the subject as any man in the two Plainfields. He talked for several minutes and when he concluded no one needed any further explanation.

At this juncture, W. J. Buttfield spoke for the first time and said: "There seems to be a great diversity of opinion here and to me it seems as if this question is either going to make or break the borough. One of our largest property owners, Charles W. McCutchen, now in Europe, and myself, have had a number of talks on the subject and recently in corresponding he stated that North Plainfield should go slow. In my belief, the best way to handle this matter would be to appoint a commission and to get it before the meeting. I move that it be done and that Mr. Hooley, John F. Wilson and H. A. McGee be named."

The motion was seconded by Chas. Debele, but Andrew E. Kenney declared that a commission would only serve to complicate matters.

"It isn't a question as to whether a large property owner wants this or that, it's something the whole borough has a say about. The better thing for us to do is to give a vote of confidence to our mayor and council that they are competent to go ahead and bring about what's best. The Plainfield beds have been built after a great deal of time and study and have been copied all over the country, therefore the fact the borough will be allowed to use them is worthy of consideration."

Here Mr. Hegeman arose to state that he concurred with Mr. Buttfield in his view of the importance of the subject and he was followed by Mr. Reed who went over the cost figures of a system as prepared by the engineer and what it would cost to discharge on the Plainfield beds. When he concluded, H. A. McGee took the floor and gave a long talk on teh advisability of going slow. He brought out a number of points that seemed to appeal to the gathering and he was vociferously applauded when he resumed his seat.

President L. B. Woolston, of the Board of Trade, and George T. Rogers both said they favored the commission plan and then Mr. Osgood was called upon for an explanation of the plans as gone over from his standpoint. This he did in a thorough way and when he concluded said, "I favor going in with Plainfield."

After the applause had subsided, Mayor Smalley said: "The appointment of a commission would cause a delay that the people wouldn't care for. Personally, I regard all the men mentioned by Mr. Buttfield very highly, but there is a question in my mind as to whether they would accept an appointment as a member. The small gathering is against action tonight and yet we are constantly charged with causing delays. The point I want decided first is—which system is better. I do not agree with Mr. Osgood in his belief that it is best to go in with Plainfield. He admits himself that the beds are not where they belong and they are a source of constant expence. If we built our own disposal plant we could profit by Plainfield's experience and make improvements and again our system would be permanent. If we can't decide on anything tonight then we should call another meeting."

The tilt about consolidation took place at this juncture and afterward Mr. McGee asked Mayor Smalley how he knew a North Plainfield system would be permanent when no one knew where it would be located. The mayor answered that the location was practically known but it wouldn't be advisable to tell where the point was as immediately the property value would be doubled or again it might be impossible to buy the land when it became known why it was wanted. Another explanation as to what progress he had made was given by Engineer Pearson and the vote was taken on the commission idea, only a view opposing it.

When the result was made known, Mr. Hooley offered a resolution that "it be the sense of the meeting that the commission be empowered to engage such engineering advise as deemed necessary." This was carried and it was explained by Mr. Hooley that he meant some other engineer than Mr. Pearson. This matter will be definitely decided by the council. Mayor Smalley announced that he would appoint the commission as soon as possible after which the meeting adjourned.

Dies to Save Pet Dog.

Millville, June 23.—Physicians who attended Miss Flora Bowker, the young high school graduate who died in terrible agony a few days ago from what was supposed to have been ptomaine poisoning, now state that the case was one of hydrophobia, and it has since been learned that the girl was bitten previous to her death by her pet dog. For fear that her father might kill the dog should she tell him, she said nothing about being bitten. The dog has since gone mad and has been killed.

CHILDREN'S WORK FOR BABY CAMP

BOYS AND GIRLS HOLD A LAWN PARTY FOR CHARITY.

Under the direction of Miss Daisy Robinson, a number of boys and girls held a very successful lawn festival and entertainment last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh, 331 East Second street. It was the second annual affair for the benefit of the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on the mountains, and as a result $8.50 was realized as profit. This sum was turned over to The Daily Press this morning and will be the starting of a fund for the baby camp. It is hoped that others will feel like contributing to it. All money received will be acknowledged and given to Miss Helen Herman, treasurer of the organization.

The grounds were attractively decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns and in this work the young people had the assistance of Mrs. Otto Mueck. The young people worked very hard to make the affair a success and they deserve great credit.

The entertainment opened with the singing of "My Old Kentucky Home," and "My Country 'Tis of Thee," by the boys and girls. Then followed these recitations: "Grandma's Mince and Pumpkin Pies," Daisy Robinson; "Maud Muller at the 'Phone," Elsie Tier; "Turnabout," Walter Fisher; "In My Merry Oldsmobile," Beatrice and Elsie Tier; "A Boy's Pocket," Elsie Tier; "An Automobile," Beatrice Tier; "Good Night," Elizabeth Hicks and Mary McCormick; "A Question," Nora Mene; "Hiawatha," Daisy Robinson; "The Name that Grew," Ruth Kline; "A Valentine," May Cook; "The Seven Days of the Week," Harvey Thorn, Minnie Mene, Walter Fisher, Benjamin Adleberg, Isabelle Gloak, Ruth Enander and Bessie Adleberg; dialogue, "Red Riding Hood," May Cook; "Cinderella," Ruth Kline; "Gold Spinner," Beatrice Apgar; "Sleeping Beauty," Ella Case. The following songs were also given: "The Boy's Boat," Isabelle Gloak; "Meet Me at St. Louis," and "Every Little Bit Helps," Daisy Robinson; "Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown," Elsie Tier; "Old Woman," Daisy Robinson and May Cook.

After the entertainment there was a sale of candy, ice cream and cake. May Cook and Hazel Apgar were in charge of the candy table; Daisy Robinson and Ella Case the ice cream and Beatrice Apgar the cake. They were assisted by the other boys and girls. During the evening there were musical selections by an orchestra under the direction of Al. Hankinson. early 100 person attended the festival and all liberally patronized it.

NEED NOT SHOW NUMBERS.

Motor Cycles Relieved by Ruling on New Law.

Trenton, June 23.—Attorney General McCarter gave to J. B. R. Smith, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, today, an opinion, holding that the Frelinghuysen Automobile law of last winter repeals all other legislation in the State relative to motor vehicles. The repealing section in the new law provides that "all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.'

The question was raised whether under this section the acts or parts of acts in previous legislation which were not inconsistent with the Frelinghuysen law did not still continue in force. The direct issue was raised through a letter objecting to the department's ruling that the act of last year requiring that numbers be displayed on motor cycles was still in force.

The Attorney General held that the automobile law of last winter, although not specifically so designated in its title, is in effect a codification or revision of the whole subject, and that as such it repealed all previous legislation, even though it were not inconsistent with the terms of the present law. As a result of this recision motor cycles will not be required to display numbers after the new law takes effect, on July 1.

THE TELEGRAM

"Odd hand, my last," remarked one of the bridge players. He was a good-looking fair man, with an eyeglass, who was not so much absorbed in his game to find time to glance at the girl in white who sat on the sofa at right angles to the card table. She seemed to have a great deal to say to the man by her side. He looked like a sailor, a man with a keen, alert face, and far-seeing gray eyes. They talked in low tones, out of deference to the players. The game went on.

"What a good game!" said one of the men, as they arose. He stifled a yawn, looking at the clock.

"Yes," replied the man with the eyeglass, absently. "Good game." He was looking toward the sofa.

Their hostess glanced suddenly at the clock. "My dear people," she exclaimed, "if any of us mean to hunt tomorrow we ought to go to our little beds. I had no idea it was so late. George has probably gone to sleep in the smoking-room. Evie are you bored to death watching us?"

The girl in white smiled demurely. "No, thanks, dear," she replied prettily. She did not look bored.

They moved into the hall, where there was a keen but silent competition between the sailor and the man with the eyeglass to light and hand the candles. Both turned at the same moment to the girl in white.

"Naval or military?" whispered one of the bridge players in his hostess' ear. She frowned at him as he handed her a candle.

"Don't let George sit up all night," she remarked, generally. "Come, Evie."

The soldier pressed the girl's hand with an earnest good-night. The sailor said nothing, but looked at her with those strangely far-seeing eyes of his.

"Good night," she said softly and impartially to them both.

The two other men who had been playing bridge had gone down the corridor to the smoking-room and their host. A whistled chorus of "Of course I don't knok, but I guess," came back softly to the two men left in the hall. The women's voices sounded faintly upstairs, with the soft rustle of their frocks. The sailor's eyes suddenly met those of the other man, and he held out his hand.

"Good night, old man," he said; "I'm going to turn in." He went upstrairs whistling.

In her own room the girl was reading a letter, a long letter, in a feminine hand. She read and reread it, and then suddenly threw it into the fire. The flames curled round the sheet. Some words stood out very distinctly:

"* * * told me, and of course he knows. It's quite private, and not to be breathed a word about, yet. But he said it's almost certain that—" the flames burned out the name—"will ge the money. And such a pile! He is to have a wire tomorrow. Be sure and not breathe a word." * * * The letter burned up quickly. A few gray aches dropped into the grate. Outside an owl hooted mournfully. The girl shivered, looking nervously over her shoulder. Three words still stood out distinctly on the charred sheet: "Such a pile" * * * She sat staring into the fire.

They all came in from hunting the next evening, tired and pleased with their day. There was the usual search on the hall table for telegrams, or second-post letters. The man with the eyeglass took up an orange envelope. He looked his tall, straight best in pink, mud-splashed as he was. He read the telegram, and an eager light came into his eyes. He gathered up his letters, with one quick glance at the girl, and went upstairs.

"Come along, Evie, let's go and change," said her hostess. She linked her arm in the girl's, and they walked together to the foot of the wide staircase. But she suddenly remembered a message to be given, and turned back into the hall again. Only the sailor was there as she passed through. He was gazing at the staircase which the girl was ascending. At the top he paused, stooped and picked up something. It looked like an envelope. She passed on to her room quickly. The sailor's straight brows were knit together. He sat on in the hall, staring into the fire, until the girl came down again. She held a pile of letters in her hand and was going to the post box. Something surely fluttered from her fingers as she passed him. He stopped and picked up an orange envelope. The name stood out legibly.

"You dropped this?" he said interrogatively. She started, coloring violently.

"I? Oh, no." He looked at her for one puzzled moment, and her eyes fell before his. She looked very young and pretty. The sailor laid the telegram on the mantelpiece, behind the loud-ticking clock. Then he took the girl's hand. * * * "But I am so very sorry," she was saying, regretfully, a few moments later. The soldier with the eyeglass was coming downstairs, spick-and-span, and well-brushed. The sailor left the hall.

They drank their healths that evening at dinner, and every one said how pleased they were. The sailor, too, though his congratulations were brief. After dinner there was another announcement to make. The man with the eyeglass spoke.

They chaffed him, and called him the richest commoner in England, and said what a thing it was to have an unknown uncle who made fortunes and then died conveniently in the bush. And when the sailor's eyes next met those of the girl, there was an odd look of contemptuous pity in them. But Evie's hostess was saying to herself what a mercy it was the girl had chosen the right man—before she knew. * * * "She always liked him best, I suppose," she remarked to her husband the next day, as she waved her hand to the departing brougham. Evie had taken her soldier to be introduced to her family. "I always thought it was the other, George."

George nodded, being a silent man. Behind them, in the hall, the sailor was putting a piece of paper, lying unnoticed behind the clock, into the fire. It looked like a telegram.—The Hon. Mary Cavendish, in Black and White.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The special attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night will be George Primrose and his big minstrel company, which is said to be the largest and most elaborate in the world, and judging from the list of comedians, singers, dancers and musicians associated with Mr. Primrose, it is safe to say this is no idle boast. Theatre-goers of today will not content themselves with the minstrel performances that have been presented in the past, consisting of a few ordinary musicians, singers and vaudeville acts. Mr. Primrose being aware of this fact, has therefore selected the best local talent in the country, as well as an operatic orchestra of picked musicians, also the greatest comedians and dancers in the minstrel world. The opening part will consist of two scenes; the first will be that of "ye old-time" minstrel troupe with Sambo, Bones and Tambo, and all the old-time costumes and surroundings, changing to a modern first part, in what is said to be the handsomest scenic interior ever put on the stage, being done in blue, gold and ivory. During this part all the latest comic songs, jokes and ballads will be rendered by a host of comedians, singers and dancers.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

The Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the Revolution has presented to Governor Guild a replica of the flag of Bunker Hill, hoisted by the colonists June 17, 1775.

John B. Moran is going to run for Governor of Massachusetts as an independent, and Thomas W. Lawson is to stump for him. Moran is a Democrat and the present district attorney of Suffolk county, that State, and Lawson is a Republican millionaire.

Count Tolstoy has lately added bookbinding to the numerous skilled trades which he already practises.

Colonel W. W. Lumpkin, of Columbus, S. C., has entered the campaign in his State against Senator Tillman. He is a Confederate soldier with a distinguished career, is a nephew of a former chief justice, brother of a member of the present Supreme Court and a grandson of a former Governor of Georgia.

Fagnani's famous portrait of General John C. Fremont has been presented to the St. Louis Public Museum by J. F. Ballard, of that city.

At the Miami University commencement, at Hamilton, O., Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, appeared as the principal speaker in the academic gown of a doctor of laws. The Senator remarked that he felt as if he were in a bathing suit and a peekaboo bonnet. When the aurience laughed Senator Dolliver turned to President Benson and said: "I have said nothing funny. I believe the people are laughing at my clothes." He then took off the gown and dropped it upon the floor, where it remained until he had finished.

YOUR SUMMER OUTING.

Altitude 2000 feet above sea level. Pure and exhilarating atmosphere. Just the place for a young man to put in his summer holidays. An interesting and profusely illustrated descriptive publication telling you all about it sent free on application to F. P. Dwyer, 290 Broadway, New York.

Pain to Open at Manhattan Beach.

Pain's "Eruption of Vesuvius," his last masterpiece, will receive its initial performance tonight at Manhattan Beach. More than usual care has been taken for the production of this piece, and it is expected to be the most pleasing subject that Mr. Pain has yet attempted. It will be full of life and Italian color from the dress of the peasants to the vivid fire of the volcano. It will require a great number of people to carry out the scheme properly, and the Carnival of Naples will be a revelation to those who have only seen carnivals, on this side of the Atlantic. The performance will begin at 8 o'clock sharp.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream, which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

"There—boy!"

She took up the hat again.

"I'll be down in a moment."

"I'll be up in three, if you're not."

When she had gone he picked up an envelope and put a bill inside.

"Jarvis," he called.

The butler came up from below, dressed for the street.

"Jarvis, put this envelope in the inside of that excellent black coat of yours and hand it—afterward—to the gentleman we're going to do business with."

"Yes, Mr. Bines."

"And put your cravat down in the back, Jarvis—it makes you look excited the way it is now."

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir!"

"Is Briggs ready?"

"She's waiting, sir."

"Go out and get in the carriage, both of you."

"Yes, sir!"

He stood in the hallway waiting for her. It was a quarter past ten. In another moment she rustled softly down to him.

"I'm trusting so much to you, and you're trusting so much to me. It's such a rash step!"

"Must I—"

"No. I'm going. Couldn't we stop and take Aunt Cornelia?"

"Aunt Cornelia won't have a chance to worry about this until it's all over. We'll stop there then, if you like."

"We'll try Doctor Prendle, then. He's almost sure to be in."

"It won't make any difference if he isn't. We'll find one. Those horses are rested. They can go all night if they must."

"I have Grandmother Loekermann's wedding ring—of course you didn't fetch one. Trust a man to forget anything of importance."

His grasp of her hand during the ride did not relax.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE NEW ARGONAUTS.

Mrs. Van Geist came flustering out to the carriage.

"You and Briggs may get out here, Jarvis. There, that's for you, and that's for Briggs—and thank you both very much!"

"Child, child! what does it mean?"

"Mr. Bines is my husband, Mutterchen, and we're leaving for the west in the morning."

The excitement did not abate for ten minutes or so.

"And do say something cheerful, dear," pleaded Avice, at parting.

"You mad child—I was always afraid you might do something like this; but I will say I'm not altogether sure you've acted foolishly."

"Thank you, you dear old Mutterchen! and you'll come to see us—you shall see how happy I can be with this—this boy—this Lochinvar, Junior—I'm sure Mrs. Lochinvar always lived happily ever after."

Mrs. Van Geist kissed them both.

"Back to Thirty-seventh street, driver."

"I shall want you at 7:30 sharp, tomorrow morning," he said, as they alighted. "Will you be here, sure?"

"Sure, boss!"

"You'll make another one of those if you're on time."

The driver faced the bill toward the nearest street light and scanned it. Then he placed it tenderly in the lining of his hat, and said fervently:

"I'll be here, gent!"

"My trunks," Avice reminded him.

"And, driver send an express wagon at seven sharp. Do you understand, now?"

"Sure, gent, I'll have it here at seven, and be here at 7:30."

They went in.

"You've sent Briggs off, and I've all that packing and unpacking to do."

"You have a husband who is handy at those things."

They went up to her room, where two trunks yawned open.

Under her directions and with her help he took out the light summer things and replaced them with heavier gowns, stout shoes, golf capes and caps.

"We'll be up on the Bitter Root ranch this summer, and you'll need heavy things," he had told her.

Sometimes he packed clumsily, and she was obliged to do his work over. In these intervals he studied with interest the big old room and her quaint old sampler worked in colored worsteds that had faded to grays and dull browns: "La Nuit Porte Conseil."

"Grandma Loekermann did it at the convent, ages ago," she told him.

"What a cautious young thing she must have been!"

She leaned against his shoulder.

"But she eloped with her true love, young Annekje Van Schoule; left the home in Hickory street one night, and went far away, away up beyond One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, somewhere, and then wrote them about it."

"And left the sampler?"

"She had her husband—she didn't need any old sampler after that—Le mariage porte conseil, aussi monsieur. And now, you've married your wife with her wedding ring, that came from Holland years and years ago."

It was after midnight when they began to pack. When they finished it was nearly four.

She had laid out a dark dress for the journey, but he insisted that she put it in a suit-case, and wear the one she had on.

"I shouldn't know you in any other—and it's the color of your eyes. I want that color all over the place."

"But we shall be traveling."

"In our own car. That car has been described in the public prints as a 'suite of palatial apartments with all modern conveniences.'"

"I forgot."

"We shall be going west like the old '49-ers, seeking adventure and gold."

"Did they go in their private cars?"

"Some of them went in rolling six-horse Concords, and some walked, and some of them pushed their baggage across in little hand carts, but they had fun at it—and we shall have to work as hard when we get there."

"Dear me! And I'm so tired already. I feel quite done up."

She threw herself on the wide divan, and he fixed pillows under her head.

"You boy! I'm glad it's all over. Let's rest a moment."

He leaned back by her, and drew her head on to his arm.

"I'm glad, too. It's the hardest day's work I ever did. Are you comfortable? Rest."

"It's so good," she murmured, nestling on his shoulder.

"Uncle Peter took his honeymoon in a big wagon drawn by a mule team,

SHE SLEPT.

200 miles over the Placerville and Red Dog trail—over the mountains from California to Nevada. But he says he never had so happy a time."

"He's an old dear! I'll kiss him—how is it you say—'good and plenty.'"

"By the way, I forgot to ask, and it's almost too late now, but do you like cats?"

"I adore them—aren't kittens the dearest?"

"Well, you're healthy—and your nose doesn't really fall below the specifications, though it doesn't promise that you're any too sensible—but if you can make up for it by your infatuation for cats, perhaps it will be all right. Of course I couldn't keep you, you know, if you weren't very fond of cats, because Uncle Peter'd raise a row—"

She was quite still, and he noted from the change in her soft breathing that she slept. With his free hand he carefully shook out a folded steamer rug and drew it over her.

For an hour he watched her, feeling the arm on which she lay growing numb. He reviewed the day and the crowded night. He could do something after all. Among other things, now, he would drop a little note to Higbee and add the news of his marriage as a postscript. She was actually his wife. How quickly it had come. His heart was full of a great love for her, but he could not quite repress the pride in his achievement—and Shepler had not been sure until he was poor!

He lost consciousness himself for a little while.

Elopers Caught.

Wilkes-Barre, June 23.—Mrs. Walter Bourne, wife of a rose grower of Summit, N. J., who, with her three children, disappeared on May 15 at the same time as Robert Birnie, who was Bourne's head gardener, were all found here late Wednesday night by Chief of Police Brown, of Summit, N. J., and a force of the local police. Birnie was arrested, charged with kidnapping the oldest boy, and Mrs. Bourne and the other two children went back to Summit this afternoon with Bourne.

The Ash Accumulation

It is often a real question what to do with the accumulation of ashes before the ash-man comes for them. The best answer to that question is "don't have any ashes to accumulate."

Get a gas range and do away with this as well as much other unnecessary labor. Every additional step adds to the burden of general housework. Why carry coal and dump ashes on hot summer days when that time could be saved for pleasuring and the house kept cool and comfortable by the use of a gas range.

Range, $9.50 to $15.00. $2.00 down; $2.00 a month. Connections Free.

LITERARY.

The much talked about Third International Conference of American Republics will open in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on Saturday, July 21, and remain in session until September 1. Hon. Elihu Root, our distinguished Secretary of State, will shortly sail for Rio de Janeiro on board the cruiser "Charleston," one of the latest and finest vessels in the navy. The delegates, six in number, headed by Hon. William I. Buchanan, ex-Minister to Argentina and Panama, member of the last Pan-American Conference in Mexico City, will sail from New York on July 2, on the S. S. "Byron." A number of distinguished South American diplomats at Washington have already left for Europe, whence they will proceed to Rio. That our commercial relations with South America are still far from satisfactory is shown in a number of timely and able articles which appear in the current issue of the American Exporter.

Conover, ss; Mahaffey, 3b; Peacock, lf; McVoy, cf; Hand, rf. Minford and "Ted" Overton, of this city, form the battery for East Millstone.

One of the best ball games of the season is booked to take place this afternoon on Crescent Oval, when the Westfields will tackle the champion Plainfields. If reports from Manager Nicholas are correct the Westfielders have been sprucing themselves up for the occasion and really expect to win the contest. The fourteen-inning game put up by them four weeks ago has naturally had a tendency to make them feel more or less cock as well as important in Union county baseball circles. The locals are just now playing the fastest kind of ball as demonstrated by the victory over Jersey City last Sunday. If Westfield should beat Plainfield or even put up another fourteen-inning draw, it is entitled to a game with Jersey City or New York, or similar teams in the Plainfield class. Dan Connolly will be seen back in the outfield today to fill the vacancy made by Bertwhistle, who left the team to play with Bridgeport. Connolly is said to be in good condition both in the batting and clouting line and will fill the gap very acceptably. The game will be put on at 3:30 o'clock sharp, and should attract a large crowd.

Reports from Connecticut indicate that Jimmy Bertwhistle is surprising the baseball fraternity up that way in the manner in which he is clouting the ball. There has been very little slugging at Bridgeport since the departure of Pop Foster for Newark. That player is now the leading batsman for the Sailors.

Manager Burke, of the Elizabeth Stars, has evidently stopped issuing challenges to Plainfield. It's a safe bet to make that he is just a little frightened over a series for a side bet, since last Sunday when Manager Daab's team took the Jersey Citys into camp by the score of 4 to 1.

Phil. Smith will be in the box today against Westfield and Willie Deegan will be given an additional lease of life by going up against the Waterburys tomorrow.

Manager Daab, hearing glowing reports of Teddy Overton's playing with the East Millstone team, is disposed to give the former City League star a chance in the outfield. Overton is executing some heavy stick work for the Middlesex team in addition to his brillint work behind the bat. "Teddy" has gained an enviable reputation as a daring base stealer and his sprinting abilities make him a strong factor for the Plainfields, if he decides to make the jump.

President Powers, of the Providence club yesterday suspended Pitcher Jerry Nops for the balance of the present season. Continued absence without leave when the team needed the service of every man was the cause of the action of President Powers. A day or two previous to the opening of the present championship season Nops left the team without permission or telling anyone where he was going. This disarranged Manager Dunn's plans badly, as it left him with practically but three pitchers, all right-handers. At least two defeats received in the opening games were due to this fact. Nops returned to the team and made the Western trip and took part in three games, but was not in the best condition to pitch. Week before last he again left without permission, not showing up to go on the recent trip. Nothing was heard from him directly, but a friend of his approached Manager Dunn at Baltimore Saturday afternoon and tried to square matters. The affair was out of Dunn's hands at the time, he having made a report of the case to Mr. Powers. The player was given every consideration of the club officials and had he used the team right the rest of the year his first offense would have been overlooked, but the second one was more than the discipline of the team could stand and President Powers saw no alternative.

Harry McFarland, the star outfielder of the Providence Eastern League team, has jumped to the outlaw Tri-State League. He has signed to play with the York Club. York now has three of the Providence Club's best players. They are Jacklitsch, catcher; Conn, first base, and McFarland, outfielder. The latter will replace Jack Hayden, who recently jumped the York Club to play with the Boston Americans.

It is reported that Red Waller has jumped the Bridgeport team and will play with Atlantic City for the remainder of the season. Waller recently went through a nerve-racking game with the Waterbury team who batted five home runs in one game.

The Newark papers are donating a generous amount of space in extolling Jack O'Neil's splendid work behind the bat.

Dan Donnoby, last year's rightfielder, should receive a warm welcome from the fans this afternoon. Dan is now employed on Hearst's N. Y. American doing society stunts.

Joe Alberts, the Scotch Plains boy, still continues to cut the luck for Somerville.

Clinton Avenue's Game.

The Clinton Avenues will meet the colored All-Americans, on Clinton avenue, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The lineup of the colored team will be as follows: Warwick, ss; Kline, rf; Joe Larnes, 2b; Fred Brokaw, p; Carter, lf; Miller, 3b; John Catcher, c; Mitchell, cf; John Brokaw, 1b.

College baseball pitchers have been probably more effective this year than ever before, and there are a number of good men in the college ranks for the professional clubs to gobble up. Princeton undoubtedly has the best pitchers in the east in Byram, Don Doyle and Heyninger. Byram has received an offer to pitch for the Lancaster Tri-State league team, and probably will accept it, as he has finished his course at Princeton. He is a left-hander, with wonderful control, and possesses a cool head. Don Doyle, also a left-hander, is also through at Princeton, and may join the team of his native city—Pittsburg—as he has received a flattering offer from Fred Clarke. "Lefty" McIlvain, of State College, will join the Pirates, but McIlvain has pitched for two seasons in the Tri-State league under several names, so that professional ball is not new to him. He is a wonderful pitcher, and should make good with Pittsburg. Heyninger, of Plainfield, the third Princeton pitcher, and the man who pitched the Tigers to the championship by beating Yale and Harvard when both teams had touched up Byram, may be lost to Princeton for next year, as he resigned from college last week. He has received several offers to turn professional, including one from the Johnstown Tri-State league team. Heyninger is young and splendidly built, being a six-footer and weighing about 200 pounds. With careful coaching he should develop into a winner. Hay, of Pennsylvania, has earned the title of the champion "hard luck" pitcher, having lost games to Harvard, Cornell, Columbia an drBown that should have been won with proper support. Hay has received several offers from minor league teams, but is out of the game with a bad cold in his pitching arm. Tift, of Brown, and Tilt, of Columbia, are two men who will bear watching should they break into the professional ranks. Ralph Glaze, of Dartmouth, is still another college pitcher who is playing ball for money.

GIRLS TAKE FRUIT TO DR. SIMPSON IN JAIL.

Man Accused of Killing Father-in-Law Won Their Hearts by Kind Words and Smile.

Riverhead, L. I., June 23.—Three Riverhead girls the eldest of whim is twelve years have taken a deep interest in Dr. Simpson, the Fifth avenue dentist, who is confined in county jail here awaiting trial for the shooting of his father-in-law, Bartley T. Horner.

The girls obtained permission one of the visiting days this week to go through the jail. When making a tour of the cells they passed Dr. Simpson's, and he smiled very pleasantly and said:

"How do you do, young ladies?" And then he again smiled good-naturedly.

This pleased the girls to such an extent that they told nearly every one they met what an awfully nice man Dr. Simpson was, how sorry they were for him because he had to be kept in jail, and what a lovely diamond ring he had on his finger.

These three misses carried yesterday a large basket of luscious strawberries to the warden's office, together with other fruit and sweetmeats, and left orders with the officials to give them to Dr. Simpson.

"We feel very sorry for poor Dr. Simpson," they said.

GAS EXPLOSION SCATTERS DINERS.

Windows, Partitions and Ceiling Blown Away in a Busy Restaurant.

Abraham Greenstein, of No. 116 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, and Jos. Valnor, of No. 523 Metropolitan avenue, plumbers, were looking yesterday with a candle for a leakage of gas in the cellar under the restaurant of Abraham Samuelson, No. 450 Keap street, when an explosion occurred. The front windows, kitchen partitions and ceiling of the restaurant were blown away.

It was the noon hour and many diners were in the place. There was a wild scramble for the street. Tables and chairs were overturned and several persons were cut about the face and hands.

There was a report that persons had been killed, and calls for ambulances were sent to the Williamsburg and Eastern District Hospitals.

The two plumbers were burned about the face and hands. They refused to go to the hospital, and after their burns had been dressed they were taken home.

The explosion set fire to the cellar, but the flames were quickly put out by the firemen.

MOTORMAN GETS SHOCK

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Hand Severely Burned By Heavy Charge of Electricity That Passed Through Him.

Jerked from his feet by a shock from a broken feed wire he was trying to tie up, Edward Drake, 32 years old, a P. S. C. motorman, was thrown from the top of his car, Saturday afternoon, on Front street, and severely injured. Besides being rendered unconscious by the fall, he suffered severe electrical burns, and will spend two or three days in the hospital recovering from injuries and general shock.

The accident occurred at Compton avenue, at about 2:20 o'clock. Drake saw the feed wire trailing on the ground, and stopped his car to take charge of it. The general rule on the road for motormen when they come across broken feed wires is to tie them up out of the way of pedestrians and drivers. Drake climbed to the top of his car to do it in this case. Under ordinary circumstances, it is safe enough to handle a trolley wire from the top of a car, the wood preventing a complete circuit, but the wire in this case touched the ground and formed a circuit that had all degrees of mischief in it. Drake overlooked that fact, and suffered for his lack of caution the instant his hand touched the strand.

He was lifted completely off his feet, and tossed from the car roof as if he had been a bundle of straw. He struck in the roadway on his head and shoulders, and was picked up unconscious.

The car stood almost directly in front of Roundsman John Flynn's house, and he took charge of the injured man immediately. He called out the patron wagon, and Drake was rushed to the hospital. The motorman recovered consciousness before the wagon arrived, but he was barely able to walk with assistance, and it was feared that the fall had fractured his skull. Deep burns covered the palm of his hand, and he was suffering from the effects of the heavy current that had shot through his body.

Drake was put to bed at the hospital, and the doctors watched his case all day. Serious effects were feared at first, but he rallied from the shock yesterday, and it was announced this morning that he would be able to leave the institution in a day or two.

NOTICES TELL HER BROKEN MARRIAGES

PUT ADV. OF HIS DAUGHTER'S DIVORCE IN NEWSPAPER.

Two advertisements appeared together in The Daily Press Saturday. They read:

TORBERT — EGGERDING — On Wednesday, June 20, at the residence of the bride's parents, Helen Eggerding to Edward Taylor Torbert, of Maplewood, N. J., formerly of Brooklyn.

DIVORCED—On Aug. 15, 1905, by Justice Frederick W. Kruse, holding special term Supreme Court in and for Kings county, N. Y., final decree of absolute divorce was granted to Mary Anita Torbert from her husband, Edward Taylor Torbert, for statutory causes.

The notices were inserted by Torbert's erstwhile father-in-law, Andrew Bross, a wealthy market man at No. 241 Washington street, Manhattan, living at No. 217 Clermont avenue, Brooklyn. It was the first intimation to the social circles in which the Brosses move that there had been a divorce.

Edward Taylor Torbert was secretary of the American Woollen Company, with offices at No. 72 Leonard street, New York, when he married Mary Anita Bross on Feb. 17, 1897. They lived with the bride's parents until the early summer of 1904, when they went to Summit, N. J. It was there that Mrs. Torbert learned of her husband's indiscretions.

Detective Isaac Harris followed Mr. Torbert to the Hotel Regent, Twenty-eighth street and Sixth avenue, Manhattan, one evening two years ago. The detective summoned Mr. Bross and the two broke into the room occupied by Torbert.

"Is this the man you wanted to find?" the detective asked Mr. Bross.

"Is it," replied Mr. Bross, glaring at his recreant son-in-law.

Mr. Bross was seen at his home by a reporter. He said:

"I inserted and paid for the marriage and divorce notices simply to set my daughter in the proper light in the community and before her friends. There is not the slightest ill feeling on my part or that of my daughter. Torbert has married again, and I thought it nothing but fair that, our friends should know the true facts in the case."

Torbert lives with his mother in Lenox road, Maplewood, N. J., near South Orange. He is now on a honeymoon trip with his bride.

INTERHAVEN SERVICE.

Dean Rodman Spoke at Outdoor Meeting Yesterday.

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace Episcopal church, spoke at the weekly meeting at Interhaven Park at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His topic was "The Healing Power of the Christlife Made Practical in Our Daily Lives." Dean Rodman referred incidently of the quiet and restful surroundings and the charm of such a place in which to meditate on the works of God.

Miss May Vincent rendered several selections on the piano and the open-air congregation joined heartily in a few beautiful and appropriate hymns. Among those in attendance was Rev. Dr. Whitney, of First place, formerly president of the Hackettstown Collegiate Institute.

Next Sunday a noted New York divine will speak at the same hour. The meetings will be continued throughout the summer season.

Will Provide for 5,000 Subscribers.

When the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company takes possession of its new building on East Fourth street, now in course of construction, it will employ an office force of forty persons, including operators and clerks. Provision will be made for an increase of 5,000 subscribers. The increase during the past year has been phenomenal, necessitating many extensive improvements.

Baptist Supplies.

During the absence of Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, on his vacation, the supplies will be as follows: August 5, Rev. Daniel H. Clare, of Hamilton, N. Y.; August 12, Rev. J. A. Cubberley, Plainfield; August 19, Rev. Dr. J. Henry Haslam, of Philadelphia; August 26, Rev. T. Moore Smith, of Scotch Plains; September 2, Rev. B. D. Stelle, of Philadelphia.

Hurt in Collision of Rigs.

While returning from a dance near Gillette, Saturday night, George Doodlesachs, of that place, drove his runabout into a wagon standing in the road. His rig was overturned and himself thrown out, receiving injuries that necessitated his removal to the office of Dr. Bebout at Stirling. The horse broke away and was afterward found in its stable.

RUNAWAY HUSBAND HERE

Deserted Wife Traces Him to Plainfield on Two Occasions.

ASKS HELP FROM PAPERS

Thinks a Printed Appeal Will Bring Him Back to Her—She Is Destitute and Needs Him.

An appeal for assistance in searching for her husband, who left her last winter, has been made by Mrs. J. E. Hunter, of 101 Devoe street, Brooklyn, to The Daily Press. She says the missing man was seen in Plainfield two weeks ago. He left her, according to letters she has sent to the police and this paper, in destitute circumstances, and she is in dire need. She is in hopes that he will return if he sees an appeal from her in the paper.

Hunter is described, as a tall, old man, near-sighted and a wearer of glasses. He is a photographer, but is familiar enough with the building trade to work at that.

Mrs. Hunter first wrote to this city several months ago. Friends told her that Hunter had been seen here and in Bound Brook, and she appealed to the police to help her find him. Chief Kiely detailed Detective Florence McCarthy on the case, and the officer discovered traces of a man answering Hunter's description in the West End. The man himself he was unable to run down, and after a watch had been kept without results for several weeks, interest in the search lapsed.

This latest letter from Mrs. Hunter revives interest in the case, and the police and newspapers will co-operate in an effort to locate the old man. Mrs. Hunter says in her letter that "he was seen two weeks ago speaking to the man in the marble-yard at the corner where the trolley passes uptown on the way to Newark." That describes are corner at Richmond and East Third streets, where J. E. Townsend's marble-yard is located.

Mrs. Hunter's letter to The Daily Press reads pathetically. "I am poor, for he left me without anything," it says in closing. "If you can put an ad in your paper that won't cost much, send me a card and I will pay you. Hoping you will not overlook this—I will be very thankful to you—"

CLIFFORD H. BROKAW WEDS AT IRVINGTON.

Miss Frances Ursula Krewson, Daughter of Councilman Frank Krewson, His Bride.

Miss Frances Ursula Krewson, daughter of Councilman Krewson, of Somerset street, the borough, and Clifford H. Brokaw, formerly of the borough, but now of New York, were married Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Hayner, of the Episcopal church, Irvington, Essex county. The marriage took place at Mr. Hayner's home, and it was witnessed by the bride's father and aunt, Mrs. W. B. Vail, her sister, Miss Dorothy Krewson, and Mrs. May Patrick, all of the borough; Mrs. McDavitt and Miss Alice McDavitt, of Irvington. After the ceremony the couple left for New York, where they will reside. The groom is engaged in the automobile business in New York with his brother.

The marriage was in the nature of a surprise. While Mr. Krewson knew of his daughter's engagement to Mr. Brokaw he did not know that she intended to be married Saturday afternoon. The first intimation he had of it was on Friday when she told him. There was no opposition to the wedding on his part.

The bride was graduated from the Trenton Normal School a year ago and during the past year she taught in the public school at Oak Tree. The Board of Education there fully expected her to return there next fall. She gave the board no assurance that she would, however.

FIRE DOES $300 DAMAGE.

Started This Afternoon in the Attic of Chas. Ramsberger's Residence.

An alarm was turned in from box 37 shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon for a fire in the attic of Charles Ramsberger's residence at 676 Essex street. A brisk blaze was in progress when No. 3 company reached the scene and a stream from its chemical engine failed to stop it. A line of hose had to be run in from a hydrant before the flames were put out. The damage is estimated by Chief Doane at $300.

The firemen say the blaze caught from a stove while neighbors assert the Ramsbergers kept an incubator in the attic and that this was the cause of the fire.

The trustees of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet at the church at 8 o'clock this evening.

CITY BOMBARDED BY HAIL

Gardens and Farms Suffered From the Fall of Icy Pellets.

HAILSTONES OF BIG SIZE

Thousands of Three and a Half Inches In Diameter Fell in Perth Amboy—Damage Here Light.

Plainfield was visited Saturday afternoon by a severe and remarkable hail storm, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain and thunder and lightning. The actual damage here was not as heavy as one would suppose, although the gardens and farms suffered greatly. Throughout the early part of the day there were frequent showers, but at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the weather cleared and it looked as though it would remain so. Within the next hour heavy dark clouds gathered in the southwest and at 3:30 o'clock there was a hail storm. It lasted fully fifteen minutes.

The stones were of varied shapes, some round like moth-balls, others jagged edged and others were pear shaped. Some were an inch and a half and two inches in diameter. A number of horses in the street were frightened and several runaways were reported. At the home of Harry G. Runkle on West Eighth street, all of the glass in the conservatory was broken. In all parts of the town there were reported the breaking of window panes and scarcely a tree escaped damage. The lawns were covered with leaves, while flower gardens and shrubbery of various kinds were cut down as with a sickle. The headlights of engines passing through Plainfield on the New Jersey Central during the storm were smashed into fragments.

The storm followed a peculiar course. In Eastern Pennsylvania it was very severe, resulting in thousands of dollars worth of damage to crops, wrecking thousands of trees, upsetting houses and in some instances several persons were killed by lightning.

While Dunellen and Scotch Plains were included in the storm area, New Market escaped, as did also Westfield. At Perth Amboy the storm was probably the most severe in this part of the State. It swept over the entire place, doing great damage to public buildings, factories and churches. Hail stones which measured three and a half inches in diameter fell in thousands. In one factory over one thousand panes of glass were broken. Maurice Audsley, of this city, who visited a relative at Perth Amboy, yesterday, was shown a pail of hail stones which had been kept in a refrigerator. Four of them weighed an even pound.

The storm also visited Iselin, where it reached cyclonic velocity. Frank Cooper, who boasted of the finest and largest tomato patch in this section, comprising twenty acres, reports that the entire patch was laid waste and is nothing but a mass of mangled vines. At the hotel in Iselin the proprietor shoveled up enough hail stones after the shower to fill his refrigerator.

Several instances were reported here of persons gathering a sufficient quantity of hail stone to make a freezer of ice cream.

J. Herbert Case, of Duer street, who was on his way to Bedminster, to spend Sunday, was overtaken by the storm and had a lively time before he reached a place of safety.

In 1895 a hail storm visited Plainfield, but it only lasted for about five minutes. The damage, however, was heavy, much glass being broken. Scarcely a pane was left in Peterson's greenhouses. After that heavy glass was put in which withstood Saturday's storm. The downpour of rain was very heavy and streets in all parts of the city were flooded, the storm sewers being unable to carry it off quickly enough. A sudden change of temperature was looked for after the storm, but the air did not grow cooler until toward night.

Reports were received that panes of glass in trolley cars were broken, but no other damage to the rolling stock of the Public Service Corporation resulted.

Tank Tapped for $3.

Joseph Pabian, a new-arrived Pole, was arrested on East Second street yesterday afternoon for raising a booze fuss on his neighbor's premises. Through an interpreter Joseph explained to City Judge Runyon this morning that he has a reputation as a tank and his friends fill him up to see him play the goat. The magistrate taxed him $3 for yesterday's successful performance. The interpreter paid.

TUCKER REFUSES TO RUN

Colbyite Assemblyman Announces That He Will Not Be a Candidate Again.

NOR TOM DEBEVOISE

Elizabeth Man Will Fight On, However, So Will the Summitite—Situation in Rahway.

Assemblyman Everard Tucker, of Elizabeth, made the announcement today that he would not be a candidate for re-election next fall, declaring that his reasons for this are purely personal. It is not believed that any amount of pressure will lead Mr. Tucker to change his mind and again be the Assembly candidate. He says he would continue to give hearty support to the Colby movement and would do all in his power to help it.

If Mr. Tucker sticks to his intention, Colbyites say that another Elizabethan will be picked in his place. There are several prospective candidates as running mates of Judge William N. Runyon on the Colbyites' Assemblyman nomination ticket and from among them two will shortly volunteer their services to the "New Idea."

It is settled that Thomas Debevoise, of Summit, will not consent to be one of the two, although strong pressure was brought to bear on him by friends in this city, Elizabeth and Summit.

Rahway has not grasped the "New Idea" as quickly as it was expected to, but the league has in mind an invasion of that city early in the campaign. There have been several volunteers from Rahway who are anxious to take up the work. There will be a mass meeting in Elizabeth Thursday night under the auspices of the Union County Republican League.

COSTLY INTERFERENCE.

Marienschenck Fined $10 For Butting-In On Arrest in Dunellen.

Tony Marienschenck, a well-known Dunellenite, learned, in the court of the borough yesterday morning that it is more expensive to interfere with an officer than to collect a jag. When James Greenhouse, another Dunellenite, was arrested Saturday evening for drunkenness, Marienschenck tried to get him away from Marshal Mohan. In court, Recorder Campbell fined Marienschenck $10, but let Greenhouse off with a $3 penalty.

Marienschenck's butt-in created a good deal of excitement on the busiest corner of Dunellen's main street. He tried to do up the officer, it is said, but Mohan subdued him.

HURT IN GYMNASIUM.

He didn't realize the extent of his injury, although the blow partially stunned him, until he felt the blood trickling down his face. He went to the office of a physician, where five stitches were taken in the gash.

Wouldn't Work With an Italian.

Thirteen molders employed in the foundry at the Scott Press Works went on strike this morning because their foreman placed an Italian on a job beside them. They asked that he be taken away and when the request was refused the thirteen gathered up their tools and left. As the management is determined to put at work whatever men they please, the "mutineers" will have to seek other places.

ANNUAL EXHIBIT AT ST. GABRIEL'S ACADEMY

DISPLAY OF PUPILS' WORK EXCEEDS THAT OF PREVIOUS YEARS

The annual exhibit of specimen work done by the pupils of St. Gabriel's Academy during the past year began in the academy building, Jackson and Watchung avenues, yesterday. It will continue today and tomorrow and the public has been cordially invited to attend.

To those who have not viewed previous exhibits, the display of different work is almost a revelation, especially that of the painting class. In this department some very well executed specimens are shown from the brush of Miss Rose Gesswein, Miss Margaret Willoughby, Miss Anna Pedeflous, Miss Mary Berkhan, Miss Callahan and Miss Marie Kenney. They comprise canvasses in oil and water, decorated china, tapestries, panels and sofa cushions. Miss Gesswein has a very large number that reveal exceptional talent and Miss Helen Callahan has made rapid progress, this having been her first year. Miss Berkhan and Miss Willoughby are adepts at painting china and Miss Pedeflous and Miss Kenney, who are advanced in the study, excel in tapestries. The Sisters of the Academy, who comprise the faculty, have embellished the painting exhibit with some of their own work, the whole forming quite a "gallery" and making a pleasing display.

The embroidery pupils again have a large part of the exhibit and the specimens of this work are a great delight to the women visitors. Some splendid table covers, center pieces and hand embroidered pillows are credited to the Misses Mary McCullough, Anna Pedeflous, May Berkhan, Theresa Schneider and Jennie Dineen. Miss Dineen also shows several bits of plain sewing that are very good and Miss Irene Duchesne leads in Mount Mellick work, which as a rule is hard for most pupils.

In needlework, Miss Marie Kenney shows a pretty white hat in eyelet work and an elaborated cushion. Miss Margaret McDonough has a cushion, richly colored, and Miss Bernadette Duchesne a cushion embroidered in violet.

The regular class work is devoted almost entirely to free hand sketches in ink, specimen pages of arithmetic, geography, algebra and geometry. The pupils who have pen work displayed are the Misses Grace Rafferty, Irene Duchesne, Margaret McDonough, Marie Kenney, Anna Pedeflous, Mary McCullough, May Berkhan, Lillian Pauly, Theresa Schneider and Jennie Dineen. Among the juniors who are represented are Henrietta Pedeflous, Madeline Noonan, Marie Sullivan, May Duchesne, Margaret Longman, Valentina Coombs and Marie Tobin. Miss Margaret McDonough exhibits a splendid free-hand map and examples of various kinds of class studies are given by the boys, George Noonan, Frederick Coombs, Joseph Noonan and Walter Longman.

The entire exhibit reflects great credit upon the Sisters and shows what careful and conscientious attention is given each pupil. Two of the young women, Miss Grace Rafferty and Miss Mary McCullough, completed the grammar course this year and will take up High School studies in September.

John Scott Hurt.

While John Scott and his wife, of Cranford, were out driving near Plainfield, last night, one of the reins dropped out of his hands. In attempting to recover it the horse became frightened and started to run away. Mr. Scott was thrown out of the wagon, receiving slight hurts and some scratches about the head. His wife quickly grasped the reins after her husband fell and stopped the horse. Mrs. Scott returned to where her husband lay in the road and assisted him in the carriage. He was suffering such pain that Mrs. Scott decided to take her husband to Muhlenberg Hospital. After treatment he was able to return to his home. His injuries were not serious.

BOROUGH COPS' BIG HAUL

Capture Twenty Italians in All in Raid on a Somerset St. Booze Emporium.

COLLECTED $64 IN FINES

Prisoners Make Fearful Racket Because They Are Crowded in Cells—Proprietor of Place Escapes.

A couple of beer-laden Italians who got miffed because, in the parlance of the street, "someone handed them a lemon," tipped off the borough police, yesterday afternoon, about a carousal that was in progress in a house on upper Somerset street almost opposite Hudson's lane. Securing the assistance of Special Marshal Ben Harrison and Lieutenant Campbell, of the fire department, Chief Weiss raided the place and captured in all twenty roisterers who were cutting up high jinks around an improvised bar-room, together with five boxes of beer, sundry decks of cards and handfuls of dice. The whole crowd was packed away in the borough jail and this morning they handed up a total of $64 in fines.

The house where the jamboree was being held is rented by Frank Piptz but he went on a junket yesterday and left things in charge of Columbus Moletch and Mike Morris. They opened up early in the morning and were selling joy water as fast as they could hand it out, all the Italians from the upper section of the borough calling to get some. Those wo wanted to stay and play cards or gamble in other ways squatted about the floor and the place looked like a California "Red Dog" saloon during the gold rush. In some way, two of the card players received rough treatment in a deal and determined to get revenge, so bade "adio" to the crowd and streaked it for the police station.

As soon as Chief Weiss made out what they were telling, both were clapped into jail for safe keeping and the raiding party started for the Piptz emporium. They had no difficulty in getting in but when they appeared panic seized the crowd. The majority made a rush to get out but Campbell was at one door, Harrison at another and interested citizens saw to it that no one leaped out of the windows. The only way clear was upstairs and the two bartenders, Moletch and Morris led a delegation to the attic as if the Mafia was after them. They had to crawl through a narrow opening and before they could do it, Weiss and his assistants had rounded up fifteen. These were hustled downstairs and placed aboard the first trolley car that came along. Those who were left behind thought that they had been overlooked and made no attempt to get away. They still believed so until the police reappeared and made a thorough search of the house. Moletch and Morris were found half smothered beneath bundles of rags in the attic and had to be jerked out by the feet. They were also placed on a car and the beer and other stuff was loaded in a waon.

The quarters in the borough jail are limited and the stowing of twenty in four cells brought a howl of protest from the prisoners. They yelled like madmen during part of the evening and the report spread among their friends and relatives that they were being tortured. At one time there was a crowd of 150 in front of the building and the women were frantic. The police drove them away repeatedly but they only returned and as a last resort the prisoners were threatened with a drenching from a hose. This quieted them somewhat and the racket was afterward stopped entirely by the threat that every man who spoke above a whisper would be fined $25.

When the crowd was lined up this morning it was impossible to tell whether they pleaded "Not guilty," "guilty" or "non yuit," so Mayor Smalley fined eighteen $3 each and Moletch and Morris $5 each. One of the prisoners was seen to mail a letter as soon as he got out and it is thought he sent word to Piptz, who is in New York, that it would be cheaper for him to stay on the other side of the Hudson.

One of the men caught in the haul gave his name as John Verity and said that he had nothing to do with the carousing, that he was only a boarder at the place. The only sympathy he got from the mayor was the advice that he had ought to hang his hat somewhere else.

IS NOW A FELLOW

H. L. GOODWIN ELECTED TO GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

He Is Only 28 Years of Age—The Object of the Famous Organization and Privileges Enjoyed by Its Many Members.

Kansas City, Mo.—There are three members of the Royal Geographical society in this city. They are Dr. Edwin R. Heath of Kansas City, Kas., Col. J. Gardiner Stowe, formerly United States consul general in Capetown, South Africa, and H. Llewellyn Goodwin. Mr. Goodwin has just been elected a member of the famous old organization on the recommendation of Col. Stowe. There are only six honorary members of the Royal Geographical society in the United States. Dr. Heath of Kansas City, Kas., is one of the six. In the whole United States there are not more than 75 fellows of the society, and all were elected in recognition of something, scientific attainments, explorations or fame of one kind or another. Mr. Goodwin, the latest addition to the society's ranks, is only 28 years old. He was formerly a department manager for Swift & Co., packers, but is now general western manager for a scale manufacturing company. He was born in Burlington, Kan. Mr. Goodwin is possessed of unusual educational qualifications, particularly in mathematics. Col. Stowe had known him many years and admired his business energy. Under the rules of the Royal Geographical society a fellow may, after a year's membership, propose the name of another for the same honor.

The Royal Geographical society was founded in 1830 for the advancement of geographical science. It received a royal charter of incorporation in 1850. It started with 460 members. To-day it has 4,315 in all parts of the world. Nearly all these members are noted in some capacity. They represent the arts, the sciences, the armies and navies of many nations; kings and princes; professional men whose names are known everywhere. There are scores of members with titles enough to tire most people and from five to 20 letters tacked on the end of their names. His majesty, the king of England, is a patron of the society, and his royal highness, the prince of Wales, vice patron. Rt. Hon. Sir George Taubman Goldie, K. C. M. G., F. R. S., D. C. L., LL. D., and other things, is president.

H. LLEWELLYN GOODWIN.
(Who Has Been Honored by Election as Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.)

The Royal Geographical society, to be absolutely correct about it, can trace its beginning back to 1555, when the first organized geographical work was undertaken. Travelers began then to write books telling what they had seen in their wanderings. The "Royal society" was founded by some of these travelers. The African association was organized in 1788 to promote the exploration of the Dark Continent. The Raleigh Dining club came into existence in February, 1827. These three organizations were merged in 1830 into the trust now known as the Royal Geographical society. So that H. Llewellyn Goodwin, in being elected to so distinguished a body of such ancient lineage, may reasonably be pardoned if he give evidence of gratification.

A member of the Royal Geographical society has advantages over ordinary traveling mortals. If he wishes to visit some out of the way quarter of the globe, about which no one seems to know anything, he may write to the secretary in London, or visit the "house" if he chances to be over that way, and find out all about it in short order. If his mission shall appear to be particularly praiseworthy, the society will put up money to push it along and may even lend him instruments if he needs them, and an outfit. And when the explorer returns, if he ever does, the society will hold an extraordinary meeting with much solemnity and listen to his story. The collection of maps and books on travel in the society's rooms is not excelled anywhere.

Pulpwood in 1905.

The returns from 159 firms, controlling 232 pulp-mills, give over 3,000,000 cords as the total amount of wood used last year. The wood was divided among the various processes as follows: Sulphite, 1,538,000 cords; soda, 413,000 cords; ground wood, 1,058,000 cords. The total pulp production by all processes by the firms reporting was 1,591,000 tons. According to the census of 1900, the consumption of pulpwood was then 1,970,319 cords, so that there has been an increase of over 50 per cent in the last six years. This demonstrates, in a startling manner, the drain upon the forests caused by the pulp industry.

Owing to a lack of interest among the rank and file of the members and villagers, Friendship Council's Fouth of July committee has decided to abandon the plan for a celebration. PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The 'Plains-Berkeley game at Berkeley Heights Saturday afternoon, ended in the last half of the fifth inning by the 'Plains team leaving the field, after a dispute over a decision of the umpire. The umpire, who acknowledged he knew but little about the rules of the game, offered to change his decision admitting he was wrong but the Berkeley team refused to stand for it. The dispute arose over a double play. An infield fly hit caught a runner at second before he could get back to the bag. The umpire called him safe, claiming the man had not been touched with the ball. At the time the 'Plains team had the game well in hand, leading by the score of 5 to 2.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

George Primrose and his big minstrel company, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre for a special engagement Friday night, will present the best real minstrel performance this country has ever enjoyed, by the largest company of humorists, comedians, vocalists, dancers and musicians ever toured, with every scene, act and song true to southern flavor. The old-time jubilee melodies, refrains and dances that are ever popular with the public, are used, not only ingeniously from a musical standpoint, but are very cleverly intermingled with the story of different scenes picturing the South. The staging and costuming are noteworthy features of this production. Mr. Primrose has shown good judgment in surrounding himself with a host of well known comedians and vocalists. The stage settings for the first part are of great magnificence, the costuming throughout is costly and elegant. In addition to the large number of vocalists and comedians, a complete operatic orchestra of soloists are carried. Taking it in all, there seems to be no doubt but that George Primrose, after careful study has fully carried out all that he claimed could be done with America's most popular form of amusement—minstrelsy.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of Dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Canthrarides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Vigors.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

It is the original and only genuine scalp germicide manufactured.

DURATION OF LIFE.

STATISTICS SHOW THAT LONGEVITY IS INCREASING.

Interesting Facts Concerning Births and Mortality Are Brought Out by Compilers of Figures.

Vital statistics show that owing to modern sanitary reforms and the advancement of medical science, there is a prolongation of human life now in all civilized parts of the world. It has been noticed for a long time that there has been a marked increase of longevity in the United States, and now the latest statistics prove that in foreign countries a similar condition prevails.

Sweden leads the world in low death rate. The Swedes have kept vital statistics for more than 150 years. No other country has such ancient records. It is said that all countries can estimate the improvement in the death rate for 10, 15 or 20 years, but in Sweden the average mortality of children under 10 years of age for the 10 years previous to 1760 was 53.5 per 1,000, and this percentage has been decreased gradually ever since, until it is now only 26.9 per 1,000, or the lowest in the world.

There has been also a decrease in the death rate of all ages in Sweden. The statistics show the rate for persons between 10 and 20 years of age has fallen from 6.4 per 1,000 in 1760 to 4.3; for persons between 30 and 40 years of age it has dropped from 11.5 to 7.1 per 1,000, and for persons between 40 and 50 years of age from 16.5 to 9.5. The death rate as well as the rate of illiteracy of the two countries on the Scandinavian peninsula is the lowest to be found anywhere in the world.

The actuaries of insurance companies find a decided prolongation of human life in Holland. There the average life of man has increased from 35 to 57 years, and women from 39 to 61 years, while the lowest death rate among women is from 20 to 35 years of age. In Great Britain and Ireland, says the report, there has been an improvement of about 5 per cent., according to tables kept for 30 years.

Notwithstanding the great immigration from Germany, which disturbs the calculations of the statisticians, it is found that the average duration of life in the empire is consderably greater than it was 30 years ago. In Hungary, municipal statistics for Buda-Pesth and several other cities show a decrease of 20 per cent. in the average death rate, particularly among children.

A Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald, who has been investigating these vital statistics, finds that there is no way of ascertaining with accuracy the birth rate among the people of the United States, although such a record is scrupulously kept in the cities of Europe. In most American cities it is true that much attention has not been paid to this subject. Nevertheless, health authorities are taking hold of it at the request of statistical associations, and the defect in regard to birth rates will probably soon be remedied.

In New York and Washington there is a birth rate given, as in Boston. In Washington the birth rate per 1,000 is 19.8, death rate, 19.2; in New York, birth rate 28.9; death rate 22.6; in Boston, birth rate, 26.5, death rate 18.4.

The highest birth rate in the world is at Cairo, Buenos Ayres being second; then come the great manufacturing cities of England. The lowest birth rates are reported from Calcutta, Brussels and Paris.

WAY TO MANAGE WILLIE.

"Don't," Said His Mother, and at Once He Posed for His Picture.

With a joyous smile the photographer bowed his customers out, relates the New York Sun.

"Come again," he urged.

"Thank you!" humbly murmured the father of little Willie, who had just been taken.

Father's presence had been dispensed with during that operation on the ground that he was too upsetting. Still he had been there the first five minutes of the attempt, and he was decidedly skeptical of the photographer's really pining to repeat the experiment.

But he was grateful for the blandness of the farewell and turned a relieved countenance toward his wife. She seemed singularly calm after what she must have been through.

"Do you think he got him?" he whispered, indicating Willie.

"Oh, yes," nonchalantly. "Awfully cunning pose, too. He was holding a tin steamboat."

"How in the world did you do it?"

"Oh," with an easy smile, "Willie happened to pick up the steamboat himself, and the photographer said to me: 'You couldn't make him hold that, could you?' and I said: 'Certainly! Do you want him to hold it?' and he said he did. So I turned to Willie and I said: 'Why, Willie, don't you know you mustn't have that steamboat!'"

"Well?" inquired Willie's father.

"Why," remarked his wife, "of course Willie hung on to the steamboat like grim death."

Poor Father!

DISEASE IS LURKING IN ICE CREAM CANS.

State Inspector Tells of the Filth He Has Found in Many Factories.

Trenton, N. J., June 25.—Chief Inspector of Foods and Drugs Geo. W. McGuire has been on a round of the State looking into the conditions under which ice cream is made, and he is out with a warning to people to beware where they buy their cream.

He and his deputies have visited places in Trenton, Newark, Jersey City and Camden, and a more thorough inspection in these cities will be completed before action is taken by the State Board of Health, under whose control Mr. McGuire works. Speaking of what he has found, Mr. McGuire says:

"My report will be ready soon, and it will be a voluminous one. The bad sanitary conditions of some of the ice cream factories demand drastic measures. Some of the floors are dirty, and even filthy, in several instances piles of old rope and junk being found near the ice cream freezers. The tins and ice cream receptacles are just simply rinsed in cold water, and are then ready for use again.

"The whole surroundings of some places are in direct violation of the health code. The proprietors and employes seem to have no regard for cleanliness, and to be bent only on getting the stuff ready for the market. We have fully determined to have this evil corrected in this State."

HIS REPORT MAY CREATE A GREAT LAKE IN JERSEY.

Trenton, June 25.—Under the direction of the New ersey Board of Geological Survey, Engineer C. C. Vermeule has submitted a report to Governor Stokes which, if adopted, will change the map of Northern New Jersey by creating a lake 120 miles in area near Paterson, in order to store the waters of the Upper Passaic river. The project is to sell the water outside of New Jersey, particularly in Staten Island and New York State. The plan embraces the changing of the main line of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, a relocation of the road, the modification of the line of the Whippany Railroad across the Troy Meadows, and teh bandonment of the Greenwood branch of the Erie road between Little Falls and Pompton. A number of highways would also be relocated.

The cost of the plan would be $7,000,000. The sale of water would net a handsome profit to the State and preserve the Passaic river, which is running dry below Paterson.

Mrs. Elias H. Bird, of Elm place, left today for Flemington to spend a week with relatives. Her sister, Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, has been at the same place for the past week.

JERSEY IS CLAIMING A CIRCUIT JUDGESHIP.

Naming of Lanning as Acheson's Successor Would Open Way for Promotions.

Trenton, N. J., June 25.—Settlement of the political situation in Cumberland county, where there are two friendly claimants for the Common Pleas bench, is bound up in the claims of New Jersey for the elevation of one of its lawyers to the United States Circuit Court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Marcus W. Acheson.

New Jersey's claims will be presented vigorously by United States Senators Dryden and Kean. They will show that New Jersey, one of the most important districts in the Third Circuit, has never had a Circuit Judge; that Pennsylvania has always had two of the Circuit Judges, while Delaware, the third State in this circuit, has the remaining Judge.

They will further argue that the Circuit Judges have not comes to New Jersey to do the work of their office, but have placed the burden on the District Court Judge.

United States District Judge William M. Lanning, the senior District Judge in New Jersey, is likely to be the man urged by the politicians in this State for elevation to the Circuit Court bench.

Already North Jersey is talking of elevating United States Attorney John B. Vreeland to the bench if Judge Lanning gets the higher judicial honors.

The promotion of Vreeland, leaving vacant the United States District Attorneyship, would open a way for clearing up the Cumberland county difficulty.

Walter H. Bacon, Assistant United States Attorney, is the choice of a faction in Cumberland county for Common Pleas Judge to succeed Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, recently advanced to the Supreme Court bench. Another faction in Cumberland county would rather have Prosecutor Fithian made Judge. Between these two factions Governor Stokes hesitates. He is the firm friend of Bacon, and landed him in the Assistant United States Attorneyship in this district.

Now the Governor could cast his influence for the appointment of Bacon to the United States Attorneyship in this district, and thus probably take him out of the rivalry for the Common Pleas bench in Cumberland. That would give the chance of giving Fithian the Judgeship and of taking care of some other Cumberland county man in the office of Prosecutor.

All of these things hinge upon the success the New Jersey United States Senators have in getting the State's claims to one of the Circuit Court Judgeships recognized by President Roosevelt.

WIFE IS WORTH FULL PRICE, COURT DECIDES.

Judgment Given Against Man Who Refused to Meet Matrimonial Agency's Rate.

Trenton, N. J., June 25.—Judgment has been given here in favor of a Philadelphia matrimonial agency seeking to collect a fee for getting a man a wife. The judgment is for $60.90, and the successful claimant is Mrs. Spath, who conducts a matrimonial agency in North Broad street, Philadelphia. George Hoffman, a brewmaster, of this city, who married a desirable widow on the list of Mrs. Spath, is the loser in the litigation.

During the course of the trial it came out that Hoffman answered Mrs. Spath's advertisement, and was told that she knew a desirable widow, who wanted to be married. He paid a fee of $5, and was taken into an adjoining room and introduced to the present Mrs. Hoffman. They were shortly afterward married in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Hoffman, who owns a house in Mifflin street, sold her household effects, rented her home, and came to this city. Before they left for Trenton Mrs. Spath called upon the Hoffmans and claimed her fee for making the match.

The Hoffmans say she demanded $100. They agreed to pay her that amount, and gave a promissory note. Hoffman paid $40 on the note, and then declined to pay any more. Suit was then brought against him here to collect the difference, and Judge McPherson gave judgment for Mrs. Spath.

The Hoffmans say they have done well by the woman who introduced them, and Mr. Hoffman declines to state why, after agreeing to pay $100 for his wife, he now wants to keep her for less than half price. They say that the case will be appealed to the Supreme Court, and thence, if things go against them, into the Court of Errors and Appeals.

New Order for Rural Mail.

Trenton, June 25.—Postmaster Alexander C. Yard has sent out notices of a new postal regulation concerning the rural free delivery service, that all rural mail boxes after July 1 must be equipped with a signal, which can be fixed to designate that there is mail in the box to collect. The rural mail carriers after July 1 will not be required to examine any boxes for mail unless such a signal is set. The order has resulted in some confusion as to what kind of signal is meant. Small flags will probably be used.

MARRIED IN COURT HOUSE JUST FOR FUN OF IT.

Couple Had Been Inspecting Building, When Hint of Wedding Hurried Ceremony.

All court business was suspended yesterday at Mineola, L. I., long enough to permit County Judge Jackson to marry a couple that had been visiting the building.

Town Clerk Monroe Wood acted as best man, and George Stoddard, one of the lawyers who was in the court-room at the time, was master of ceremonies. The court interpreter and a deputy sheriff acted as witnesses.

The bride gave her name as Mary Ikes, of New Hyde Park. She said her father was a farmer of that place. The bridegroom said he was Michael Carino.

The couple had been engaged, but the marriage was not to have taken place for some time. They were looking around in the court-house yesterday, and when they entered the court-room they inquired of Mr. Wood what kind of business was transacted there. He told them and added, "You can also get married here."

The marriage proposition seemed to interest them both. Carino had a quiet talk with the girl, and then asked Wood if he would be his best man. Wood said he would and the marriage was the result.

Irving Dodge, of Orange, visited his brother, Orra Dodge, of East Front street, yesterday.

FORMER POLICY KING NOW A STREET SWEEPER.

Once Worth $250,000 George Loefftler Nor Works for $1.50 a Day.

Hoboken, June 25.—Geo. Loefftler, the former well-known policy king of this place, and at one time reported to be worth a quarter of a million dollars, is now earning his living as a member of Commissioner Haggerty's street sweeping brigade at $1.50 per day. The once successful policy operator could now be living in ease and luxury if it were not for the use of strong drink, against which he now talks so vehemently. As a street sweeper he is one of the most successful who ever wielded the stubby broom for a living in this city. He is a conscientious worker and very fond of children. Every day he goes to work he carries a pouch which is hung over his shoulder in a strap. It looks like a canteen, but Loefftler has no more use for the canteen contents. He is now a total abstainer. The pouch is filled with candy and the only time he stops sweeping is when he puts his hand in the bag to give a child a piece of candy and when he stops to eat his lunch. And the candy is the secret that keeps his street clean. Bad boys may upset ash cans on George Loefftler's territory has got to reckon with the rest of the youngsters in that district. Children in the uptown streets where Loefftler sweeps can be seen picking up papers as they walk along the streets. They even go as far as to ask their mothers, and their mothers' servants, to be careful in setting out the ash cans lest they spill the contents. Loefftler is so intent on his work that he even refuses to take an hour for dinner. He eats his lunch at the Second Police Station and seldom takes over fifteen minutes.

OCEAN GROVE SERVICES.

Bishops FitzGerald and Wilson Assist in Season's Opening.

Ocean Grove, June 25.—Two bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church were present yesterday at the opening services of the season in the opening servies of the season in the Auditorium. The day's worship began in the Janes Tabernacle at 9 a. m., when a devotional committee, led by Bishop James N. FitzGerald, of St. Louis, conducted a holiness meeting. There was a large attendance.

Nearly five thousand persons enjoyed the morning preaching service in the Auditorium. Bishop FitzGerald presided. There were about twenty ministers on the platform. The choir was led by Tali Esen Morgan. The sermon was preached by Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., from the text, "Who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross."

The three departments of the summer Sunday school held a union service yesterday afternoon in the Auditorium. Next Sabbath they will meet in the Tabenacle, Temple and Auditorium.

There was a large attendance at the surf meeting, held at 6 p. m. on the beach front at Ocean Pathway, with the Rev. A. E. Ballard in charge. Last evening a platform meeting was held in the Auditorium. Brief addresses were made by Bishops Wilson and FitzGerald and other ministers.

SOME MODERN BUCCANEERS

Scheme for Revolution in Panama That Was a Purely Business Enterprise.

I happen to know of two Americans of position who had inside information of the conditions in Panama, and who sat in a room in the New Willard in Washington, one night in the fall of 1903, consummating plans for putting through the revolution, obtaining a charter from the new republic, and forming a company of capitalists, writes Capt. Lloyd Buchanan, in Lippincott's Magazine. Mr. Pierpont Morgan was to be asked to organize the company. The total cost of the revolution was to be under $150,000, and all the equipment needed in addition to what the junta could supply was a pair of moderately fast small steamers, chartered, four six-inch guns, with ammunition, and 50 Krag rifles. The steamers and weapons were to be handled by Americans and Englishmen who had no special calling on earth. I have every reason to believe that, if Mr. Roosevelt had failed to act as he did, and any private concern had taken up the construction of the canal, a revolution would have gone off with an accuracy and style that has never been surpassed. But, unfortunately for art, Mr. Roosevelt did act.

South America, Mexico and the West Indies are threaded everywhere by the trails of these adventurers of life. In Curacoa you can find hatching any sort of scheme you choose—from a plan to smuggle a couple of bolts of silk and a case of champagne into Venezuela, to a plot to overthrow a republic and putting a new dictator in its capital. I met there in the same day a ruined American gambler, begging his passage back to the states, and the sons of Guzman Blanco, the banished ex-president of Venezuela. The former stopped me opposite a Dutch cigar store and told me with the most pointed frankness what he wanted, but the latter, over their cigarettes and long iced glasses, mourned evasively of exile and confiscated estates in general. It is, then, not for me to say why they were frizzling on that sun-baked islet within 50 miles of the Venezuelan coast, when they might as well have been in the dear Paris that they know and love so well. But probably they knew—and Castro. I think I did, too.

HONOLULU POULTRY EXPERT

Claims to Be Able to Predetermine the Sex and Fertility of an Egg.

C. W. Weatherwax, a chicken fancier of Honolulu, claims he has discovered a process whereby he can tell the sex of an egg and whether it will be fertile or not. Weatherwax has been experimenting with eggs since 1894 and is now in a position to give the result of his investigations to the world. He has used thousands of eggs in his experiments and kept two 50-egg incubators going all the time.

He claims to be able to tell whether the produce of an egg will be a rooster or a hen, and if the chick has a fair chance to reach maturity.

"I am willing to make a public test with 100 eggs," said Weatherwax, "in order to prove my assertions. The eggs may be marked according to my prediction with an indelible pencil before being put in the incubator. In nine cases out of ten it will be found that I am right."

Mr. Weatherwax claims that he is the first white man to possess this remarkable knowledge. Poultry papers are unanimous in declaring that there is no way of telling a fertile egg before putting it in the incubator. They maintain that even if the egg be broken, the germ cannot be seen with the naked eye.

Weatherwax undertakes to teach the whole thing in five minutes. He declares that no mechanical devices or chemicals are used.

AWFUL DISEASE ON GUAM.

Gangrosa, Which Destroys Upper Part of Victim's Face, Worse Than Leprosy.

Gangrosa, a tropical disease more repulsive than leprosy, has become so prevalent on the island of Guam that Lieut. McNamee, U. S. N., acting governor of the island, has recommended the establishment of a hospital for the isolation of the disease, which is believed to be highly contagious. Admiral Rixey, surgeon general of the navy, has approved the recommendation and it is probable that a $5,000 hospital will be erected immediately near the leper hospital on the island.

Lieut. McNamee says the disease destroys the upper part of the face by slow ulceration and is more horrible, both to the victim and to his companions, than leprosy. As 400 cases have developed its isolation is imperative.

Naval surgeons have investigated the disease in parts of South America and the West Indies, and their reports indicate that there can be little doubt that it is a distinct malady, and one which does not yield to the treatment given tuberculosis, leprosy and other diseases common to tropical countries. Cases of gangrosa have been treated in New York which are believed to have come from Brazil and Panama.

When News Reached Honolulu.

The cable as it comes here is abbreviated. For example the name of John J. Smith comes as "jjsmith." It was this custom that led a local paper one day to announce that "Mrs. Jalogan had been elected president of the Red Cross Society." Mrs. J. A. Logan is still the president.—Hawaiian Star.

It was midnight by the mission clock. Still he lingered. She had thrown out hints by the dozen, but he refused to notice them. She grew desperate.

He felt flattered.

"I am glad to hear it," he chuckled. "Now what is it about me that reminds you of President Roosevelt?"

"Why, you are a 'big stick.'"

Without another word he called for his coat and cane and departed.—Chicago Daily News.

MIDDLESEX MEN TO JOIN COLBY COLUMN

OPPONENTS OF MACHINE FORM A PERMANENT ORGANIZANION.

New Brunswick, June 24.—The revolt against "Boss 'Dory'" Strong and the movement for the spread of the "new idea in politics" throughout Middlesex received an additional impetus Thursday night, when the Independent Republican League, which is supporting Colonel Alexander R. Fordyce, Jr., for State Senator, effected a permanent organization. Officers were elected, committees appointed, a declaration of principles adopted, together with an address to the public, and plans were considered for active and aggressive campaign work.

It was decided to invite Senator Everett Colby, of Essex county, and his associates, Mayor Mark M. Fagan and George L. Record, of Jersey City, and Judge William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, to address a meeting in this city, to be held on a date to suit the speakers' convenience, early in July, and another meeting in Perth Amboy, at about the same time.

George J. Corey presided over the meeting, which was harmonious and enthusiastic. C. A. Prickett, J. A. Bodine, George W. Eggert, G. M. Babbage and C. H. Bonney were named as a committee on nomination of permanent officers of the league, and the committee retired, while the quarter of an hour consumed by the committee's deliberations was filled in by remarks reporting the progress of the movement.

The nominating committee recommended the election of George J. Corey, of Stelton, for president; Harry Conard, of Perth Amboy, for vice president; W. B. Prickitt, of New Brunswick, for secretary, and John A. Bodine, of North Brunswick, for treasurer. The committee's report was adopted, and all the officers named were elected by unanimous vote.

The officers, together with James A. Edgar, C. A. Prickitt, C. H. Bonney, G. M. Babbage and David McCallum, form a temporary executive committee, to have charge of such work as drafting a constitution, arranging for both private and public meetings, the work of extending the organization in the wards and townships for permanent headquarters, etc.

The finance committee consists of C. A. Bloomfield, James A. Edgar and George W. Eggert, and the press committee is J. Logan Clevenger, G. M. Babbage and W. B. Prickitt.

Street Commissioner and Mrs. A. J. Gavett have returned from Poughkeepsie, where they witnessed the collegiate boat races. Their son, Leonard W. Gavett, rowed No. 5 in the Cornell 'Varsity crew.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Azienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Azienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Azienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

THE SPENDERS

A TALE OF THE THIRD GENERATION

By HARRY LEON WILSON

Copyright, by Lothrop Publishing Company.

When he awoke the cold light of the morning was stealing in. He was painfully cramped, and chilled from the open window. From outside came the loud chattering of sparrows, and far away he could hear wagons as they rattled across a street of Belgian blocks from asphalt to asphalt. The light had been late in coming, and he could see a sullen gray sky, full of darker clouds.

Above the chiffonier he could see the ancient sampler.

"La Nuit Porte Conseil." It was true.

In the cold, pitiless light of the morning a sudden sickness of doubting seized him. She would awake and reproach him bitterly for coercing her. She had been right, the night before—it was madness. They had talked afterward so feverishly, as if to forget their situation. Now she would face it coldly after the sleep.

"La Nuit Porte Conseil." Had he not been a fool? And he loved her so. He would have her anyway—no matter what she said, now.

She stirred, and her wide-open eyes were staring up at him—staring with hurt, troubled wonder. The amazement in them grew—she could not understand.

He stopped breathing. His embrace of her relaxed.

And then he saw remembrance—recognition—welcome—and there blazed into her eyes such a look of whole love as makes men thrill to all good; such a look as makes them know they are men, and dare all great deeds to show it. Like a sunrise, it flooded her face with dear, wondrous beauties—and still she looked, silent, motionless—in an ecstasy of pure realization. Then her arms closed about his neck with a swift little rushing, and he—still half-doubting, still curious—felt himself strained to her. Still more closely she clung, putting out with her intensity all his misgiving.

She sought his lips with her own—eager, pressing.

"Kiss me—kiss me—kiss me! Oh, it's all true—all true! My best-beloved dream has come all true! I have rested so in your arms. I never knew rest before. I can't remember when I haven't awakened to doubt, and worry, and heart-sickness. And now it's peace—dear, dear, dearest, dear, for ever and ever and ever."

They sat up.

"Now we shall go—get me away quickly."

It was nearly seven. Outside the sky was still all gloom.

In the rush of her reassurance he had forgotten his arm. It hung limp from his shoulder.

"It was cramped."

"And you didn't move it?"

They beat it and kneaded it gayly together, until the fingers were full of the rushing blood and able again to close warmly over her own little hand.

"Now go, and let me get ready. I won't be long."

He went below to the library, and in the dim gray light picked up a book, "The Delights of Delicate Eating." He tried another, "101 Sandwiches." The next was "Famous Epicures of the Seventeenth Century." On the floor was her diary. He placed it on the table. He heard her call him from the stairs.

"Bring me up that ring from the table, please!"

He went up and handed it to her through the narrowly opened door.

As he went down the stairs he heard the bell ring somewhere below, and went to the door.

"Baggage!"

The two trunks were down and out.

"They're to go on this car, attached to the Chicago express." He wrote the directions on one of his cards and paid the man.

At 7:30 the bell rang again. The cabman was there.

"Seven-thirty, gent!"

"Avice!"

"I'm coming. And there are two bags I wish you'd get from my room." He let her pass him and went up for them.

She went into the library and, taking up the diary, tore out a sheet, marked heavily upon it with a pencil around the passage she had read the evening before, and sealed it in an envelope. She addressed it to her father and laid it, with a paper weight on it, upon "The Delights of Delicate Eating," where he would be sure to find it.

The book itself she placed on the wood laid ready in the grate to light, touched a match to the crumpled paper underneath and put up the blower. She stood waiting to see that the fire would burn.

Over the mantel from its yellow canvas looked above her head the humorously benignant eyes of old Annekje Van Schoule, who had once removed from Maspeth Kill on Long Island to New Haarlem on the Island of Manhattan, and carried there, against her father's will, the yellow-haired girl he had loved. His face now seemed to be pretending unconsciousness of the rashly acted scenes he had witnessed—lest, if he betrayed his consciousness, he should be forced, in spite of himself, to disclose his approval—a thing not fitting for an elderly, dignified Dutch burgher to do.

"Avice!"

"Coming!"

She took up a little package she had brought with her and went out to meet him.

"There's one errand to do," she said, as they entered the carriage, "but it's on our way. Have him go up Madison avenue and deliver this."

She showed him the package, addressed: "Mr. Rulon Shepler, Personal."

"And this," she said, giving him an unsealed note. "Read it, please!"

He read:

"Dear Rulon Shepler: I am sure you know women too well to have thought I loved you as a wife should love her husband. And I know your bigness too well to believe you will feel harshly toward me for deciding that I could not marry you. I could of course consistently attribute my change to cohsideration for you. I should have been very little comfort to you. If I should tell you just the course I had mapped out for myself—just what latitude I proposed to claim—I am certain you would agree with me that I have done you an inestimable favor.

"Yet I have not changed because I do not love you, but because I do love some one else with all my heart; so that I claim no credit except for an entirely consistent selfishness. But do try to believe, at the same time, that my own selfishness has been a kindness to you. I send you a package with this hasty letter, and beg you to believe that I shall remain—and am now for the first time, sincerely yours,

"AVICE MILBREY BINES.

"P. S.—I should have preferred to wait and acquaint you with my change of intention before marrying, but my husband's plans were made and he would not let me delay."

He sealed the envelope, placed it securely under the cord that bound the package, and their driver delivered it to the man who opened Shepler's door.

As their train emerged from the cut at Spuyten Duyvil and sped to the north along the Hudson, the sun blazed forth.

"There, boy—I knew the sun must shine to-day."

They had finished their breakfast. One-half of the pink roses were on the table, and one from the other half was in her hair.

"I ordered the sun turned on at just this point," replied her husband, with a large air. "I wanted you to see the last of that town under a cloud, so you might not be homesick so soon."

"You don't know me. You don't know what a good wife I shall be."

"It takes nerve to reach up for a strange support and then kick your environment out from under you—as Doctor von Herzlich would have said if he'd happened to think of it."

"But you shall see how I'll help you with your work; I was capable of it all the time."

"But I had to make you. I had to pick you up just as I did that first time, and again down in the mine—and you were frightened because you knew this time I wouldn't let you go."

"Only half-afraid you wouldn't—the other half I was afraid you would. They got all mixed up—I don't know which was worse."

"Well, I admit I foozled my approach on that copper stock—but I won you—really my winnings in Wall street are pretty dazzling, after all, for a man who didn't know the ropes—there's a mirror directly back of you, Mrs. Bines, if you wish to look at them—with a pink rose over that kissy place just at their temple."

She turned and looked, pretending to be quite unimpressed.

"I always was capable of it, I tell you—boy!"

"What hurt me worst that night, it showed you could love some one—you did have a heart—but you couldn't love me."

She did not seem to hear at first, nor to comprehend when she went back over his words. Then she stared at him in sudden amazement.

He saw his blunder and looked foolish.

"I see—thank you for saying what you did last night—and you didn't mind—you came to me anyway, in spite of that."

She arose, and would have gone around the table to him, but he met her with open arms.

"Oh, you boy! you do love me—you do!"

"I must buy you one of those nice, shiny black ear trumpets at the first stop. You can't have been hearing at all well. . . . See, sweetheart—out across the river. That's where our big west is, over that way—isn't it fresh and green and beautiful?—and how fast you're going to it—you and your husband. I believe it's going to be a good game . . . for us both . . . my love."

WHAT THEY SAY.

Perkins and Runyon.

Judge William N. Runyon has formally announced his candidacy for the Assembly. It has been known for some time that he would do so, and that it is a part of the program of the Colby faction of the Republican party in Union county this year. Just how important a bearing Runyon's action will have upon the chances of Randolph Perkins to succeed himself will depend to a degree upon whether nominations for the Assembly this fall are made by districts or by counties. If the courts should sustain the legislature's district act Perkins and Runyon will have to contest for the nomination in the same district which includes both Westfield and Plainfield. Runyon is admittedly a clean man, personally and politically, and is exceedingly popular. He has the right, too, to run for office. He is going to exercise the right. It is common in political contests to examine motives and records. No one suspects Runyon of wrong motives. No one accuses Perkins of having a bad record. Of course if the Plainfielder can convince the voters that Perkins has made a record which ought to be repudiated at the polls, Runyon will win. The habit of punishing men who do ill in politics is not as strong as it should be; but the custom of punishing men who have done well and denying them approval has not been generally adopted, either. The meeting of the Colby followers at Plainfield Tuesday evening was wildly enthusiastic. Conditions for which Randolph Perkins has never had a chance to be even partly responsible are the cause of the threatened revolt in the party. The experiences which Colby, Fagan and Record declare to have led them to revolt are experiences which ante-date the last legislature. Mr. Perkins political life is only as old as the beginning as that session. He is accountable only for what he there and then did. Upon his actions at Trenton last winter he must base his appeal for support this fall. Mr. Perkins' support here will be given largely upon the theory that the good of the state demands the recognition, encouragement and endorsement of good legislation. If the opposition should develop weightier considerations, and show facts which argue a different course, there are plenty of stalwart, independent Republicans in this town who sufficiently prefer the public good over personal position to help theim win their fight.—Westfield Standard.

The Sports of the Times says:

"The officials and members of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club deserve the thanks of all showgoers, exhibitors and the public for the distinct departure they have achieved in the matter of choice of location, architectural effect in grandstand construction, stabling facilities and attractive lay-out of grounds. Not in the history of modern horse shows here or elsewhere has there ever been an out-door fashionable function held under such delightful conditions upon grounds so nearly approaching the ideal. In the midst of dense woods a space has been cleared for a tan bark enclosure surrounding a grassy oval shaded on one side by tall trees, and on the other giving on to a closely clipped strip of greensward which swerves as a charming promenade. A spacious grandstand of unique design, flanked by two smaller stands containing select reservations, and so constructed as to admit of becoming embowered in a vinery a year or two hence, refreshment tents for committee members and their guests, etc., are features such as have never been thought necessary at any other show. As for the stabling and entrance lodge, they resemble in every particular what might be expected on a gentleman's private estate. In fact the whole appointments of the grounds are unique, and the affair must ever be remembered as the 'Cozy Show in the Grove.' When the woods are thinned out so as to admit free passage of every cooling zephyr that blows, and the flower beds and ornamental shrubs are all in place, as intended, the Plainfield show grounds will be the prettiest in America if not in the world. The 'show was a go' from the moment the bugler called the initial class of hunters into the arena on Thursday afternoon, June 7, and continued without friction right up to the closing hour when the championships were judged on Saturday evening, June 9."

The New York Herald says:

"Horsemen who attended the Plainfield Horse Show were unanimous in the opinion that the new grounds are the handsomest in the country."

The American Country Gentleman says:

"The Plainfield horse show grounds are simply grand. When the lawns and drives are completed it will be the finest open air show grounds in the country."

To Jump Bergen County Taxes.

Hackensack, June 24.—Compliments flew thick and fast Saturday morning when the assessors of Bergen county met in the Court Square Building to greet the newly appointed County Board of Taxation. President Peter G. Zabriskie's first instruction to the assessors was that they should raise their valuations 25 per cent. Many of the assessors said this was impossible for them, for they jumped valuations in their districts to the limit a year ago.

NEW COUNTY PLANNED IN NORTHERN JERSEY

PROPOSITION IS TO TAKE PARTS OF MORRIS, BERGEN AND PASSAIC.

Morristown, N. J., June 26.—A movement is on foot to create a new county in Jersey. It is planned to take Pequannoc township and Butler borough from Morris county; Hobokus and Franklin townships from Bergen county, and Pompton and Wayne townships from Passaic county, to form the new county. The county seat, it is proposed, shall be at Pompton Lakes.

This section lies along the Pequanoc river, from Butler down. Several prominent ment in each of these townships are behind the movement, and they expeet to introduce a bill in the next Legislature for the purpose of forming this new county.

For a long time dissatisfaction has been rife in Butler over the county question. It takes an entire day to travel to Morristown, the county seat of Morris, file a legal document and return. While the distance is not so great, the route by railroad is indirect. The same conditions exist in Oakland borough and Franklin and Hohokus townships in Bergen county.

An argument used against the proposition is that it would greatly increase the taxes in the section embraced in the proposed new county's lines; but this its advocates deny, stating that after the first five years the taxes would be less than they are at present.

There are many persons in the Butler and Oakland sections who think the present disadvantages of their geographical position could be remedied by simply changing the boundary lines of Morris and Bergen counties, putting that terrtitory in Passaic county. Butler has direct railroad connection with Paterson.

The two Bergen townships, while within a few minutes of Paterson, must claim Hackensack as the county seat. Many people are in favor of including West Milford township in the new county.

Baseball Language.

A captious eastern editor asks petulantly what the baseball writer of the Journal means by the following:

"Tinker led off for the Cubs and ozoned. Evers slammed a clean single to left, and went to third on King's solitaire to the same plate. Kling's purloined second. Pieffer sauntered on four wide ones, and the 'To Let' signs were pulled down from all the bases."

In our mind's eye we can picture this eastern editor as he is. Of course he wears whiskers, and they are probably red and cut Van Dyke. He parts his hair in the middle—if he has any hair—and wears big round glasses. He was the pet of the family and spent his early youth in some nice refined Boston nursery, and never, never played "one-old cat" in the alley with boys of his own age. He never climbed a telegraph pole to witness the home team "pedal the bags" for a winning game, and could not have experienced the triumphant joy of chasing a foul ball outside the fence which, when garnered, entitled him to a seat in the bleachers.

As the years of his adolescence passed the editor always kept at his work during the long sultry days of summer and never longed for a breath of fresh air, the blood-stirring sight of the big green diamond and the blessed privilege of "rooting" for the home team and hurling picturesque maledictions at the robber umpire. The editor was studious and carefully avoided sneaking out to the ball park on a Saturday afternoon and telling his confiding wife afterward that the reason she could not reach him at his office was because his telephone was out of order. Oh, no. Our captious brother editor was a model. The result is that he has allowed the world to go by him. He sits in isolated ignorance of the greatest American institution—baseball.

The baseball writer writes for those who understand his linguistic vagaries and revel in the seeming confusion of his complex phrasology. He is the journalistic free lance, who denies the right of precedent and rides roughshod over the stickler for literary finish. He knows his readers and they know him. When he says "Tinker led off for the clubs and ozoned," every ligitimate thirty-third degree "fan" grasps immediately the graphic picture thus painted.

Let the baseball writer alone. In his frenzied philology he contributes a vivid and refreshing contrast to the monotonous news pages and the wearing precision of the nice, round editorial sentences.—Kansas City Journal.

100 BRAVED STORM BUT SAW NO GAME

DYED-IN-THE-WOOD FANS ONLY WERE ON CRESCENT OVAL.

About 100 fans were disappointed by the washing away of the game at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon. That many enthusiasts had gathered, mostly in the grandstand, before the storm came, and were all set for the contest. Coming out, as they had, with all sorts of threats in the skies, they were naturally the dyed-in-the-wool kind of fans, and they were proportionately put out when the waterworks busted.

The players were practicing when the storm began. There were a few faint hopes that the affair might blow over, but when the man-behind-the-spigot dumped chunks of ice out with his cataract, the populace saw they were up against a cold deal and done again. To emphasize the fact that the fans were up against it, the P. S. C. made them go hom in a car running backwards. The motorman said he had to run it that way because thte front end was charged, but that was too transparent for the wise ones. It was simply part of the general scheme to play horse with the much-abused and long-suffering fanatic.

The crowd was not comforted by the announcement that Westfield had been taken on again for next Saturday.

"That Westfield bunch is a hoodoo," they complained bitterly; "next week they'll bring on an earthquake."

DUNELLEN PLAYED AFTER STORM AND WON

DEFEATS COLORED GIANTS IN HANDY STYLE THE SCORE BEING 7 TO 5.

Not hail stones as big as hen's eggs nor colored ball tossers can stop the winning streak of the husting Dunellen nine. Blest with a quick-draining field, they took the Westfield Colored Giants on for their scheduled game Saturday afternoon fifteen minutes after the storm, and beat them handily, 7 to 5.

Russell twirled for the home team, holding the slugging visitors down to five hits. Both teams played fast ball, in spite of the sloppy condition of things. The fielding feature of the game was a running catch of a foul fly by Brakeley, in the sixth inning. He had to do some tall sprinting to reach the ball.

MIXED HAIL STONES AND GOLF BALLS

STORM HAD NO TERRORS FOR COUNTY CLUB PLAYERS.

Notwithstanding that it was difficult at times to tell whether the player was driving hail stones or golf balls, there being but little difference in the size, a number of enthusiastic members played on the course of the Plainfield Country Club Saturday afternoon. The hail stones fell in torrents all over the course, pelting the players on the head and in the face, but this made no difference. Those who finished made good scores and thereby felt rewarded for their effort. The contestants were about half-way around the course when the storm was at its height and no shelter being near, they decided to continue.

There was the weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup. Stuart H. Patterson won first honors with a net score of 75, receiving three points. Frank O. Reinhart finished second with a net score of 77, while W. D. Riggs came in third with a score of 78. Considering the conditions under which this competition was held, the scores are remarkable. The best scores posted were as follows:

Stuart H. Patterson, 91, 16—75; Frank O. Reinhart, 75, plus 2—77; W. D. Riggs, 93, 15—78; Charles A. Stover, 89, 10—79; L. A. Chase, 89, 9—80; James P. Murray, 106, 12—94.

In the competition for the June cup, Stuart H. Patterson scored a win, being 1 up on bogie. Frank O. Reinhart was all even. The latter won a leg on the semi-scratch cup with a score of 75. W. Lester Glenney was the first player to win a leg on this cup and Dudley H. Barr was the second contestant to win a leg. At the end of the competition the twelve players making the lowest scores will play off for the cup.

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Charles B. Morse, Alex. Gilbert and Leon R. Thurlow were among those who braved the elements at the Park Golf Club on Saturday afternoon, but the conditions were such that they did not have the courage to complete the eighteen holes in competition for the President's and club trophies, hence no scores were posted. They, too, were about half finished when the hail storm broke over the city. It drove them to the home of Francis DeLacy Hyde, where they remained until it cleared. They then returned to the clubhouse.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The date for the annual excursion of the Park Avenue Baptist church and Sunday-school to Asbury Park is Thursday, July 19.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church has arranged a helpful programme for the meeting to be held on Friday afternoon.

Beginning next Sunday, for the first time in the history of Warren chapel, the Sunday-school session will be held from 9:45 to 10:45 in the morning.

Miss Marie Estelle Pulinger and Miss Iva Bertha Hadley were baptized at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night, by the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn.

Superintendent George E. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school, taught the review lesson at the Cranford Sunday-school yesterday afternoon.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Sharp, 521 East Second street. The offering will be for the Bible reader.

There will be communion and reception of members at the First M. E. church on Sunday morning. This will be the last communion service for the summer, and all members are requested to be present. The offering will be for the Methodist Hospital. Those entitled to membership from probation are Frank C. Pursell, Miss Annetta Beeching, Miss Florence Smalley and Miss Kathryn Sminck.

LIEUT. GOVERNOR RUNS SUNDAY TRAIN.

Despite the Fast He Is Foremost Layman, Conductor Braves Ministers' Threats of Arrest.

Wilmington, Del., June 25.—Despite the threats of Methodist ministers to arrest trainmen who operate Sunday passenger trains down the Delaware Railroad, no action was taken today. About 1,000 passengers were carried between various points on the division, which attests the popularity of Sunday trains since they were scheduled a few weeks ago.

An interesting coincidence in connection with the running of yesterday's trains is that Lieutenant Governor I. Thomas Parker was the conductor in charge of yesterday afternoon's southbound express from Wilmington. He has been a conductor for many years, and is one of the foremost laymen of the Wilmington Methodist conference. Although as a Methodist he is opposed to the Sunday trains, he took his regular run down the State and smilingly parried the remarks of some of his friends, who suggested that he might be the first trainman to be arrested by his Methodist brethren.

PLAN TROLLEY ACROSS STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

The preliminary trials of the cars for the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad's trolley line to Atlantic City from Camden have been made and they are said to be satisfactory. It is likely a car will be run today from Seventh and Benson streets, Camden, to Atlantic City. It is expected that the line will be opened for through travel to the shore on July 5.

The cars are the regulation size passenger coach and each car is equipped with a motor. Trains and not single cars will be run. At presen there are over 800 men working on the Bridge avenue trestle work. Where this trestle spans the freight tracks it is thirty-five feet above the street level. This wooden trestle will be supplanted by a steel viaduct in time. The trolley terminal will adjoin that of the steam road and will consist of three big umbrella-shaped sheds with eight tracks.

While at work on the foundation for a concrete pier, 580 feet west from Second street, and nearly the same distance from the terminal, workmen came across 12x12 yellow pine timbers and oak piling in a remarkable state of preservation. Investigation proved that it was part of the old ferry slip of the steamboat State Rights, which in years gone by carried all railroad passengers to the old Walnut street wharf, Philadelphia.

TALKING JUDGE LANNING FOR U. S. CIRCUIT BENCH.

United States District Court Judge William M. Lanning, of Trenton, is favorably mentioned for the circuit judgeship, made vacant by the death of Judge Marcus W. Acheson, of Pennsylvania.

The third circuit is made up of the districts of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, and there are three circuit court judges. Two of these are Judge Gray, of Delaware, and Judge Dallar, of Pennsylvania. The fact that New Jersey has no representation lends strength to the possibility of Judge Lanning being named.

United States Senators John Kean and John F. Dryden will undoubtedly press the claims of New Jersey for recognition on the bench.

Judge Lanning is now spending his vacation in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. John Auten, of the New Madison, will soon move to West Fifth street, in the house formerly occupied by Frank ones, who has gone to Halifax.

FREEDOM FOR $100,000 FRAUD AND SIX YEARS IN PRISON FOR A 25-CENT THEFT

New York, June 24.—Freedom for a man who pleaded guilty to selling merchandise valued at nearly $100,000 which did not belong to him and appropriating the money, and six years in prison for another who stole twenty-five cents were the portions meted out to two prisoners yesterday.

Henry Hirschman pleaded guilty to obtaining nearly $100,000 worth of gentlemen's furnishing goods on credit, disposing of them and investing the proceeds in real estate. Creditors appeared, however, and asked that sentence be suspended as the prisoner and his brother Joseph, accused with him, had made partial payment and promised to make complete satisfaction. Joseph probably will not be tried.

John Clark, who has no home, forty-five years old, and with a record of two terms in Sing Sing, was convicted of stealing a quarter which a barber was flipping in the air in front of his shop. "I had to do this or starve," said Clark. "Six years," said Magistrate Cowing.

Alton, Ill., June 25.—A heavy rainstorm, accompanied by a gale, swept over Alton yesterday and a deluge of small green frogs was precipitated.

The frogs fell so plentifully that thousands were hopping around the streets. Pedestrians and vehicles crushed them by hundreds so thickly were the streets trewn.

FORM BAR ASSOCIATION

Local Lawyers Organize Electing Former Senator Chas. A. Reed President.

TWENTY-FOUR JOIN

Society to Be Incorporated—Mr. Marsh Head of By-Laws Committee—Some Not Invited.

The Plainfield Bar Association, an organization of Plainfield lawyers, formed in 1894, met last night in the Grocers' Association rooms on North avenue, for the purpose of forming a permanent organization and increasing its membership by securing as many as possible of the younger members of the Bar who have been admitted since 1894 to join.

Craig A. Marsh called the meeting to order and on motion Charles A. Reed was elected temporary chairman and William M. Stillman secretary. The following permanent officers were then elected: President, Charles A. Reed; secretary, William M. Stillman; treasurer, William R. Codington; trustees, Nelson Runyon, John H. VanWinkle, Craig A. Marsh.

A list of the old members, most of whom were present at the meeting, is Charles A. Reed, William A. Coddington, John H. VanWinkle, James P. Powers, Harry C. Runyon, Chas. L. Moffett, William M. Stillman, Craig A. Marsh, W. R. Codington, J. B. Coward, S. S. Swackhamer and Nelson Runyon. Those of the younger members of the bar, who were elected members, were Isaac P. Runyon, Clarence L. Murphy, John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Asa F. Randolph, J. Henry Crane, George W. Bird, Reuben C. Knox, Louis Barton, William Newcorn, Rene C. VanMinden, Charles A. Dolliver and N. Douglas Drake.

The officers of the association were directed to take the proper steps to secure the incorporation of the society and it was provided that the members of the association shall consist of those whose names were signed to the original articles of the association of 1894 and in addition those members elected at last night's meeting and such other members of the Bar of this city, practicing in New Jersey, as may be elected by a majority vote of the Board of Trustees.

A committee, consisting of Craig A. Marsh, Clarence L. Murphy and W. A. Coddington, was appointed by President Reed to prepare a draft of the by-laws and present it at the next meeting for consideration. It is now desired on completion of the organization to secure for its membership every member of the local bar and hopes are expressed that the association can and will do much good both for its members and the people of Plainfield. The meeting adjourned at the call of the chair.

As a result of last night's action on the part of the lawyers, the movement started by W. S. Angleman, Francis J. Blatz and V. W. Nash, Jr., to form a Plainfield Bar Association, is defeated. It was the intention of certain lawyers to hold a meeting in the district court after todays' session to form a local association, and in a large measure a plan of action had been decided upon. Many of the legal lights who expected to join the organization to be formed today, identified themselves with the old organization which met last night, and it is not likely that a second association will be formed.

These lawyers were not present at the meeting: Winfield S. Angleman, Carlos T. Gallup, Frederick J. Huff, V. W. Nash, Jr., John P. Owens, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., Judge William N. Runyon, Francis J. Blatz, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., L. A. Clement and Charles J. McNabb. Most of them said they were not invited.

Slow Progress on New Bridge.

Very slow progress is being made on the new West End avenue bridge for the reason that the workmen are inexperienced in construction of the kind called for by the plans. The bridge is to be of concrete entirely and it is the first of the kind to be erected here. The contract specifies that it must be completed within two months, but this will hardly be done, owing to the fact that bad weather combined with inexperience will delay the work.

Mrs. S. A. Ginna Entertains.

Mrs. S. A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue, entertained the family of the Children's Home on her beautiful lawn Friday afternoon. She was assisted by Daniel F. Ginna, who took the children out for an automobile ride. Games were played and ice cream and cake were served. As the children started for home each one was presented with a box of candy.

WARD ORGANIZATION OF COLBYITES NEXT WEEK

MEETING ARRANGED AT CONFERENCE OF INDEPENDENTS LAST NIGHT.

Independent Republicans from all the wards met with Judge Runyon last night to arrange the meeting for the organization of ward branches of the Equal Taxation League. The date and place of the meeting were not definitely fixed, but all the other details were decided.

All the wards will meet at one time and Reform Hall will probably be the place, and Thursday night of next week the time, of the meeting. Judge Runyon was unable to see Capt. W. C. Smith, who has the renting of the hall in charge, up to late noon today, so that the place of meeting could not be definitely announced.

No speeches of a set or formal character will be made at the gathering. Business will mark it from first to last. After the adoption of the constitution, officers will be elected.

Enrollment cards have been distributed throughout the city, to draw as large a charter membership together as possible. The list is expected to be large, although only a comparatively small proportion of those who are in sympathy with the league will be looked for amony the ranks of the active workers.

RUNAWAY HORSE CRASHES INTO AN AUTOMOBILE.

No One Is Hurt But Occupants of Auto Are Badly Frightened.

A horse belonging to Frank Herbst, of Scotch Plains, took fright on East Front street, this morning, and bolted at top speed. It narrowly missed striking several carriages and in front of Warnock's bakery collided with an auto belonging to Mrs. Barclay, of Central avenue, in which she and her daughter were seated. The machine was badly scratched and the occupants thoroughly frightened, otherwise there was no damage.

The runaway continued on and in froet of Rowley's drug store struck another rig and overturned the spring wagon it was hauling. In its efforts to get away, the animal stepped on a bicycle, smashing the front wheel, and the pulled loose with what was left of the harness. The horse was caught at Madison avenue, uninjured save for a few cuts.

Disabled Engine Delays Express.

Engine No. 564, drawing the Scranton express, eastbound, due here at 9:59, broke down at the North Avenue station, this morning, a damaged valve rendering it helpless. The train was held here until the arrival of the Philadelphia express, a few minutes later, and the two trains were combined and taken into Jersey City by the Reading engine.

Jenkins Escapes Gallows.

Adam Jenkins, a negro, who shot and killed his wife in Jersey City, January 19, after a quarrel about money she had saved, was allowed yesterday to plead non vult before Judge John A. Blair, in the Hudson Country Over and Terminer Court. He will be sentenced Thursday. The maximum penalty for the plea is thirty years' imprisonment.

RUNNING FOR COALER, HE DIDN'T SEE DEADLY FLYER

M'KINNON ON HIS WAY HOME FROM WORK WHEN KILLED AT TANKS.

The remains of John McKinnon, the young machinist who was killed by a Philadelphia & Reading flyer at Greenbrook tanks Saturday afternoon, were shipped to his home in Bethlehem yesterday.

Walter McKinnon, brother of the young man, in his statement to the county authorities, says that his brother, himself and a third man were trying to catch a freight train to ride to Bethlehem, to visit their family. They went to the tanks from this city, because the freights stop at Greenbrook, making it easier to board them. John started the track for a coal train that was taking water, and in his eagerness to board it he did not see the approaching flyer. The fast train struck him squarely, and he was badly mangled beneath the wheels.

The young man was employed at the Pond shop, but he had been here only about five weeks and was not well known locally.

DIME SAVINGS TO BUY BUILDING FOR HOME

ENTIRE STRUCTURE TO BE USED BY BANKING INSTITUTION.

Extensive improvements to its property have been decided upon by the directors of the Dime Savings Institution and A. L. C. Marsh, the architect, has been engaged to draft the plans. The improvements will be made with a view to securing the additional room needed and obtaining more light as well as making the building one modern in every respect. When completed it will be similar to the Merchants' National Bank, of Newark. The property is owned by the estate of the late J. Frank Hubbard, but it is the intention of the Dime Savings Institution to acquire it by purchase before making the changes.

The changes will necessitate the removal of G. Thorn, the photographer, who occupies the third floor and the Asbestos Club, occupying the second floor. The stairway leading to the two upper floors will be abolished and a handsome front with the main entrance in the centre will be provided for. Just inside will be a spacious lobby and then behind that will be left plenty of room for those having business at the bank. New furnishings will be installed. The idea in doing away with the two upper floors is to obtain more light and it is proposed to put in a large skylight overhead. During the past few years this institution has had a steady, substantial growth in business and to meet the increase, as well as to be up-to-date, the directors wisely decided to make the extensive alterations. These improvements are right in line with those made by the other local banking institutions, The First and City National Bank and The Plainfield Trust Company.

A BIG PARADE ASSURED.

Minstrel Primrose Completing Arrangements for Tomorrow.

Minstrel George Primrose, whose troupe has been rounding into shape at the New Plainfield theatre, turned the stage over to the pupils of St. Mary's Parochial school today for their final rehearsals, and is devoting his time to perfecting plans for the big street parade which he will give Thursday night. Every member of his company will take part and the affair will be conducted on a much more elaborate scale than anything of the kind ever given in the city. Several of the local officials and newspapermen have been invited to participate and Manager Counihan has been placed in charge of the fireworks end. The latter declares the line of march will be "one blaze of glory."

While rehearsals are in progress, Mr. Primrose commutes regularly between Plainfield and his home in Mount Vernon. It makes a long day for him but as he remarked last night, "The harder I work, the more I like the business."

Progress at the Postoffice.

The workmen are making much progress with the improvements at the postoffice. The partition wall separating the present office from the corner store of the Babcock building, which is to be occupied, has been removed and other improvements are also being pushed rapidly. The main entrance to the office will be on the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street, which will be even more convenient for the boroughites who travel Madison avenue and Duer street.

FORGERY CHARGE UPHELD

G. Elston Lowrie Convicted at Paterson on Complaint of D. W. Littell.

JURY OUT AN HOUR

While Twelve Men Are Deliberating Prisoner is Rearrested On a Similar Charge—More Pending.

Before Justice Scott in the Court of Quarter Sessions at Paterson, yesterday, a jury convicted G. Elston Lowrie, a former well known Dunellen and Plainfield resident, on a charge of forgery preferred by D. W. Littell, of this city. The twelve men remained out less than an hour and while they were deliberating, the defendant was rearrested on a similar charged preferred by the same complainant. It is said there are many more counts pending and that the prisoner will have to answer them all before prosecution ceases.

Mr. Littell has been compiling a history of the State Exempt Firemen's Association and last year engaged Lowrie, who formerly edited the Dunellen Call, to do some canvassing for him. The complaint alleges that on numerous occasions, Lowrie accepted checks from subscribers to the book, all of which were made payable to Littell. These it is said, he endorsed and had merchants wherever he happened to be cash them. It was not until a short time ago that Littell learned of the transactions and the accused man was arrested in Newark on May 5 last. The check on which the specified charge was made was drawn by Baker & Schofield, of Paterson, and he got the money for it from a saloon keeper in that place, so was taken there for trial.

When arraigned in court, Lowrie at first denied the charge but on the stand admitted that he might have signed his name to the Baker & Schofield check but if he did it slipped his memory. He was represented by George Pierce, a Newark lawyer, and the latter got into several mix-ups with the court owing to a running fire of irrelevant comment and questions that he kept up during the examination. When Mr. Littell was placed on the stand he produced indisputable evidence that Lowrie had cashed the check and also badly tangled the prisoner by asking him a number of questions regarding an alleged partnership that Lowrie maintained had been agreed upon between them.

Mr. Littell has already secured checks which show that Lowrie received in all at Paterson about $100 while there is evidence that he did the same thing at Atlantic City. Lowrie has a wife and three children living at Dunellen but he has not been near them of late. At the time of his arrest he was employed by a Newark agency house and the concern has furnished bail for him.

QUIET SESSION OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

No Contests Among Eleven Cases on the Docket; Bigger Actions Adjourned.

Eleven cases were on the District Court docket this morning. Nine of them were contested, and adjournments marked the proceedings.

M. Crosbie against R. M. Radcliffe, judgment for possession; E. T. Hand against Firman Gise, $300, on contract, adjourned to July 10; Scheerer & Crown against Mary Opdyke, $50, in repleoin, and Elizabeth Primmer, $100, in replevin, judgment for plaintiffs in both cases; William Hand & Son against T. A. Moore, $20, on contract, settled.

Independence Day at the P. C. C.

The officers and committees of the Plainfield Country Club are making arrangements for an elaborate celebration of the Fourth of July at the club. Besides the usual attractive events on the golf course and tennis courts, there will be an afternoon reception at the clubhouse with music by an orchestra throughout the afternoon as well as in the evening, when there will be a dance. The clubhouse will be appropriately decorated for the occasion and it is expected that an unusually large number of people will attend.

H. H. DRAKE TO RUN WITH WM. N. RRNYON

ELIZABETH LAWYER LIKELY TO TAKE TUCKER'S PLACE ON COLBY TICKET.

Following closely the announcement that Assemblyman Everard K. Tucker, of Elizabeth, will not be a candidate for re-election next fall, comes the announcement today that H. H. Drake, Esq., a promising young lawyer, of Elizabeth, will probably be selected to make the fight for the nomination to succeed Assemblyman Tucker.

Mr. Drake stands well not only in Elizabeth, but throughout the county, and his friends believe that he will make a strong fight in the primary. He is a prominent member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, being a member of the Elizabeth Council, and it is predicted that he will receive the support of that organization. Mr. Drake will be remembered as one of the speakers at the "American Banquet" held at the Casino, last winter, when Senator Everett Colby and other leading members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., spoke. He made a very favorable impression at that time

YOUNG ZELAYA AND HIS WIFE MAKE UP

WILL SAIL NEXT SATURDAY FOR NICARAGUA TO PACIFY HIS FATHER.

Through the efforts of friends a reconciliation has been effected between the estranged son of Nicaragua's President, Alphonse Zelaya, and his wife, who announced their separation three weeks ago.

Young Zelaya, who attended school in this city and is widely known locally, states that he and his wife will sail for Nicaragua next Saturday and seek to pacify his father, who has always violently opposed the marriage with the young American girl.

"The stories of our separation were all lies," said Zelaya today.

"We still love each other, don't we, sweetheart," said he turning to his wife.

"Sure," she replied, looking the part. "You see, Alphonse was working in New York for an electric company, and not making very much money, and I came home to visit my folks. That's how it started."

"Yes," said young Zelaya, "the work was awful hard, and the pay small, and that's why I am going home to the president. A man in the United States doesn't amount to much if he has no money. No money means no friends, no good things to eat, no nothing. A man of my station should not work anyway. The president's son should live in fine hotels, have lots of money and no work. That's why I'm going home."

Zelaya called on the President at the White House today to get certain letters of recommendation to the Bluefield Steel Engraving Company of Nicaragua, in which, he says, the President is financially interested. Owing to the pressure of business the President could not see Zelaya, but promised to talk with him when Congress adjourns.

SMASHED SEWER GRATE TO FREE FALLEN HORSE.

Hind Hoof Was Caught In Iron and Only Sledge Could Release It.

To free a fallen horse, a hind hoof of which had become caught in it, the grating over the sewer inlet on the west side of Park avenue near Front street was smashed this morning. The horse, which was attached to David S. Dunavan's delivery wagon, in front of his store, became restless under the attack of a horse fly, started to rear, and fell. One of its hoofs became jammed in the grating, and all efforts to free it were unavailing until Dunavan got a sledge hammer and smashed the iron.

The incident attracted a crowd. The horse was badly lamed and cut, but was able to limp to its stable.

Park Avenue Baptist Lawn Fete.

The annual lawn fete of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held tonight on the grounds surrounding the church. Ice cream, cake, homemade candy and other articles will be sold and as a special feature automobile rides will be given at a moderate cost for each trip. These rides were a feature at a previous festival and proved a great success.

Machinists Granted An Increase.

The demands of the employes of the Aluminum Press and Plate Company, for a readjustment of wages, has been granted and goes in effect July 1. After that date the men will receive thirty cents an hour, time and a half up to 10 o'clock at night; for overtime and double time after that.

TO RESUME WORK AT WASHINGTON HEIGHTS

LARGE FORCE OF MEN ENGAGED TO FINISH IMPROVEMENT.

Work on the development of Washington Heights, as the big tract of land in the west end of the borough is to be known, is to be resumed as soon as possible, according to Mayor N. B. Smalley. It was stopped during the winter and spring but a larger force of men has been engaged and they will shortly be placed on the contract with instructions to hurry it through.

The non-completion of the new bridge on West End avenue has held back the development of the property and since it was started it has been found that the thoroughfare will have to be raised slightl near Rockview avenue to get the proper grade. It will be finished before the bridge is ready and will then be macadamized and placed in first-class condition.

The original plans of the promoters included provision for a lake on the former Cadmus property and this is to be carried out. The land is to be thoroughly cleared after which Green brook will be dammed up in order to make a body of water 1,500 feet long by 300 feet at the widest point. It will be somewhat like an egg in shape.

Mayor Smalley is the personal owner of the old Cadmus homestead and contemplates erecting a handsome dwelling on the site for his own use. The house now on the property will be removed back and perhaps converted into a barn.

As soon as the Washington Heights property is fully in shape, a large number of handsome homes are to be put up.

EXIT 'PHONE WIRES IN THE NEAR FUTURE

P. S. C. WIRES ALONE WILL DISFIGURE BUSINESS SECTION.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in making extensive improvements in Plainfield, which include the placing of wires underground, proposes to abolish all telephone poles possible. All of the poles will be taken down in the business part of the city, which will add greatly to the attractiveness of the streets. In the residential section wherever possible poles will be removed and wires put under ground. It is understood that the Public Service Corporation has decided not to continue the work begun by Former Superintendent McClurg, of extending the underground work. The company has only a few wires in conduits.

The Public Service Corporation has a number of electric light wires, including the big feed wire for the use of the trolley, running through Second street, east and west, and on these same poles the Postal Telegraph Company has its wires. It is argued that the removal of these wires would greatly enhance the appearance of the street at Park avenue and Second street, where the Plainfield Trust Company has erected a fine building and the avenue is to be widened. When the telephone company complete its work in Park avenue, the only wires above ground will be those of the Public Service Corporation.

Slippery Witness Arrested.

Pasquale Cusano, one of the witnesses subpoenaed in the case against Jules Mastodonato, alleged speakeasy operator, was arrested in Bound Brook yesterday on a bench warrant issued by Judge Atwater. He was arrested for failing to appear, as his subpoena directed, last Friday in court. He will probably be punished for contempt, as a warning to the rest of his countrymen, who have a habit of disappearing when wanted by the police.

NEGRO BURGLAR CAUGHT

Frightened From House By Servants, Then Nabbed By Detective.

TRIED A DAYLIGHT JOB

Watchful Maids Heard Him Force His Way Into Vacant House—Detective Does Good Work In Chase.

Police headquarters telephone rang at 2:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and a girl's voice sounded in Chief Kiely's ear.

"This is a maid at A. W. Kleinecke's house, 1406 Watchung avenue. There is a man in the cellar."

Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins were in the office and as the Chief dropped the 'phone Patrolman Kelly came in. The Chief ordered the three men up to the Kleinecke house, and they rattled there in the patrol wagon as fast as the horse could go. There was no man in the cellar, but the marks of a jimmy on a cellar window showed that the girl had not given a false alarm. Two men working in the garden saw a negro come out of the house a short time before, and hurry toward the woods. They didn't think anything was wrong, but the cops knew he was the man they wanted.

The girl who telephoned and another maid in Mr. Kleinecke's employ heard the jimmy at work from upstairs. The family is away in Maine, and the maids came to the house just to see if everything was all right. When they heard the noise they went downstairs to investigate, and frightened the man with the jimmy into flight. They heard him go downstairs and thought he went to hide in the cellar. They held their nerve and the 'phone message to the police followed. They modestly refused to give their names.

The gardeners had a good look at the negro, and they gave the officers a detailed description of him. The sleuth and the bluecoats scattered to hunt his trail without loss of time, at a pace that opened all their pores.

McCarthy worked back toward the center of town. At Fifth street and Watchung avenue, he spotted a negro with a coat under his arm coming from Washington street. One more look was all the detective needed to convince him that he had run down his man. The arrest that followed was a quiet affair. The negro surrendered as soon as McCarthy's hand fell on his shoulder.

He slipped on his coat, and a bystander saw something drop from his sleeve to a grass plot at his side. The watcher called the sleuth's attention to it, and McCarthy picked up a shiney jimmy. The prisoner smiled sourly when he saw the officer slip the tool in his pocket. He hadn't intended to say anything about it.

At the station house, the prisoner's pockets yielded a bunch of skeleton keys and a dark lantern. He refused to give his name, or to make any kind of a statement.

"All right," said the Chief, "do as you please. You are an old bird, and somebody knows your record. We'll find out all about you and we won't be any nicer to you for the trouble you put us to."

The prisoner must have absorbed the common sense in that statement overnight, because he intimated this morning that he was ready to make a statement.

"We won't hurry you," said Chief Kiely. "You think things over and get your statement in complete shape. I'll talk with you when I get back from a trip I've got to take this morning."

The Chief went to Elizabeth on the trial of three speakeasy men, and will take the burglar's statement this afternoon when he gets back.

"That was a good capture," he said this morning. "He is an old hand, and his record is down somewhere. The capture saves us from a lot of trouble this summer."

How Consumption Starts

And How It May Be Cured At Home.

The pitiful emaciated wreck of humanity—the death-marked consumptive—who totters with withered limbs and glassy, listless eye down towards the grave, did not reach this condition at a single bound.

Ninety-nine of every hundred cases of consumption have their beginning in a neglected cold—a cough, that warning signal of pulmonary distress—allowed to go unheeded or deadened and lulled to quiet by some "cough syrup" full of opium or other narcotic.

You should beware of all such remedies. They clog the lungs with decomposing matter and render consumption almost certain.

Piso's Cure for Consumption, the old remedy that your grandfather used and that physicians have recognized for more than 50 years as the one cure that goes back of the symptom and removes the cause, contains no such dangerous drugs. It is not only a cure for the disease after it has fastened its grip upon the system, but is an absolute preventive and cure for all coughs and colds. Upon the slightest indication of catching cold, a dose of Piso's should be taken and all danger will be avoided.

Piso's Cure for Consumption stops the cough, but not by putting it to sleep. It clears the lungs of phlegm and matter and removes the cause.

It aids nature, tones, heals and soothes the lungs.

Piso's Cure is sold by all druggists at 25 cents a bottle. See that you get the genuine.

The Piso Company has issued a wonderful little book that is yours for the asking, free. It teaches, in the plainest and most easily understood manner, the simple and easy rules to be followed by a person with Lung Trouble, as to foods, drinks, sleep, exercise, sunshine, ventilation, fresh air, dress, etc., etc. (Illustrated.) NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

Bids for the filling-in to grade of Washington avenue, from the end of the macadam to the borough line on the south have been asked for by the council, and in connection with the project the Edgerton Park Company and other interested property owners have offered to give $150 toward the work. The question has been raised by property owners in other sections, however, as to the pressing need of the improvement. It is suggested that the amount of money the job requires might be more profitably spent, from a community standpoint, on other thoroughfares or in another direction.

George J. Corey, of Stelton, has been chosen permanent president of the Colby league of Middlesex county. In answer to the sneering query of a New Brunswick paper, "Who is Corey?" Rev. W. T. Dorward has written a glowing appreciation of Mr. Corey as a citizen, a Christian and a patriot. It is not a political document, and Mr. Dorward expressly avoids all reference to politics except to say that he does not write it for political effect, but it can scarcely do other than strengthen Mr. Corey in the estimation of those voters who may read it.

The Presbyterian Sunday-school excursion will be held Thursday, July 19, to Ocean Grove. It will go out in conjunction with the First Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist and Congregational churches, of Plainfield.

Earl Darlington spent the day in New York city and visited Coney Island.

Ohio's Governor Ill.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 26.—Gov. Andrew L. Harris was forced to bed yesterday afternoon at his home in Eaton by exhaustion and acute indigestion. It was doubtful whether he will be able to return to Columbus today to take up the duties of State. He would not permit his wife to call a doctor, saying he feared medicine would make him seriously ill. Some anxiety is expressed over his condition, as he is more than 70 years old.

Otto Linke, a student at St. Laurent College, Montreal, Can., is home for the summer vacation.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

George Primrose and his big minstel company will be the special attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. This season's company and production are said to far surpass anything before seen in minstrelsy. An entire new outfit of costumes, scenery, electric effects and properties have been constructed for this tour. The opening part is in two scenes: The first a correct reproduction of "ye old-time minstrels" with Sambo, bones and tambo on the end chairs. During this part all the old time songs, dances and jokes will be heard. This changes as if by magic to a modern part. The color scheme is in blue, ivory and gold with no tinsel or gaudy costumes, with every member of the company in evening dress, and black face; George Primrose, Eddie Mazier, Emile Subers, Eddie Horan and James Connor will occupy end chairs and Edgar Allyn, interlocutor, the middle chair. Everything this happy sextette do will give no reminder of the past, as each and every song, joke and feature is absolutely new. In the vocal department, which has received the most careful attention from Mr. Primrose, are Charles Reinhart, Walter S. Brower, Wm. Oakland, David Irwin, Clarence Marks, Edgar Allyn, Richard Reid, Geo. Kellogg and a chorus of twenty trained male voices, acccompanied by an orchestra of picked musicians under the direction of Charles Owkop. The second part will consist of scenes typical of negro life from the old-time slavery days to the present-day "dandy" coon.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, of West Front street, have been entertaining company from Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith, who were recently married in Brooklyn, are stopping in Plainfield for the present.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, will take his annual vacation during the month of August. The supplies will be announced within a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford H. Brokaw, who were married on Saturday at Irvington, will spend Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Brokaw's father, Councilman Frank Krewson, of Somerset street.

Died Scaring a Girl.

Clinton, Mass., June 26.—After rocking about to scare a twelve-year-old girl in a boat with two other men Calsar Manilla, a fruit dealer, of High street, tipped the craft over yesterday and was drowned. The girl was saved by Thomas Moran as she was going down for the third time.

THE GREAT NORTH COUNTRY.

Nimrod was a mighty hunter, but had he hunted in the "Temagami" region he would have been a mightier one. Nimrod hunted for glory, but Temagamians hunt for game. Those Indians who made the first canoe of birch bark long ago, were our greatest benefactors. The children of these Indians know the canoe, and they know how to use it, and if you go to Temagami this summer they will paddle your canoe in their own superb way. They will be the best guides you ever had. Students who camp in summer along the Temagami lakes are able to do two years' work in one. Finest of fishing and hunting. Easy of access by the Grand Trunk Railway System. For information and beautiful descriptive publication sent free apply to F. P. Dwyer, 290 Broadway, New York.

Prof. Leary, of Leal's School, has gone to the mountains to spend his vacation.

..OTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.

Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is donig wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality; causing itching scalp, falling hair, and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

RAILROADS ON ISTHMUS.

New and Old Lines Which Cross the Panama Neck and Their Traffic.

The Panama canal is so great an enterprise that it overshadows other important work that has been done to facilitate commerce between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, across the wasp-like waste connecting North and South America. We have heard something of the Panama railroad and also of the Vera Cruz-Pacific railway, which affords communication between the two coast lines. Perhaps not so much is known of the new national railway built across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec by a combination of American capital and the Mexican government. A report from Special Agent Pepper to the consular department says:

"As it exists to-day the Tehuantepec National railway is an unusually good work of railroad construction and seems capable of sustaining all the freight traffic that can be obtained for it. The road is standard gauge of four feet eight and one-half inches. For the clayey soil there is rock ballast and gravel. The ties are creosoted pine, California redwood and native hardwood. Eighty-pound steel rails are employed. The best steel bridges with solid masonry and abutments are utilized wherever a river is to be crossed, and this is especially important on account of the torrential rains in the wet season. The locomotives and rolling stock are of the best equipment. With this solid construction there seems to be no question about the railroad standing whatever strain may be put upon it."

Thus it appears, says the Indianapolis News, that the old line across the isthmus at Tehuantepec has been rebuilt and modernized. It is not regarded as a rival to the canal when it is completed, but it is designed to carry a heavy traffic during the period of the canal construction. It will carry the overflow traffic which the Panama railroad cannot take care of, on account of the necessity of using its facilities for the construction work of the canal. Connecting with the new railroad on either coast will be steamship lines, and a great traffic will doubtless be developed, which will reach its full flower when the canal is put into operation. It is evident that tremendous commercial possibilities have developed in recent years, and that there is to be a marked increase of commerce across the isthmus long before the canal is finished.

PACKING COCOA SEEDS.

Method Tried in Samoa Thought to Be of Value for the Philippines.

Consul General Heimrod, of Apia, submits a method of packing cocoa seeds for export which has been practically tried in Samoa with excellent results, and which he believes may be of special value to planters in the Philippine islands.

The seeds should be selected from ripe pods and well washed in water, then placed on a rough towel and gently rubbed in order to remove most of the pulp, taking care not to damage the skin. The seeds are next placed in a current of cool air for 24 hours. The packing material is composed of equal parts of vegetable mold and finely ground or pounded charcoal, moistened just enough to resemble earth taken out of a shaded place. If the packing material is too wet, the seeds will rot, and if not moist enough the seeds will absorb all the water and perish. A tin box eight by four by four will hold about 200 seeds if packed as follows: Place a layer of earth and charcoal about three-fourths of an inch deep on the bottom of the tin box and lay the seeds in rows, leaving a little space between each. Spread another layer of the charcoal and earth, then another layer of rows of seeds, and so on until the box is full. Packing a slip of material across when the lid fits will help to keep the moisture in. When wetting the charcoal and earth, it is a wise precaution to do it 12 hours before being wanted, as this gives the water time to permeate the whole mass evenly.

Tree of the Canaries.

The dragon tree of the Canary islands is notable for the existence of individuals believed to be the oldest living vegetable organism in the world. The age of one tree, in particular, the once famous dragon tree of Teneriffe, has usually been estimated to be from 4,000 to 6,000 years, having thus an antiquity comparable with that of the pyramids. This wonder of the plant world was 70 feet or more in height, and survived intact until the year 1819, when during a terrific storm one of the large branches was broken off. A similar storm in 1867 stripped the trunk of its remaining branches and left it standing alone. This tree derives its common name from a reddish exudation known as dragon's blood, found in the sepulchral caves of the Guanches, and supposed to have been used by them in embalming their dead. It is said to have been at one time an important article of export from the canaries.

Fifteen-Ton Piece of Coral.

The dredger Governor, in the old Pacific mail dock, did herself proud by landing a 15-ton piece of coral on dry land. The big scoop had been delivering ordinary loads, when the boom dropped and the engine started to haul in a fresh load. Then the gear groaned, and things commenced to make a big fuss, and more steam was given and everybody stood by. Balanced as neatly as an egg in a spoon came up a coral rock far too big to get in the scoop, and just able to cramp in under the gin block.—Honolulu Commercial Advertiser.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

When the Madison Square Garden Roof opened its doors last night, it could be truthfully said that the "silly season" in New York theatricals was fully under way. The Madison Square Garden Roof is the real roof garden of New York. There are no timbers or glass casings between the audience and the sky, and the moon and the stars dead head their way into the show every night. This season the lanterns sway and the breezes blow an accompaniment on the Madison Square Garden Roof to the tuneful music of a new musical frivolity which has been entitled, "Mamzelle Champagne." Just what this show is can best be judged from its name. It is one of those bubbling, effervescent, breezy things which are always due in the good old summer time. It consists chiefly of music, comedy, girls and lingerie. It is stated by those critics who witnessed the opening performance that there is not a sufficient plot to distract the attention of the members of the audience from whatever brand of refreshment they may have beside their elbows. "Mamzelle Champagne" is produced by Henry Pincus. The principal comedy role is played by Harry Short, the well-known eccentric comedian, while Edwin Fowler and Miss Maud Fulton are the chief assistant fun makers. The title role of "Mamzelle Champagne" is being sung by Miss Viola De Costa, while Miss Maud Earle, a sister of the possibly better known but no more talented comic opera star, Virginia Earle, is the prima donna. There is a chorus of fifty, and they are mostly girls.

Miss Halsey, of New York, is a guest at the home of Joseph Philips, of Netherwood.

The Misses Utley, of New York, have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Craft, of Kensington avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Runyon, of East Front street, left this afternoon for a ten days' trip to the Delaware Water Gap.

CITIZENS' CO-OPERATION.

An appeal is made by the committee on lights and trees of the Common Council for the co-operation of every resident. Frequently there are matters needing the immediate action on the part of committee, but as they are not brought to its attention nothing is done. To expedite the work, reports from individual property owners or taxpayers would be welcomed. Wherever branches on shade trees are so low that they touch pedestrians or passing vehicles, wherever there are dead branches on trees in the streets, or wherever lamps or lights are not lighted when required, the committee should be notified by communicating direct with Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett.

CUT OUT DRY ROT.

Another seat of learning has heeded the sagely advice of successful business men of the day in cutting out dry rot from its curriculum and substituting something that will be of direct value and use in every day life. Washington and Jefferson College is the institution in question. For 100 years, Greek has been required in its regular classical course. The new order dispenses with it.

USING SOFT COAL.

The attention of the city authorities is called to the use of soft coal in this city. The smoke coming from the gas plant stack and from the stationary boiler used by the railroad at the Park avenue bridge as well as from passing coalers are cited as instances. Where is the Board of Health?

U. S. SENATOR GRIGGS?

Fred Kanen Improving.

Fred Kanen, of Watchung avenue, who was seriously injured in the Westfield wreck several years ago, and who it was believed would never be able to walk again, because of spine trouble, is very much improved. SHOOT ORDER FOR DOGS

Police Say Stray and Vicious Canines Are Dangerously Numerous.

A RIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

More Complaints Filed and More Snarling and Snapping Curs on the Streets Than in Other Years.

The police campaign against stray dogs this summer will be conducted on more vigorous lines than ever before. For years, Chief Kiely has set out to keep down the strays during the "mad-dog months," with varying success, and he has determined to attack the evil this time in a way that will make itself felt.

His mode of campaign was suggested by the discovery of a law on the statute books that allows properly appointed officers to shoot, forthwith, all stray dogs found on the streets of the city. The dog evil has been so bothersome in past summers, and promises so plainly to be worse this year, that the chief has determined to act under the law if the Council will give him the word to go ahead.

The matter will be brought to the attention of the higher powers, and if the course is approved, the police will go after the stray dogs with guns on hair triggers.

It is not part of the plan to do indiscriminate shooting, but the careless owners, who in past summers have relied too much on the indulgence of the officers, will have much less leeway. The police feel that their course in the matter will be generally approved, no matter how touchy dog-owners may feel. There is an almost universal fear of hydrophobia in summer, in spite of statistics that prove it to be as prevalent in January as in July, and the authorities must take note of the fact. If no effort is made to check the run of unmuzzled or unlead dogs, or if the effort appears to be failing, criticism of the police becomes sharp.

It is a fact, too, according ti the police that Plainfield now has more stray and vicious dogs than it should have. Complaints of frightened women and children have begun to come in in larger numbers than in past seasons, and the officers report a larger number of snapping, barking dogs about the streets.

The city court will be asked in conjunction with the gun campaign. Dogs that are plainly harmless will be shot out of hand, but the dogs of other fortunes will be given one chance. Their owners will be arraigned in court under the ordinance covering the conditions, and fined. Other measures will follow if that step doesn't serve to keep the dogs in check.

It was arranged to have a large American flag presented to the council, last night, by the wives of the members, but it was decided to defer the ceremony for one week.

These officers were chosen: Past councilor, Winfield S. Angleman; councilor, George B. Cratsley; vice-councilor, Dr. Rolland D. Tomlinson; recording secretary, Albert Craw; assistant recording secretary, F. E. Sebring; financial secretary, H. H. Webb; treasurer, G. W. V. Moy; conductor, Charles H. Leland; warden, Samuel H. The officers will be installed Monday night, July 2. Before the meeting closed the council initiatory team had a very satisfactory drill and it hopes to be able to take up the initiatory work beginning July 1.

WOODHULL & MARTIN.

D. C. ANDERSON'S BIRD WON 500 MILE RACE.

Plainfield Homing Pigeons Lead in Flight From Newton, N. C.

Homing pigeons owned by D. C. Anderson and M. B. Mellor, of this city, won the 500 mile extra-urban race on Saturday. Forty-nine pigeons were released at Newton, N. C., Saturday morning at 4:45 o'clock. As many of the birds did not reach home, it is believed that they were killed by the hail storm which visited this section during the afternoon. The first bird of the three returning belongs to M. B. Mellor, and arrived at 4:50 o'clock in the afternoon. It refused to trap until 5:36, while D. C. Anderson's bird which arrived a little later trapped at 5:07, winning the race. Mr. Mellor thereby wins the prize for the general average for five flights this season from 100 to 500 miles, the average being 1,216 yards a minute for the five races in which his birds took part. The birds owned by F. C. Brunner and F. Taylor arrived a day late.

Old Landmark Gone.

The last of the old building on Park avenue, opposite North avenue, was removed yesterday and workmen are engaged in taking away the brick foundation. The best of the material has been taken to Green Brook, where Charles P. Sebring expects to find use for it. The land will now be cleared and in the course of time work will probably be started erecting a modern building on the site.

$50,000 FOR NEW ELIZABETH POSTOFFICE.

House Bill Includes the Additional Provision for Public Building.

Washington, June 26.—Chairman Bartholdt, of the House committee on public buildings and grounds, introduced the public buildings appropriation bill yesterday afternoon.

It will probably be considered tomorrow. It contains many provisions for enlarging the cost of buildings, including the following for New Jersey cities:

Atlantic ity, $5,000; Elizabeth, $50,000; Perth Amboy, $7,000.

The general deficiency bill, the last of the great supply, was reported to the House today. It carries $10,245,509, of which $3,944,357 is for the Treasury Department. The amount of $601,717 is for repair of public buildings on the Pacifis coast, damaged by earthquake and fire.

The $50,000 appropriation for the Elizabeth postoffice building is an additional amount. There were two previous appropriations, aggregating $250,000, and the latter will make a total of $300,000.

PATRICK TRAYNOR ON TRIAL AT ELIZABETH.

Another Violation of the Liquor Laws by North Plainfield Man.

Patrick Traynor, employed by Mrs. Lena Hoerster, bottler of liquors on Somerset street, North Plainfield, who was indicted on a charge of selling liquor in Plainfield in quantities less than five gallons, is on trial today in the Union County Court at Elizabeth. The case will probably occupy most of the day. This is the last one of these cases to be tried at the present term of court.

Thomas Brown and Hugh Macrodouats, who were up on similar charges, have retracted their pleas of not guilty and entered pleas of non vult. The court announced that they would be sentenced on Wednesday, July 11.

PUBLIC SERVICE REDUCES SOME TROLLEY FARES.

The Public Service Corporation announced Saturday changes in the rates of fare on the trolley care between Newark and Montclair, Verona and Caldwell, which went into effect today. The statement of the company reads:

"The fare to Montclair will be five cents, or transfer from any connecting line in Newark. The fare from Montclair to Verona to Caldwell will be five cents. Formerly the fare from Newark to Upper Mountain avenue, in Montclair, was six cents, and from Newark to Verona line was ten cents, while the fare from Newark to Verona was eleven cents, and from Newark to Caldwell fifteen cents.

BAYONNE GREATLY WROUGHT UP OVER ALLEGED GAMBLING

Charges That It Was Allowed at Recent Carnival Gets Clergymen in a Controversy.

Bayonne citizens are at present divided among themselves as to whether or not gambling was permitted at the recent hospital carnival held in that city. It is alleged that all manner of games of chance were conducted nightly and the Protestant clergymen sent a letter to the officials criticizing them for allowing it. As a result opinions are being vented freely and the charges are being vigorously denied.

Rev. Father Andrew M. Egan, of St. Mary's church, and formerly of St. Mary's church, this city, says that the persons who signed the letter were either imposed upon by some one who acted in a spirit of meanness or else they did not see things as they were at the fair.

Father oseph McCormack, D. D., of St. Vincent de Paul's church, says that the pastors of the churches who signed the letter are lacking in learning, knowledge, charity and truthfulness. He says the members of the Citizens' Committee which got up the carnival for the benefit of the hospital are among the best people in the city, and they would not have tolerated gambling in any sense.

He says that such men as ex-Mayor Seymour and Recorder Lazarus, who were at the fair almost every night, would have put a stop to any form of gambling that was attempted on the grounds, and he is surprised ministers of the gospel should make such statements.

OHIO ICEMEN SENT TO THE PENITENTIARY.

Toledo, O., June 26.—J. A. Miller, R. C. Lemmer, R. A. Beard, P. H. Watters, P. H. Brining, ice combine men, were yesterday sentenced to pay a $5,000 fine each and serve one year in the penitentiary. Judge Kinclad announced that if the members of the Ice Trust would lower the price of ice below what it was before the trust raised the prices on March 12, keep the price there until the public got its money back and then put the price just where it was before the raise was made, he would consider a request to make some modification of the sentence. Prosecutor Wachenheimer has achieved a notable victory in his fight against the combine.

"In the mean time," said Judge Kinkead, "I am too busy to listen now to any appeal. The sentence of the court will be executed at once. This means that as soon as the commitments and the necessary papers are secured the ice barons will be loaded into a patrol wagon and carted to the city workhouse. In the meantime they were taken to the county jail. The crusade against the local Ice Trust was conducted by Prosecutor Lyman Wachenheimer, elected last fall on the independent ticket.

NEARLY KILLED BY GAS.

And a Servant Girl Is In a Dying Condition.

Summit, June 26.—Miss Mary Zaboski, nineteen years old, employed as a servant in the family of F. W. Armstrong, in the Postoffice building, is in a dying condition, as a result of having left the gas turned in in her room Saturday night. She was found unconscious Sunday by the family. Her window was shut and the gas was turned on about one-quarter way.

Dr. R. D. Baker, Dr. W. J. Lampson and a trained nurse worked over the woman, and Sunday night it was said there was a slight chance for recovery. Yesterday morning, however, the patient took a turn for the worse, and there seeems to be no hope for her recovery. She has been partly conscious several times.

Mrs. Armstrong said yesterday that the girl is a foreigner, and though it had often been explained to her, the servant probably did not understand how to turn off the gas. Mrs. Armstrong said she does not think the girl attempted suicide.

Edward T. Schmeyer Weds.

Miss Lottie Hepner, daughter of Charles Hepner, of 825 West Fifth street, and Edward T. Schmeyer, son of Harvey Schmeyer, of Prospect place, were married yesterday morning by Rev. Dr. J. A. After the ceremony the couple left town for a wedding trip and upon their return will reside with the groom's father in Prospect place. Mr. Schmeyer is a carpenter by trade and is employed in this city.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J., held on Thursday, June 7, 1906, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed all members present except Freeholder Scudder.

The minutes of the previous meeting were on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From Lloyd Thompson, town clerk, Westfield, N. J., as follows:

June 5, 1906.

Gentlemen: This is to certify that at a meeting of the council of the town of Westfield, in the county of Union, held on Monday evening, June 4, 1906, Chas. A. Smith was unanimously appointed by said council a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county to fill the unexpired term of W. W. Connoly, deceased.

Yours very truly,
Lloyd Thompson, Town Clerk.

On motion of Freeholder Adams the communication was received and placed on file.

The director stated that Mr. Smith had been duly sworn in as a member of this board, his oath of office being on file in the county clerk's office, as required by law, and that he would entertain a motion for Mr. Smith to take his seat in the board. On motion of Freeholder Adams, which was carried unanimously, Mr. Smith took his seat in the board.

From Freeholder M. M. Scudder, as follows:

Westfield, N. J., May 25, 1906.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Gentlemen: I having recently been appointed a member of the County Board of Taxation from this county, do hereby tender my resignation as a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union. Trusting that the same will be acted upon at your pleasure, I beg to remain, Yours respectfully,

M. M. Scudder.

On motion of Freeholder Cladek, it was unanimously ordered that the resignation of Mr. Scudder be received and accepted, and that the clerk notify the council of the town of Westfield of the action taken by the board.

County Attorney Codington asked permission to say in reference to Mr. Scudder's resignation, that he had received a letter of inquiry from Mr. Scudder relative to his holding both positions; that he had looked up the law governing such matters, and could find nothing to prevent Mr. Scudder from holding both positions at the same time; his resignation from this board was therefore purely voluntary.

From the Union County Board of Taxation, as follows:

June 4, 1906.

Gentlemen: A board of equal taxation of Union county was created by an act of the last legislature of New Jersey. In compliance with that law the Governor has appointed Messrs. C. C. Pollard, M. M. Scudder and F. H. Andrews as members of the board for this county. They elected Mr. Thomas Hanna, secretary, at a salary of $100 a month, which salary according to the law is payable by your county board. This board requests that you assign them suitable quarters in the court house, Elizabeth, and furnish them with necessary desks and stationery.

Yours truly,
Thomas Hanna, Secretary.

On motion of Freeholder Cady received and referred to committee on public grounds and buildings.

From Gen. J. Madison Drake, of the Veteran Zouaves, as follows:

Elizabeth, N. J., June 5, 1906.

Gentlemen: I am instructed by the Veteran Zouaves, whom I have commanded for two generations, to offer for presentation to the county of Union, through your body, the many historical relics presented to them, which have been carefully preserved since the end of the civil war, in which they all took part. The Veteran Zouaves, although still maintaining their organization, have no proper place in which to longer exhibit the relics which have ever been objects of genuine curiosity as well as interest to them and the public, and their transfer to the county for continued preservation within the walls of the court house having been suggested by several members of your board. I have the honor on behalf of the Veteran Zouaves, in tendering the relics to you for that purpose. I shall have satisfaction in delivering the articles, (now in boxes), to such committee or person as you may authorize to receive them.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
J. Madison Drake,
Bt. Brig. Gen. Com'd'g.

After a few remarks by Freeholder Adams, to the effect that the relics as mentioned were deserving of the monsideration of this board, and that a suitable case in which to place them could be secured for a moderate sum, it was unanimously ordered on roll call, and on motion of Freeholder Cladek, that the matter be referred with power, to the committee on public grounds and buildings, and to Freeholder Adams, the latter being an expert in relics and ancient weapons of warfare.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the committee on Filbert street bridge, Roselle Park, N. J.

Gentlemen: Your committee would respectfully report that they have examined the old bridge, and find it in a very bad condition, rotten and on the verge of collapse; would recommend a new bridge, with stone or concrete walls, with iron beams, with brick or concrete arches, or both, at a cost not to exceed $2,000.

Noah Woodruff, Geo. H. Kline, Elston Darby, committee.

Freeholder Cady moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on Culvert on Elm street, Westfield, N. J.

Gentlemen: Your committee has examined the present culvert, which is of earthenware pipe, and find that that culvert is not suitable either in location or in materials and construction for permanent use at this place. Your committee would therefore recommend the construction of a new culvert of 3 feet opening, by 83 feet 6 inches long, built with masonry walls, and covered with bluestone flagging, at a cost not to exceed $400. The new culvert to be placed diagonally across the street, instead of at right angles, as at present.

M. M. Scudder, E. K. Adams, Geo. H. Kline, committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

NEW BUSINESS.

Freeholder Cady said that he desired to call the attention of the Board to the sorrowful fact, that by reason of serious and continued illness, county collector E. M. Wood had become incapacitated for the performance of the duties of his office. The county attorney had been conferred with in the matter, and had prepared an opinion, which he, (Mr. Cady), presented, and was read by the clerk as follows:

Plainfield, N. J., June 6, 1906.

Gentlemen: I have been asked for my opinion as to the best and most appropriate method of conducting the financial affairs of the county during the continuance of the illness of Mr. E. M. Wood, the county collector; and inasmuch as it is the apparent desire of the board to retain the services of Mr. Wood as county collector, so soon as his physical condition will permit him to attend to said duties, I would recommend as a proper course to pursue, that this board by resolution, duly adopted, nominate and elect some person to sign checks against the account of the county in the various institutions where the county's moneys are deposited; that said checks be countersigned by the director of the board; that the person so appointed before entering upon his duties be required to furnish bonds sufficient in amount and satisfactory to the board; that said appointment be for a term at the pleasure of the board, and until such authority shall be rescinded by the board, and that a copy of said resolution be filed with the several banking institutions where the funds of the county are now, or may hereafter be deposited.

This, it would appear to me, would relieve the board of its present embarrassment, and the banking institutions would be justified in honoring checks so made.

Very truly yours,
W. R. Codington, County Attorney.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the opinion of the county attorney was received and placed on file.

Freeholder Cady then in a few remarks, nominated N. R. Leavitt for county collector pro tem. He said that Mr. Leavitt had long been associated with Mr. Wood in a business way; that he was familiar with the duties of the office, and in every way qualified to perform the duties of county collector. Mr. Leavitt's nomination was seconded by Freeholder Woodruff.

There were no other nominations, and Mr. Leavitt was declared elected as county collector pro tem, receiving on roll call, the unanimous vote of the board.

By Freeholder Cady:

Whereas, Mr. Edward M. Wool has recently been appointed county collector of the county of Union, and has duly qualified as such; and whereas, through illness, he is temporarily incapacitated from performing the duties of said collector; and whereas, for the proper execution of the county affairs, it is desirous and necesssary that some one should be appointed to perform the duties of the county collector during the incapacity of the present incumbent of said office;

Therefore, Be it resolved, That Nathan R. Leavitt be, and hereby is appointed and designated collector pro tem, and that he be, and hereby is duly authorized to draw and sign checks against the funds of the county wherever the same may be deposited; to endorse and deposit to his account as collector pro tem, all checks payable to the county, or to him for the use and benefit of the county, and to do and perform all acts necessary to be done and performed by the county collector; all checks or drafts, so drawn against the funds of the county, wherever the same may be deposited, to be honored only after the same has been duly countersigned by the director of this board.

And be it further, Resolved, That before taking upon himself any of the duties of this office by virtue of this appointment, the said Nathan R. Leavitt, be required to furnish bonds in the sum of twenty thousand, (20,000) dollars, and to be approved as to form and sufficiency by this board.

And be it further, Resolved, That a certified copy of this resolution duly attested by the clerk of this board, be forwarded to each of the banks, trust companies, or other institutions where the funds of the county now are, or may hereafter be deposited.

Freeholder Smith moved the adoption of the foregoing resolutions, and on roll call they were unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Adams:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the bridge on Center street, Garwood, N. J., said committee to report on the advisability of constructing a new steel beam bridge, with an estimate of the probable cost of the same, and the committee to report at next meeting.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, the resolution was adopted without dissent, and the director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Adams, Cladek and Darby.

The committee on collector's bond, reported as approved, the bond of Nathan R. Leavitt, county collector pro tem, said bond being signed by Nathan R. Leavitt, Hamilton F. Kean, L. F. Hersch and Richard T. Potts. The conditions of the bond were read in full by the clerk, after which, on motion of Freeholder Woodruff, it was ordered that it be accepted and placed on file.

Freeholder Woodruff said he desired to call up a petition from residents of Roselle Park, relative to

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Azienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep also of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Azienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Azienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

DIAMOND DUST.

Fans join in the salute to the Weather Man.

Mister Weather Man you are really on the Fritz,
You're sufficient to give the fans the ten year itch.
But, Mister Weather Man, have you heard that story
About the goblins? Those bad, bad, fellows.
If you don't look out, Mister Weather
Man der goblins
Will catch you, and hang you to a big pole,
By the neck until you're dead. Then you'll be a sort of
Sorry that you made it rain on two Saturdays.
The band can now join in.

If old Jupiter Pluvius, Commander in Chief of the Cloud District, will keep his hands off the rinsing throttle and not attempt to intimidate Old Sol from coming out, there'll be a ball game Saturday. The Patersons were billed to appear here Saturday, but owing to the pressure of the fan army, Manager Daab has cancelled the game with the Patersons, and given the date to Westfield. According to ancient statistics rains very seldom comes on two successive Saturdays, so it is almost a certainty that the second game with Plainfield and Westfield will be played Saturday.

Tuesday morning of next week, (The Fourth of July) the Trentons, with Ray Egner, will be the opponents of the Plainfields. It will mark the first appearance of the Trenton cracks in Plainfield and a large crowd should be on hand to witness the contest. There will be no game in the afternoon, the Plainfields going to Trenton for a return game.

Our British cousins, who have taken so kindly to baseball, are determined that Americans shall not rule their games. They have issued an edict that no American, either amateur or professional, shall be eligible to play on English nines. They except one player only, the catcher. The Britains, in a way, have mastered the intricacies of the various positions, but the art of catching behind the bat is as yet an undiscovered art. Players who have pictured Great Britain as a baseball ElDorado should take warning. To paraphrase a one-time popular coon-song, "If you ain't a catcher you needn't come around."

The Philadelphia North American offers this consolation to New York fans: "New Yorkers needn't worry because the Giants and Yankees are on the Fritz. The Tri-State League is going to play Sunday games at Manhattan Beach." The Altoona Club was on hand Sunday last but the game was called off because of interference by the police. The occasion was noteworthy for one thing. Some of the Altoona players who have inhabited the rhubarb districts and never before had a chance to get further than "Phillie," got their first glimpse of the big Atlantic and the wonders of Dreamland.

The Democratic administration comes in for the major portion of the blame for the stopping of the Sunday games in New York and Brooklyn. As this is a matter that effects the pocketbooks, it is needless to say that all of the managers and players will support the Hearst M. O. L. or G. O. P. ticket at the coming election.

Second Baseman Burch, the former Westfield player and Connecticut leaguer, has flopped from the Tri-State to the St. Louis team.

The weather man has been on the Fritz for the past two Saturdays. As a result the fan bugs have been forced to a temporary literary B. B. diet.

Jake Beckley, of the Cincinnatis, is credited with being the champion mustache grower. It is reported he raises three crops during a ball season.

First Baseman Henriques made one of the longest hits ever made on the Hoboken grounds Sunday when he rapped a homer into left garden. The ball struck three feet within the foul line and bounded to the rear of the clubhouse.

What has become of the spit ball? Just one year ago he was the main stem to thousands of baseball arguments in all sections of the country.

Captain Mason, of the Phoenix Steamship Line, is a warm admirer of the Hoboken baseball team and Manager Daab. Sunday he was one of the spectators at the game between Waterbury and the Hobokens and found a huge lot of enjoyment in the contest which was replete with heavy slugging by both teams. Captain Mason suggested to Manager Daab the advisability of taking the team to England this fall for a series of games with the leading British teams. The captain is enthusiastic over the idea and intimated that free passage might be arranged for the players. Manager Camp, of the Cuban Stars, was also a spectator. He also suggested that it would be a good idea to take the team to Cuba in the winter for a month's campaign. Manager Daab is yet undecided and it may be possible that he will consider seriously the matter of taking a winter trip to one of these places.

When you come to talk about outfielders the name of Phil Reardon must be considered among the top notchers. The Brooklyn boy is putting up the unadulterated gilt edged brand of baseball and his equal is hard to find. He is up with the leaders in the batting department and he is nailing everything that looks like a fly that butts in his big territory.

If it doesn't rain next Saturday Plainfield and Westfield will play on Crescent Oval.

Lou Wiltse, of this city, one of the pitching staff of the Johnstown Tri-State League, returned to Johnstown this week. His arm is practically well and he believes that he can now pitch winning ball.

Tennis in New Jersey.

F. S. Anderson successfully defended his title of tennis champion of New Jersey in a match with T. R. Pell yesterday. The score was 6—1, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Would Silence Central Whistles.

Jersey City, June 26.—To compel the Jersey Central Railroad Company to prevent the sleep-destroying blowing of locomotive whistles in the West Eighth street yards, the Bayonne Civic Club has begun a fight. President Joseph W. Moore of the club said Sunday that an ordinance passed in 1888 had been discovered which classes the unnecessary blowing of whistles as a public nuisance.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, paid a fraternal visit to the Woodbridge Council, last night. The degree team of the Plainfield council worked the first degree, after which a banquet was served.

Holy Cross Choir Boys' Baseball Nine. —Photo by Stone.

The Holy Cross choir nine played their second game with the choir boys of Grace church, East Orange, yesterday afternoon, at East Orange, and defeated them 5 to 4. The game was followed by a supper.

Vail and Shaw were the battery for Holy Cross, Coyne and Zinc for the losers. Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross, umpired the first three innings and the rector of Grace church umpired the last six.

The spread after the game was a bounteous one. Besides the team, nine other members of the Holy Cross choir were entertained at the supper.

BRIGHT YOUNG LIFE ENDED.

Miss Florence Andrews Dies in West Virginia from Typhoid-Pneumonia.

Miss Florence Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Andrews, of Grove street, died last night in West Virginia. The young woman, who was unusually bright and talented, went south last month to take care of some business matters in which her father was interested. Soon after her arrival she was taken with typhoid-pneumonia and despite the efforts of skilled physicians she sank rapidly.

The parents were summoned in time to reach her before she died and are now in West Virginia making arrangements to bring the body to Plainfield.

Costly Road for Somerset.

Somerville, June 26.—The most costlyy stone road ever built in Somerset county is to be constructed during the summer. It consists of three and one-twelfth miles from Somerville to North Branch, and is over the old Easton turnpike, which was formerly the highway between New York and Pennsylvania when old David Saunderson drove the line of stage coaches. The contract was awarded on Saturday to William Hardgrove for $29,000, or nearly $10,000 per mile. The reason for the large cost is because the road is the most hilly in the county and the cutting down of he grades has made it necessary for the contractors to add to their price. The contractors are required to complete the road by November 1, and the work will be pushed at once. This is the first stone road that has been constructed through the western portion of the county.

Wreck Delays Central Traffic.

Elizabeth, June 26.—A wreck occurred Sunday night on the Jersey Central at Elizabethport, which delayed travel on the main line and Newark-Elizabeth branch drawbridge over the Hackensack river being out of order, trains on the Newark and New York branch were run around, yesterday, by way of Elizabethport. The locomotive of a train bound from New York to Newark jumped the track on what is known as the D-rail, opposite the car repair shops at Elizabethport. The passengers were pretty well shaken up, but no one was surt. The cars did not leave the rails.

Minturn Sees Bryan's Election.

Hoboken, June 26.—James F. Minturn, leader of the Democratic minority in the State Senate, says he doesn't think there is a possible doubt of Bryan's election to the Presidency on a platform demanding revision of the tariff and the control and regulation of trusts. Mr. Minturn thinks that State issues will be overshadowed by national questions —tariff and trusts—in the next campaign. It wouldn't surprise him, he said, if the Democrats elected a majority of the next house of assembly, and at least four of the six Senators.

Long Branch's July 4 Programme.

Long Branch, June 26.—A real old-fashioned July 4 celebration will be held here this year. The City Council will co-operate with the Board of Trade and residents in completing a programme at city hall tonight. The outline is as follows: Band concert by Indian band of Carlisle, Pa.; oration in Ocean Park; address on the progress of Long Branch, particularly the ocean front improvements; a series of land and water sports, with display of fireworks at night.

—Delicious muskmelons, the very best to be had, are included in Neuman Brothers' big fruit display. See their line of strawberries, blackberries and red raspberries before buying elsewhere.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night in the W. C. T. U. rooms, 100 Madison avenue, at 8 o'clock. There will be preaching by Rev. Mr. Kier.

THEY CAME BACK TO WED

Newark Couple Kept Promise Made to Justice Hand Weeks Ago.

BRIDE HAD BACKED OUT

Feared She Wasn't a Legal Widow, But Her Scruples Faded After a Month or Two of Consideration.

Frank Harral and Mrs. Elizabeth Bull, both of Newark, were married yesterday afternoon by Justice Hand, at his office. The marriage was the sequel of an interesting incident in the juctice's office two months ago, when Harral and his bride came there one afternoon.

They wanted to set married then, and were on the point of entering on the ceremony when Mrs. Bull was seized with scruples over her legal status before the altar. Her husband had left her several years before and she had heard nothing of him, and she believed she was a widow. But the fact of her husband's demise had never been proven, and she feared to go on with the ceremony at the crucial moment. Harral, who is very much in love, pleaded with her earnestly to go on with the marriage, but she shrank from it, and finally insisted on delay. She said she would think over it a week and give her final decision then. She took a little longer than that, but finally gave in to the importunities of the groom.

When they went away from the office, the first time, the couple promised to come back to be married if the marriage became an assured thing, but the justice, who was cast down by the sudden cessation of the Hymenal song, was hopeless of seeing them again. He was correspondingly delighted when the couple reappeared at the office yesterday, and announced, with conscious pride and modest blushes, that nothing stood in the way of the happy event.

The justice bustled next door and got Architect Fred L. Lancaster, and telephoned downstairs and brought up Counsellor Francis J. Blatz, for witnesses, and joyously, with delight beaming from his face, he joined the couple in wedlock.

"This is the best thing that has happened in this office since the day the District Court put us in the Down and Out Club," said the Judge as he implanted a resounding kiss on the blushing cheek of the bride.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to me," said the groom stoutly, as he slipped a ten-dollar bill in the Judge's hand.

There was a handshake all around, and the beaming bride and groom left to start on a honeymoon trip by trolley to Philadelphia, where Harral has relatives. The will spend a week or ten days on the honeymoon, after which they will live in Newark, where the groom is employed in a machine shop.

New Storm Sewer Works Well.

Employes of the trolley cars and others, residents in the vicinity, have made gratifying reports concerning the efficiency of the Richmond street storm sewer during the heavy rain on Saturday. The sewer carried off the surface water quickly and there was no flooding of any account at that point. Plans are now before the Common Council for an extension of this storm sewer which will include that part of the street under the Richmond street bridge, which is considered one of the worst points during a heavy rain. A public hearing on the proposed ordinance will be given at the next regular meeting of the Common Council.

Plainfield Graduates at Williams.

Four Plainfield young men, Kerro Knox, Erwin Briant Leland, Harold A. Nomer and Brockholst Kip Miller, will be graduated from Williams College tomorrow at the 112th commencement. During the summer Nomer, who was graduated with Erwin Briant Leland from the Plainfield High School, Class '02, will engage in college Y. M. C. A. work and in the fall will teach in the Brooklyn Polytechnic. At the same time he will take a course of study in the New York Law School. Miller also intends to take up the study of law. Leland and Knox have not yet announced their intentions.

Will Repair Evona Avenue.

The next work to be undertaken by the street committee will be that of repairing Evona avenue, where it is proposed to spread a large quantity of slag from the Pond Machine Tool Works. The work was started some time ago but never completed. The slag contains considerable iron and is a fine foundation for the making of good roads.

MR. AND MRS. LARRABEE FIFTY YEARS WEDDED

LITERARY CRITIC AND HIS WIFE HOLD AN INFORMAL RECEPTION.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Larrabee, of 70 Willow avenue, celebrated the golden wedding anniversary of their wedding Monday night. About fifty people gathered to extend their best wishes to the couple and join in the festivities of the occasion. The couple received a large number of gifts in gold as pleasant remembrances of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Larrabee were married in New York in 1856 and for many years have resided in North Plainfield. Mr. Larrabee is a literary man of high standing and a critic of recognized ability. For many years he wrote leading editorials for Harper's Magazine and he has also written articles for The Century. In the selection of books for the Plainfield Public Library his judgment has always been relied upon and it is largely due to his efforts that the local library has the reputation of being one of the best in the country. One of Mr. Larrabee's notable works is a book on the subject of "How Volcanoes Are Made," published some time ago.

CONFERENCE MEMBERS GATHER AT LEBANON

MRS. A. M'CREA PRESIDES AT SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING.

Members from almost every missionary society in the Elizabeth district, Newark conference, congregated in the Methodist Episcopal church at Lebanon yesterday to attend the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Elizabeth district. Morning and afternoon sessions were held, and were presided over by the president, Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of this city.

The morning session opened at 10:45 o'clock, with a devotional service conducted by Mrs. G. W. Brown, of Elizabeth. Rev. H. W. Ewig, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lebanon, made the address of welcome, which was responded to by Mrs. Andrew Henry, of Clinton. Reports from the district officers indicated that the good work being done in the different sections is on the increase, and that more money than ever is contributed toward foreign mission work. The greetings from auxiliaries were received, after which Mrs. J. H. Knowles, the secretary of the conference, read an address on mission work. A hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign," was sung, and committees appointed. The noontide prayer and memorial service for Mrs. E. Clark, Jr., were conducted by Mrs. Winter.

After the Mizpah benediction a basket luncheon was partaken of.

The afternoon session began promptly at 2 o'clock. Mrs. L. A. Walters, of Lebanon, led the devotional service. Miss Blackford, of Plainfield, gave a message from the Young Woman's Society missionary, Miss Jennie V. Hughes. Hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," was sung. Miss Isabelle Waidman made an address on "What We Owe Our Young Women." A song service by the choir followed. The address of the day was by Mrs. Mary C. Meek, of Kwala Lumpor, Malaysia, a returned missionary, who explained the conditions existing in that country and told of the great work being done there. Committee reports were made, and, after prayer by Mr. Knowles, adjournment was taken.

I. P. Runyon a Member of Committee

As Craig A. Marsh, who has identified himself with the Plainfield Bar Association, will sail for Europe on July 5, he said that it would be impossible for him to serve as a member of the commmittee appointed to draft bylaws and report at the next meeting. In consquence Isaac P. Runyon was made a member of that committee in his place.

Sunday-School Teachers' Picnic.

The members of the Plainfield Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union will hold their annual picnic tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Brundage in Cranford. They will take the trolley car leaving the Watchung avenue stand at 9:30 o'clock.

Injured Motorman Leaves Hospital.

Edward Drake, the trolley motorman, who received a severe electric shock last Saturday, while operating a car on West Front street, was discharged from the hospital, yesterday, and returned home. He expects to go to work in a few days.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy left today for Newportville, Bucks county, Pa., to visit one of his boyhood friends, Dr. Henry Birkey.

NEGRO CROOK A MYSTERY

Refuses to Make Statement Regarding Himself to the Police.

ONLY GIVES HIS NAME

Tells Who He Is and Where He Claims He Lives, Then Closes Up Like a Trap—Chief Kiely Investigating.

After removing the padlock from his lips only sufficiently to let his name, age and address to escape, the negro burglar captured after an unsuccessful attempt to rob A. W. Kleinecke's house on Monday, relapsed into stonyy silence again yesterday afternoon. Hopeful from the prisoner's attitude yesterday morning, when he seemed to be on the verge of unbosoming himself, Chief Kiely expected a detailed statement from him, and the head sleuth was correspondingly disappointed over the crook's refusal to say anything of his record.

The man gave his name as Fred Wilson, forty-seven years, a laborer, living at 16 Minetta lane, New York. Minetta lane is in the heart of a negro colony. That was all he would say. He was put through all the degrees of cross examination, but steadfastly refused to say anything of his past.

Chief Kiely had him remanded this morning, pending investigation. The police of New York and all the surrounding cities will be furnished with photographs and descriptions of him, and the chief expects to know a good deal about him in a few days. He is convinced, from the prisoner's attitude alone, that he is down on the records of some department, and his criminal pedigree, if he has one, will be certain to turn up after a day or two of inquiry.

The first step in the investigation was taken by Chief Kiely this morning, when he went to New York to find out if the police there knows his man. Wilson was photographed for the Rogues' Galley yesterday afternoon, and the chief took the pictures with him. He believes the New York authorities know Wilson. If the prisoner turns out to be an old hand, he will receive a severer sentence than if his attempt on the Kleinecke house was his first bit of crooked work.

SEWER WORK PROGRESSING.

Contractor Callahan Has Large Gang of Men Employed.

Foster Callahan, the contractor for the new extension to the sanitary system of sewers, is making excellent progress with his work. Thus far a portion of Sixth street, east from Richmond street, has been completed to accommodate Daniel Dugan, who is renovating his houses; also Columbia avenue and Leland avenue, connecting Columbia and North avenue. Other portions completed include East Seventh street, between Leland and Belvidere avenues; Park lane and the men are now at work iu Park Terrace.

Mr. Callahan has been on the job every day since the work was started and in many instances personally does some of the more difficult parts of it. He has a large gang of men employed and with a continuance of favorable weather there will be no difficulty in completing the contract at the specified time. Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett is much pleased with the work thus far.

Knights to Donate a Medal.

Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, has announced that beginning next year it will annually donate a gold medal to be contested for by the pupils of St. Mary's parochial school. The prize list at the school has now become quite large, among the other donors of medals and money for excellence in studies being Rev. Father P. E. Smyth, Mrs. E. Slevin, Mrs. E. A. Gross, George J. Tobin, C. A. Faust and Messrs. Swartz and Kirwin.

Steam Roller In Commission.

The city steam roller, which has been out of commission for some time because of a broken shaft hanger, was put to work yesterday on South avenue, where the progress of the repairs has been delayed in consequence. The Public Service Corporation would like to borrow the steam roller to finish up its work on Front street, but the street committee has made no decision as yet in the matter.

Somerset Club's "Big Doin's."

The Somerset Club's "open house," set for tomorrow night, promises to be one of the events of the summer in the borough. About 500 invitations have been issued and from the interest manifested the majority will be responded to. Part of the entertainment is to be furnished by members of the Primrose minstrel troupe, a number of them having volunteered to attend.

Following an illness that first affected his early in the year, Samuel D. Frazee, the widely known musician, died at 1:35 this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Voehl, of West Front street. He had been semi-conscious for the past two or three days and his death had been expected momentarily during that time. Although he suffered greatly the last few days, the forttitude that characterized his whole life was apparent to the watchers and he made no complaint.

Samuel D. Frazee, or plain "Sam," as he was known almost from one end of New Jersey to the other, was born in Plainfield seventy years ago and had lived here practically all his life. When but a mere boy he showed a natural aptitude for the violin and he made a study of the instrument, becoming exceptionally proficient. He adopted music as a profession and "Sam" and his "fiddle" were features of almost every gathering in Plainfield up until a comparatively few years ago. When public dances were given no one gave the advertising cards a second thought unless "Music by Frazee" was a part of the wording. His operations were not confined to this city as he was sought after by clubs or societies in all parts of the State and his name is as familiar in Hunterdon or Somerset counties as it is in Union.

In the days when travelling medicine shows were important organizations, "Sam" and several associates journeyed by wagon from New Jersey to California selling "Flagg's Relief" and "Wizard Oil," medicines that were "guaranteed to cure almost every ill that human flesh is heir to." The combination boasted an orchestra led by "Professor Sam Frazee" and the musicians entertained the crowd between exhortions as to the merits of the patent preparation. "Sam" also sold bottles among the willing purchasers and further helped things along by giving a song and dance now and then.

The profits of the trip amounted to many thousands of dollars and "Sam" invested part of his share with his brother, James Frazee, now of Trenton, in the erection of the "Rock House," the big summer hotel at Washington's Rock. It started out successfully but was destroyed by fire and with it went the greater part of the Frazee brothers' money. The hotel was never rebuilt although there were many schemes projected. His father, Anson Frazee, kept the old Buena Vista hotel on West Front street where Shaw's drug store is now.

In after years, "Sam" divided his time between furnishing orchestral music and working in local hotels. He continued to play the violin until last January when his illness first mentioned itself and he left the field to younger men.

When a young man, "Sam" belonged to the Plainfield fire department and almost all the local clubs but he gave them up one by one. He was a clever entertainer and a most happy, genial disposition, these proving important factors in making his so popular.

Besides Mrs. Voehl, there are surviving two daughters, Mrs. Anthony Kregar, of Liberty street, and Mrs. Sarah Stillwell, of Long Island, also two sons, Frank T. Frazee, of New York, and Sidney E. Frazee, a driver in the local fire department.

The funeral will be held at Cole's undertaking parlors tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Jury Acquits Colored Woman.

Mrs. Agnes Stewart, colored, of Westfield, was acquitted this morning in the Union County Court on a charge of assault, alleged to have been made on Leo Leek, a thirteen-year-old boy, of that place. The lad, it as said, provoked the attack by calling the defendant names, and that in the scrimmage he slapped the woman's face.

TO SUE SCHOOL BOARD

Local Dealer in Second-hand Material Alleges Architect Broke Agreement.

AUTHORITIES "KICKED"

Planned to Build New Market School of Old Brick and Lumber, Contractor Declares.

Because of what he calls a repudiation of the contract, Alex Kane, who was engaged to furnish 130,000 second-hand brick and $700 worth of second-hand lumber for the new $11,700 High School at New Market, has retained S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., and demands that he be allowed to furnish the materials or else be paid for them.

According to Mr. Kane's story, C. Powell Karr, the architect for the new building, gave him every assurance, both verbal and written, that he would furnish the brick and lumber in question. George Dennick, of Elizabeth, who received the contract for the mason work, being the lowest bidder, paid Mr. Kane $75 on account of 100,000 brick, and the contracts, Mr. Kane says, were awarded with the understanding as stated above.

Then the Board of Education of Piscataway Township "kicked" because second-hand material was to be used and objection was made to Mr. Karr. The members wanted new materials and it was made to appear that they wanted Mr. Kane to furnish new instead of second-hand stuff. This he has refused to do and says that the contractors will either use his bricks and lumber, as agreed, or they will pay for the same.

Mr. Kane was to receive $5.75 per thousand for 130,000 brick, delivered, and $6 per thousand for 100,000 or less, and the price agreed upon for the lumber was $700. Mr. Kane says that he is still holding the brick and the lumber, although he has had opportunities to sell. Under the circumstances considerable delay is occasioned in starting the work of building the school. Unless the matter is adjusted soon the school will not be ready for the fall opening in September.

BAPTIST WOMEN HOLD A LAWN FESTIVAL.

Park Avenue Congregation Raising Funds for a Carpet.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a successful lawn fete on the grounds about the church, last night, for the purpose of raising funds with which to purchase a new carpet for the edifice. It is believed that about $75 will be realized as profit.

The lawn, which was illuminated with Japanese lanterns, was occupied with several booths decorated appropriately. The mystery table, candy and cake booths were trimmed with the national colors and thte lemonade well was made attractive by the use of greens and a profusion of lemons which hung in clusters.

Those in charge of the mystery table were Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, Mrs. Walter Freeman, Mrs. Harry Johnson and Mrs. George E. Hall. Those at the candy booth were Mrs. S. A. Krom and Miss Essie Thompson. Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon and Mrs. Charles VanWinkle were at the cake booth and Miss Alice Brown and Miss Nellie Miner presided at the lemonade well. Mrs. Adelbert von-Brakle and Mrs. W. S. Lowry had charge of the ice cream booth. Those who served as waitresses were the Misses Violet VanWinkle, Hillyer, Giles, Whitney, Cuming, Stryker, Peterson, Brokaw and Harral.

An extra attraction last night was the auto trip given by George E. Hall in his large touring car. For a small fee Mr. Hall would give any one desiring a trip about the city.

The affair was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society, the officers of which are as follows: President, Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom; first vice president, Mrs. H. H. Moore; second vice president, Mrs. Lottie A. Udell; secretary, Mrs. Walter Freeman; treasurer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson.

TRAYNOR ACQUITTED OF SPEAKEASY CHARGE

PROSECUTION FAILS TO PROVE NORTH PLAINFIELD LICENSE VALUELESS HERE

Peter Traynor, one of the five men gathered in by the police last week under charges of selling liquor illegally, was acquitted by the jury in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday. Jules Mastodonate and Thomas Brown, last of the five arraigned, changed their plea to nonvult, and were remanded for sentence.

Traynor's case involved a point of law raised by the prosecution. He is a driver for Mrs. Lena Hoerster, a wholesale dealer on Somerset street. It was charged that he sold goods on this side of the brook. Robert Yettman, John Seay, James Burke and Frank Gillette testified to giving orders for stuff to Traynor, but the goods were not delivered until from an hour to—in one case—a week afterwards. The defense was that Traynor simply acted as driver for Mrs. Hoerster and only delivered, as the testimony showed, on order. Mrs. Hoerster's license in North Plainfield was offered in evidence and admitted in spite of the objections of the prosecution. The prosecutor contended that the North Plainfield license gave Mrs. Hoerster no right to sell on this side of the brook. The court said it couldn't see the law in just that way, and the jury's verdict showed that it also failed to see the force of the prosecutor's reasoning.

Chief Kiely was disappointed over the result of the case.

"I wish the case had gone the other way and been appealed, so that the question could be definitely decided. It strikes me as queer that anybody with a license from North Plainfield can sell here."

"There is nothing odd about it," said Lawyer W. L. Hetfield, Sr., who with John P. Owens, defended Traynor and the other four.

"The law governing the delivery of original packages on order covers the case. Do you imagine it is wrong for the big department stores, the Kentucky distillers or the Milwaukee brewers to deliver the goods your order from them—as has been done and is being done right along! The Traynor case was exactly parallel. They would get the same sort of decision if they carried it up."

The four defendants whose cases are still to be finally disposed of, will be arraigned for sentence on July 11. Thomas Brown, who pleaded non-vult yesterday, is the son of James Brown, convicted last week.

ELEPHANTS BREAK UP CHURCH SERVICE

EVADE KEEPERS AND STARTLE COLORED CONGREGATION.

ANIMALS CREATE A PANIC.

Make Their Escape While Being Loaded Into Train at Cincinnati—Are Recaptured After Causing Considerable Excitement.

Cincinnati.—An elephant hunt engaged an army of men and a company of circus attaches from early morning until six o'clock the other evening in the territory north of the city. While being transferred from the winter quarters of the circus to a railroad a herd of 20 elephants escaped from their keepers. Part of the herd escaped into the front door of a colored Baptist church near by while services were in progress. The congregation dispersed through the windows, and the parson slipped out at a rear stairway to find refuge in the belfry. The animals scattered in all directions, trumpeting and mowing down fences in their mad rush. Some of them pulled up small trees and shrubbery. Most of the animals were retaken by the middle of the afternoon, but there were many wild scrambles by pedestrians to get out of the way.

The animals, after their long stay in winter quarters, were rather chary of stepping on the ponderous runway and entering the cars. Finally one elephant was induced to go up into the car, and the others, emboldened, were about to follow, when an express train came along at full speed on the opposite track, the engine whistling as it passed through.

The terrified elephant in the car charged down the runway through its companions, knocking the attendants right and left, and in a moment there was a stampede. To add to the trumpeting and squealing of the monster beasts was a continuous clanking of chains.

Frightened pedestrians, seeing the elephants coming on a run, sought safety wherever they could, and the streets were soon deserted by all but the attendants. Fences were pulled up, lamp posts overturned and business signs thrown helter-skelter.

At the First Baptist Colored church, the congregation had just finished a hymn, and the minister was giving out the text when pandemonium seemed to have broken loose in the church yard. One elephant with long tusks, the patriarch of the herd, butted his head against the door, which crashed in, and an instant later the beast's head was shoved into the church, and the long trunk waved about threateningly.

Several members of the Sunday school class saw the animal's head and trunk, and, imagining that Satan had called either to admonish them or to take them with him, rent the air with their infantile shrieks. The elephant then withdrew his head and, taking a place in front of his companions, commenced a slow gallop about the church edifice, a trick they had been taught in winter quarters. Women screamed and several fainted, although Pastor Francis endeavored to allay their fears.

The members of the congregation cowered in terror as the elephants circled the building, their outstretched trunks pulling down limbs of trees and hurling the benches and chairs in the yard to splinters.

After their little run-about recreation the elephants proceeded to dig up the church yard and other yards in the vicinity and made them look as if a number of laborers had been at work with picks and spades. Finally the keepers arrived on the scene and went to work to calm the animals, but they were so excited that this took some time. Several of them, however, obeyed the command "Dukes!" which means in elephant language to lie down, and these animals were formed into a line. The elephants were, after a short while, under control, with the exception of five, one of whom was the old animal that led the outbreak. With four other elephants he disappeared in the direction of Carthage Heights and as soon as word could be sent to the fair grounds men on horseback, with ropes and chains, started after them.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Miss Hall Inherits Artistic Soul and is Forging Ahead of Her Art.

HER STUDIES ABROAD

Description of Plainfield Girl's Efforts In Paris—Daughter of Florence Howe Hall.

The Philadelphia North American publishes the following story concerning Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Prescott Hall, of this city:

Many American art students have won success and attained greater or less distinction in Paris, yet few hold such an enviable record as Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, who has now returned to her native land after a career abroad that is rich in interest.

As the granddaughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Miss Hall inherited an eminent position and an artistic soul. Through her own efforts, she has established a reputation in Paris as one of the most promising women painters, especially in her chosen field of landscape.

While living abroad this talented girl has been particularly prominent in shaping the destinies of the American Women's Art Association of Paris, of which she has been secretary, treasurer and vice president. To other students, especially the new arrivals at the shrine of art, her familiarity with every phase of American and French art and literature has made her friendship especially valuable.

One of Miss Hall's most treasured posessions is a sketch made in Santo Domingo many years ago by her grandmother. Many of those to whom she has shown it never knew before that the famous authoress of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" ever cherished artistic aspirations.

Miss Hall's mother is the second daughter of Julia Ward Howe, while her father is a nephew of Anne Hall, of New York, one of the most famous miniature painters of her day.

If hard work brings success, Miss Hall deserves all the honors that she has won.

Had she been inclined, she might have remained at home and passed her days as a butterfly of fashion. Wealth and acknowledged social position were hers, as well as a family prestige such as comparatively few young women enjoy. The call of art, however, was more attractive than any other consideration.

It has always been the aim of Miss Hall to perfect herself in whatever she has undertaken. In illustration of this trait, when she went to Paris she determined to master French as the first requisite to success.

To do this, she studied diction every day for two years under masters from the Comedie Francaise. Not only is she able now to speak the language with faultless accent, but has acquired a thorough knowledge of the French character, and is able to grasp the most enthusiastic art conceptions of the masters.

It is perhaps in her keen observation more than anything else that Miss Hall shows herself Julia Ward Howe's granddaughter. Indeed, an interesting study of heredity might be made from this gifted girl and her work.

Most of all is she the granddaughter of Samuel G. Howe. The poetry of that wonderful character seems to shine in the silvery light that subtly floods the simple, noble scenes that Miss Hall always chooses to render. They are full of the same romanticism that carried the young American to fight beside his beloved hero, Bryon, in far-off Greece.

In the peculiarly big understanding of nature, in her wonderfully intimate renderings of earth, one sees the descendant of the educator of deaf and dumb Laura Bridgeman.

But in the selection of a "genre" of art that so seldom appeals to women; in her serious manner of painting, Miss Hall shows her grandmother's strong mentality.

It is not generally known that Julia Ward Howe herself at one time had artistic aspirations. To her artist granddaughter has fallen her most ambitious sketch, made in Santo Domingo many years ago. Miss Hall exhibits it with much pride and a pretty amusement.

Of all these things she talks interestingly, but it is difficult to keep the conversation to herself and her own life, because of the amusing stories that will come up from her wonderfully varied experience.

"My studies in Paris began ten years ago," said Miss Hall, "with three solid, uneventful years of academic training at the Dalaclause School, where Callot, Delance and, occasionally, L'Hermite were our critics."

After five years of this work, the young woman returned home and spent a year studying with Sargent Kendall in New York. Then she went again to Paris, with the fixed purpose of devoting herself entirely to landscape work, for which she had always felt a preference.

Since then her life has been an ideal one from an artistic, and, indeed, from any, standpoint. Taking an occasional turn in the schools, working under such great artists as Menard and Thaulow, in the beautiful French country, she has varied her days by traveling over Europe in company with her aunt, Mrs. Ward Howe Elliott.

An enchanted time for the young artist was a season spent in Rome, when she uncle, Frank Elliott, was painting his decoration for the Boston Library. Queen Marguerita, with many members of the court, came to see the finished picture in his studio.

But even with wealth and social position at her command, Miss Hall felt that she must be at work. After her return to Paris she took the first prize for drawing at the Delacluse School. During the last two years, however, she has worked entirely in her own studio, with the privilege, fully appreciated by the young artist, of submitting her work to Rene Menard for criticism.

Some of Miss Hall's most amusing stories are told of this master and his notably keen wit.

"One of the first drawings that I took to Monsieur Menard represented an apple tree in blossom, about which fluttered two very rosy Cupids. The whole scene was flooded in the light of a glorious pink sunset.

"Monsieur Menard regarded my precious sketch for a moment with that irresistible twinkle of his eye. I knew what was coming, and blushed to watch the picture. 'C'est bien rose' ('It is very pink,)', said Menard, thoughtfully, moving his head with each drawnout word. Then he looked up and, seeing that my color was correspondingly so, he laughed heartily, which broke the ice, and, of course, my confusion.

"Another time, just after Conder, the English painter, had given his first exhibition in Paris of those exquisite prismatic color effects, in which Watteau ladies, Cupids and fountains disport themselves in sweet irresponsibility, I took to the 'cher maitre' a garden group—to put it mildly, the style was Conderesque.

"Once more the twinkle. 'Now, could you but see those paintings by the young English artist, Mr. Conder'—began monsieur, in that thoughtful tone. I never heard what would have happened if I had, for we both laughed, so that he never got any farther.

"At the last criticism that I had from Monsieur Menard, he recalled, with amusement, these early recollections, and I was almost sorry that my work interested him more, because it amused him less. He advised me to go home and work out my own salvation, as he now considered me in 'tres bon voie'—on the right road, in other words."

Critics consider that Miss Hall's best work is shown in a moonlight scene called "The Oaks." The drawing here is also excellent. Many people have admired a certain vigorous feeling shown in "The Storm." As a drawing, this picture is particularly good in value.

It is understood that Miss Hall plans to have an exhibition of her paintings and drawings of French landscapes in one of the New York galleries during the early autumn. Wherever she has exhibited in France he work has called forth favorable comment from the French critics.

After last year's Salon she was invited to send her pictures to the exclusive little exhibition of Angers, France, an honor seldom conferred upon foreigners. It was soon after this that a Rouen critic said, in speaking of the young American: "Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, an interpreter of silvery landscape, whose work we must not fail to follow."

In her return, America not only gains a promising artist, but a beautiful and charming young figure will be added to the social and literary life of her native land.

The only comment that the prince of gamblers, Richard Canfield, has to make is that he has been successful. Probably his greatest achievement has been his success in keeping out of the penitentiary.

John F. Dryden is determined to stick in the fight for re-election to the United States Senate and both George L. Record and E. C. Stokes are equally determined that he shall not go back. While they are debating the subject, John W. Griggs is sawing wood.

It is encouraging to hear that ice pirates in at least one city have received their just dues. The managers of five separate companies in Toledo, convicted of entering into a combination in restraint of trade, have been sentenced to serve one year in the work house and to pay a fine of $5,000 each. As soon as the court passed sentence on the prisoners, the retail price of ice dropped from thirty to forty per cent.

Former Assemblyman Fordyce, candidate for State senator on the Republican ticket in Middlesex county, has hurled defiance at Boss Strong and his gang appealing directly to the people and pledging himself to their interests if elected to office. Red Bank Parishioners and Residents Make Gift.

Red Bank, June 27.—Rev. James A. Reynolds, pastor of St. James' Roman Catholic church, began Monday night his twenty-first year as a priest, and the occasion was commemorated by the presentation of "Kathleen Mavourneen" in St. James' Hall. The play was given by the St. James' Dramatic Club, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Reid, summer residents of the Highlands.

Between the second and third acts Mr. Reid called Father Reynolds to the stage and presented him with an auto, which was purchased by a subscription among the members of the parish and other residents of this place and vicinity. Father Reynolds was graduated from Seton Hall College, and has been pastor of churches at Princeton, Sea Bright, Mt. Holly and Red Bank. He has been pastor of St. James' church for fteen years, and during his pastorate he has erected one of the prettiest church edifices in New Jersey.

LIQUOR LAW PROVISIONS

How It Will Affect Dealers in the City and Borough.

SOME RADICAL CHANGES

New Statute To Go In Effect on Fourth of July—The Bishops' Bill.

The question has been raised in Plainfield as to how the new bishops' liquor law, which goes into effect July 4, affects this city. The following gives details of the matter, and a reading of it will inform Plainfielders just how the new act will operate here.

Section 1 of the Werts act is amended by striking out the words "to be drunk on or about the premises where sold."

As this section treats of the licensing of inns and taverns, the inference must naturally be that persons may sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors in quantities less than one quart to be drunk elsewhere than "on or about the premises," as was formerly the law.

Section 3 as amended does not change the law as it now exists here.

The language of the new law simply makes it plainer that a retail dealer cannot sell in quantities exceeding one quart without having in addition to his retail license a wholesale license.

Neither can a person having a wholesale license sell in quantities less than one quart, to be drunk on or about tthe premises, without having a retail license in addition to his wholesale license.

This section also prohibits the granting of a license to a person who is not a citizen of the United States, or who has not lived in Plainfield one year. Such a law has existed here for a number of years.

By section 10 the age limit is made 21, which is the same as has been in force in Plainfield for three years.

No person having a license can permit a boy or girl under the age of 21 to loiter or frequent his place, or sell to any boy or girl under 21 for himself, herself or any other person.

Hereafter it will only require the complaint and affidavit of two citizens to bring a case before the excise board or other court for violation of the liquor law. Previously it was three. A conviction must be secured, however, to warrant the revocation of the license. Previously the law was silent upon this point. In the event of a revocation of a license, the person whose license is revoked cannot again be licensed for a period of one year, and no license can be granted the same place for a like period.

Section 11 contains most of the new features, and by its provisions all dealers and saloonkeepers having a license to sell in less quantities than one quart must confine their sales strictly to one room, which must be on the ground floor or basement, and all screens, blinds and shutters on the interior of the bar or business room must be removed, affording a complete view of the interior of such room. Screens used to obscure toilets are not preferred to in this paragraph.

This section excludes from its provisions:

An inn or tavern;
A hotel with at least ten spare rooms and beds for the accommodation of boarders;
A restaurant where the business of furnishing meals to the public for compensation is carried on; and which said restaurant is conducted and operated on more than one floor or story of the building;
A picnic or recreation grounds;
A building with a bowling alley;
And a building occupied entirely by a regularly organized club or association.

In other words, all other places except those enumerated above must conduct their sales in one room only, while the others can sell in other rooms than the bar or business room.

All places, except those referred to above must draw all screens, blinds and shutters on Sunday and election days in such a manner as to afford an unobstructed view of the entire interior of the bar or business room.

The wholesale fee, after July 4, will be $500.

POLICE HOPES BLIGHTED.

Mayor Fagan Has Rescinded a Raise In Salaries.

Jersey City's Board of Police Commissioners at its meeting Monday night passed a resolution increasing the salaries of the heads of the departments as follows: Chief, from $3,000 to $3,500 per year; inspector, from $2,300 to $2,800 captains, from $2,000 to $2,500; sergeants, from $1,350 to $1,500; detective-sergeants, from $1,300 to $1,500; roundsmen, from $1,100 to $1,300.

When Mayor Fagan heard what the board had done he sent for Commissioners Potts and McNulty and told them that was no justification for the act. He insisted that the resolution should be rescinded and yesterday the board met and carried out the Mayor's wish. The joy of the heads of the departments was short-lived.

CONVENTION OF PAINTERS

State Association to Meet at Asbury Park Next Month

IMPORTANT MATTERS

Trade Schools and Insurance Rates Among Them — The Programme.

The annual convention of the New Jersey State Association of Master Painters and Decorators will be held in the Beach Auditorium, Asbury Park, on July 10 to 13, inclusive. Questions of much importance to the association and the trade in general are to come up for discussion, and there will be addresses which promise to be very interesting.

The association has been prospering and extending its sphere of influence and now has about sixteeen local associations, each of which will send five or six delegates to the convention. The sessions of the delegates are to be held in a large room at the north end of the Auditorium while the main section of the building will be given over to exhibitors. These will include manufacturers and dealers from all parts of the United States. If their display of past years be any criterion, they will furnish one of the most interesting features of the convention. Persons not connected with the trade will find in the display a great deal that will be worthy of their attention. The interior of the main Auditorium will present much the appearance of a food show, or an indoor fair. The exhibitors desiring to show their good feeling toward the master craftsmen of New Jersey, have obtained the privilege of an evening during which they will entertain the delegates. Just what this evening will be or what form of entertainment will be chosen has not been announced as yet.

Among the instructive features of the programme will be an illustrated lecture on "Color Making," by Dr. Martin Szamatolski. Papers will be read as follows: "How Can Masters Best Co-operate?" John B. Keim, of Jersey City; "The Lessons to Be Learned From Recent Labor Controversies," E. H. Smith, of Paterson; "What Has Been Accomplished by Our State Association?" A. H. Lorton, of Orange; paper on a subject to be announced later. Louis L. Drake, secretary of the National Paint, Oil and Varnish Association; "The Work Undertaken by Our International Committee on Materials and Supplies," A. A. Sippell, of Newark; paper, subject to be announced later, by "The Veteran Painter," E. P. Edwards, of Elizabeth; "Painters and Decorators of Other Times," J. G. Cowles, of Westfield.

One important matter to be brought up at the convention concerns legislation. The master painters are about to have drafted a bill providing for the establishing of trade schools in the large cities of the State. It is the intention to work for this bill at the next Legislature, provided the convention approves the plan.

Another question of importance to be brought to the attention of the delegates is that of insurance rates. By some of the members of the association it is deemed practicable and desirable to form a co-operative organization, with the purpose of enabling the master painters and decorators to carry their own insurance.

Party Customs.

When a "regular" asked for the honest opinion of a Union county independent as to whether under party usage Senator Dryden was not deserving of a second term, the reply was instantly forthcoming, "He never deserved a first term."—Newark News.

Justice to Mr. Angleman.

Winfield S. Angleman had no connection with the movement started by F. J. Blatz and V. W. Nash, Jr., to organize a bar association and was not out of harmony with the scheme for the reorganization of the Plainfield Bar Association.

FORETASTE OF ST. MARY'S SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

Entertainment Features Have a Matinee Presentation at Theatre.

Before a large audience, the commencement of St. Mary's parochial school, minus the features of graduation, were presented yesterday afternoon. The programme did not include the salutatory, the valedictory, presentation of graduates, of diplomas, of prizes and the address. These will be on the programme tonight, when the actual commencement takes place. Yesterday's presentation was in the nature of a public dress rehearsal.

It was highly creditable to the Sisters, to Walter Sherwin and to Madame Menzeli Bartlett, who trained the children in their roles. They all knew their parts, and the programme went off with unchanging smoothness.

The exercises are the most elaborate and spectacular the school has ever held. All the departments take part in it, from the kindergarten to the commercial. The programme is opened by the primary department, after an overture by Miss Mary A. Smith, the organist. The salutatory, composed by Miss Mary Veronica Murray, will be read by Mollie Traynor; song, "A Baby's Cares," will follow; "The Great Baby Show," an amusing skit, in which the little folks take part, comes next; and then a song, followed by the kindergarten graduation; after a song, the diplomas will be presented to the tots, and Marion Kane will deliver the valedictory.

The programme of the grammar department is long and full of features. Action songs and drills, besides a drama and an operetta figure in it. The drama is "Grain of Salt," by Schindler, in which the parts are taken by Thomas Charles Harding, James Francis Cumisky, James Joseph Smith, Francis Joseph Casey, Henry James Forristel, Thomas John Lappin, Edward Bernard O'Loughlin, John David Barry, Thomas Leo Bebout, Edward James Hanrahan, Edwin L. Sullivan, John C. Traynor, W. H. Clarkson and L. P. Nichols.

In the other dramatic offering, "The Waiters of the Nation," the parts are taken by Masters Julien Linke, William Casey, William Russ, Edward Hanrahan, W. Sullivan and John Vasey.

The senior graduates are the Misses Elizabeth Jeannette Brown, Elizabeth Agnes Casey, Anna Monica Callahan, Margaret Teresa Flatley, Jeanette Elizabeth Hand, Mary Veronica Murray and Henry James Forristel. The valedictorian is Miss Brown.

The address of the occasion will be delivered by Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's. A number of scholarship prizes will be presented.

FIRST BAND CONCERT FRIDAY NIGHT, JULY 6.

LaVere Arranges Series of Free Open Air Entertainments.

After working industriously for the past few weeks, Ben LaVere has secured sufficient funds to begin a series of band concerts and the first will be conducted Friday night July 6, on the grounds used in previous years. A new grandstand is to be erected and the patronage accorded it will determine how long the concerts will last. The money on hand is just sufficient to pay for building it and defray the cost of perhaps two entertainments.

In view of the fact that the "working capital" will be so small, Mr. LaVere and his associates have decided to increase the price of admission to the seats from ten cents to fifteen cents. In this way perhaps enough will be secured to keep things going all summer. The stand will prove much more costly to build than in previous years as the price of lumber has advanced greatly.

In return for the extra fee charged, Ben has promised to give the best concerts he has ever arranged. His band will consist of only the best soloists and talented New York singers. On the opening night he will have the very popular "Billy" Redmond and "Eddie" Weston. The former will sing two new waltz selections from the Whitmark house and Weston has two sure winners in a march number, "The Stars, the Stripes and You," and a swinging melody, "Love Me and the World Is Mine."

ELIZABETH TO FIGHT EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.

The information leaked out yesterday that the liquor dealers of Elizabeth are prepared to certiorari any appointments which Judge Edward S. Atwater may make for the new Excise Commission under the "bishops' bill," which becomes operative as a law after July 4. Richard V. Lindabury, of counsel for the English and German liquor interests in this city, has advised them that this course is practicable.

The fact that the law gives power to a county judge to make appointments for a city board comes under the head of special legislation, in the opinion of Mr. Lindabury, and for that reason such appointments would be unconstitutional. He believes that no State law has the right to delegate to a county officer the right to appoint a municipal body.

LESSONS OF M'KINLEY'S LIFE.

Late President's Career Spoken of by Senator Dolliver in Address.

Hoboken, June 27.—Lyric theatre was thronged Monday night to hear J. P. Dolliver, United States Senator, of Iowa, and an uncle of C. M. Dolliver, of Plainfield, deliver an address to the graduates of the Eagan School. The statesman from the West drew a lesson from the life of the late President William McKinley, in which he declared "we ought to make everything possible out of a successful career like that of William McKinley." He said that the late President was simply an average man, and that he was one of the great mass of eminent public men who had risen from poverty to affluence and the confidence of their fellow citizens.

In the course of his remarks, Senator Dolliver said: "Now, I don't know whether you have noticed it, but there has grown up in this country, within your lifetime, an organized criticism against the whole character of society and government as we have inherited it from our fathers. Now, that criticism is not directed against the defects of society, which are numerous enough, although we devoutly believe that a good many of them are going to be solved, but the criticisms are directed against the foundations upon which the entire fabric of our social and political order have rested for innumerable generations."

Mr. Dolliver Weds Tonight.

Miss Alberta Elizabeth Reiber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Reiber, of New York, and Charles Marvin Dolliver, Esq., son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, of Fairview avenue, will be married at 6:15 o'clock this evening at the Thirty-third street Baptist church, New York. Rev. E. S. Holloway, the pastor, will officiate. A number of Plainfield relatives and friends will witness the ceremony.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

George Primrose and his big minstrel company, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, will present minstrelsy in its up-to-date form by the largest organization ever toured in this country. Mr. Primrose has shown good judgment in surrounding himself with a host of well known comedians and vocalists. The stage settings for the first part are of great magnificence, the costuming throughout is costly and elegant. In addition to the large number of vocalists and comedians, a complete operatic orchestra of soloists under the direction of Prof. Charles Prokop are carried.

The special train will leave points on the Lehigh Valley east of Sayre on July 12th.

Tickets will cover all expenses, including sleeping car berths, meals, hotels, etc., thus relieving the passenger from any annoyance of making individual arrangements.

ONLY ONE "BEST."

Plainfield People Give Credit Where Credit Is Due.

People of Plainfield who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Plainfield. Here's Plainfield testimony:

Andrew Mattis, carpenter, of 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J. says: "I have been troubled for years with dull backache and pain in the back of my head, caused by kidney complaint. I was hurt severely some time ago by falling from a scaffold and the physicians thought my spine was injured. I think that fall injured my kidneys. As nothing else that I tried seem to help my back or kidneys, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills and got a supply at Randolph's pharmacy. I have now taken three boxes, and find that the backache and headaches have disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to case it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Axienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

"RUSSIA A REGULAR HELL."

Wealthy Merchant, Now in New Brunswick, Describes Native Land.

New Brunswick, June 27.—Among the recent Jewish immigrants to this country from Russia were Louis Lander and his father and mother, who are now living with Mix Schwartzmann, on Church street, this city. The Landers left Russia about five weeks ago. Their last residence in Russia was a place called Belles, to which they went after being driven out of Kishineff after the massacre. The persecution followed them. At Kishineff Mr. Lander lost his business, worth $40,000.

"Russia is a regular hell," said Mr. Lander Saturday. "The conditions there are ten times worse than have been described here. During the Kishineff massacre hundreds were killed with axes, and large nails were driven into their eyes. One of the tortures practised there is to put an iron pipe down a person's throat until he is dead. As to the moral conditions there, especially in the hospitals, they are worse than in the lowest dens of New York."

DRYDEN WILL NOT RETIRE.

He Does Not Intend to Give Up Senate Fight.

Trenton, June 27.—United States Senator John F. Dryden had a conference with Gov. Stokes here Monday night before proceeding to Washington. This set all sorts of rumors in circulation in the State. Some persons thought they saw in the visit an intention on the part of the Senator to abandon his candidacy for the United States Senate to succeed himself.

Those persons who are in a position to know pronounce the stories of Senator Dryden's coming retirement from the fight for re-election ridiculous. A poll of the political situation shows that Senator Dryden is not without strong support in the majority of the counties which are needed for his election.

HELD FOR ORANGE CRASH.

Edward A. Patterson, of No. 134 Hudson street, Newark, was held yesterday by Judge Ten Eyck, in the Essex County Court of Common Pleas, on a charge of manslaughter, the complainant being Chief of Police Bamford, of West Orange. Bail in $1,000 was furnished in Patterson's behalf.

Patterson was acting as conductor of the electric car that ran away down the side of the Orange Mountain last Sunday and crashed into another car at the foot of the mountain, causing the death of Patrick Burns.

It was announced by Chief Detective Hummell, of Prosecutor Young's staff, that a similar complaint has been made against John Quayle, of No. 44 Central place, Orange, division superintendent, and that a warrant will be served upon him as soon as he is in condition to leave the Orange Hospital.

Ordered to Hospital Corps.

Private Charles F. Phillips, of Company K, has been transferred to the hospital and ambulance corps of the regiment by order of Col. Collins. He enlisted on June 12.

Baseball and General Sports

By Geo. E. Firstbrook.

DIAMOND DUST.

If it doesn't rain Saturday there'll be a ball game between Wesfiteld and Plainfield. That's O. K. every one will agree because they read it in the column last night.

Three weeks without a ball game. Did such a thing ever happen in Plainfield before, in midsumme almost, or when the weather makes you feel summerish? This being the undisputed case it must be surmised that the appetites of the fans must be of the faminishing order. With these conditions the signs point to a big crowd and the spilling over of the enthusiasm barrel next Saturday.

The Westfield game will be a good tonic for the weary and faint-hearted clique also. Once upon a time a Plainfield-Westfield game would bring out close to 2,000 souls and 4,000 eyes. That was the time Plainfield played second fiddle to Mt. Ararat and occupied the cart-tail position. In front could be seen Denman and his crew enjoying the laugh as winners can only do. This season it is a case of the "merry, ha, ha," all around.

To awaken the interest here there is only one thing that seems to be the remedy. Take the present team, which stands undefeated, and substitute it with a punky aggregation, a bunch of rags, that Somerville and Westfield can lick. Being the underdog in base ball seems to be the only thing that will wake up the subsided enthusiasm here.

This is no josh. History proves it. When Plainfield was being licked time after time by Somerville fifteen years ago enthusiasm knew no bounds. There was no knocks. When the Crescent League management got together and put a first class team which succeeded in besting the Somerville's, interest lagged before the season was over. As every one knows the league race ended in a tie between Plainfield and Somerville, the deciding game being played here, and won by the Crescents in the presence of a paltry crowd of 500 spectators, where 2,000 or 3,000 should have turned out to celebrate the event in other towns.

Then base ball took a drop and for several years there was much croaking and bewailing on the part of the populace because there wasn't a ball team in town, or because there was no place to go on Saturday afternoons. Plainfield was without ball several years. Westfield got together and organized a team which developed into an aggregation of beaters. They beat Plainfield up to last year. Then Manager Daab struck the town with his fast combination, who outplayed them at every point, and brought the county championship pennant to Plainfield.

Now baseball interest seems to be in a dormant state. Less than a year after transforming Westfield into a baseball cemetery. Plainfield, it seems, would support a tail-end club in one of the big leagues, but cannot turn out to see a championship team, like the present nine, which has a record of eleven straight victories without a defeat this season.

It's just exactly like a good little boy who gets sick after eating too much candy or a too big a hunk of pie, his fond mamma gives him, when he doesn't do anything wrong.

The game Saturday bids to be a contest well worth seeing. When these two teams met in the 14-inning contest five weeks ago, every fan who was present agreed that it was the grandest game ever played on the local diamond.

"Phil" Smith after three weeks' rest should be in find fettle to go up against his husky apeparing antagonist, Harry Levy, of Bayonne, who officiated in the last game.

Two months of managing a team in the Ohio league was sufficient for Joe Wahl and he has returned once again to dear old New York, where he is helping out on a number of independent teams.

The new short stop, Mr. Snow, handles himself like a ball player. He is a careful fielder and seems to have a little stick knowledge.

Dunellen F. C. Lineup.

The following is the official lineup of the Dunellen F. C. for season 1906, as given by Manager Churchill and Capt. Fagely: Lake, lf; Garretson, cf; Giddes, rf; Piddington, 1b; Fletcher, 2b; Fagely, ss; Brakeley, 3b; Giles, c; Randolph, p; Russell, p; utility outfielder, Titsworth; utility infielders, Logan and Penrose.

AUTOING.

Edward S. F. Randolph, of Grant avenue, spent Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday touring through the South Jersey shingle district, looking up special shingles for his four new houses on Evergreen avenue, just off Park avenue. On the trip he covered in all about 448 miles in his Maxwell runabout, on twenty-six gallons of gasolene, with no other mishap than two punctures, and one broken spark plug. The trip included Freehold, Lakewood, Barnegat, Egg Harbor, Atlantic City, Tuckerton, Philadelphia, Burlington, Trenton and back through New Brunswick, making a severe test for his auto, considering the way Mr. Randolph drives. He made the run from Plainfield to Atlantic City on Friday in five hours and thirty-five minutes, including a stop at Barnegat for dinner.

PERSONAL.

IS TOO SPIRITUAL FOR HER HUSBAND.

Christian Science Wife's Suit for Divorce Dismissed by Court.

Vice-Chancellor Stevenson heard yesterday in Jersey City testimony in an interesting divorce suit. The plaintiff is Mrs. Maria Langworth De Cew, who charged her husband, Herbert, with desertion. It developed during the hearing that Mrs. De Cew is an ardent advocate of Christian Science, and that failing to convert her husband to her way of thinking she refused him many requests.

The De Cews were married at Windsor, Canada, December, 1890. They went to Salt Lake City, where they resided six years. They have three children. It was while in Salt Lake City that Mrs. De Cew became a Christian Scientist. When one of their children became ill Mrs. De Cew refused to allow a physician in the house. The child died, and this was the beinning of the domestic troubles.

The couple soon afterward separated, Mrs. De Cew going to relatives in Englewood, N. J., and De Cew taking up his home in Penn Yan, N. Y. Mrs. De Cew had their two children, and her husband asked that he be allowed to have charge of them. Mrs. De Cew answered that she would be glad to comply with her husband's request, as it would give her a chance to devote all her time to Christian Science. Mrs. De Cew admitted to the Vice-Chancellor that she did not want to be burdened with the cares of wifehood, and that was her reason for starting the divorce suit.

De Cew, as a witness, declared that his wife was responsible for all the trouble between them. She was altogether too spiritual, he said, and neglected her home to attend Christian Science meetings.

At the close of the testimony the Vice-Chancellor dismissed the complaint.

RISKS HER LIFE FOR CHILD.

Elizabeth Girl's Bravery Saves Tot from Death.

Elizabeth, June 27.—Although forced to climb a high fence, in doing which she cut her hands and arms and badly tore her dress, Miss Annie Barnes, eighteen years old, saved a little child from being run down by an express train on the Pennsylvania road near the Elizabeth station yesterday afternoon.

She just managed to reach the child as the flier came around a curve, and she was compelled to stand on the other track with the child in her arms until the train passed before she could get down off the high embankment with her burden and hand it over to its mother.

Miss Barnes lives at 22 Rahway avenue, this city. She was walking up that street when she saw the little child climb an embankment of the railroad and stand on the tracks. The child was Edward Copeland, three years old, of 54 Rahway avenue.

Assembly Candidates Mentioned.

James MacMaster, of the Twelfth ward, Elizabeth, is a candidate for the Assembly to succeed Everard K. Tucker, whose withdrawal from the field was announced this week. It is said that had Mr. Tucker decided to stand for a renomination he would not have been opposed by the regular Republican organization, although he professed to be in sympathy with the Colby movement. Mr. MacMaster lives in that section of the county which will be the Second district, if the new redistricting law is upheld. Others mentioned as possible candidates are John R. Moxon, Howard Alexander and C. H. K. Halsey.

Sues For Divorce.

George Voehl has instituted divorce proceedings against his wife, Mrs. Delie Voehl. The writ was served yesterday. Francis J. Blatz represents the complainant.

GIRL'S BODY RECOVERED

Search For Helen Kuenlen Ends at Morgue in New York.

DROWNED WEEKS AGO

State of the Body Indicates That It Had Been In the Water Ever Since Girl Disappeared.

The search for Helen Kuenlen ended in the New York morgue this morning, when her body was identified by Mrs. Kuenlen. It was found in the North River, at the foot of 30th street. The remains had been in the water for weeks.

The body was found floating with the tide on June 22. It was much decomposed and the clothes were the only clues to its identity. It was not until yesterday, that the New York police, through Detective Fogarty, of the Central office, matched the description of Helen Kuenlen's dress, which was sent to them at the time of her disappearance, with the clothing on the body. Word was telephoned to Chief Kiely last night.

The Chief made arrangements at once to have Mrs. Kuenlen accompany him to the morgue this morning. When the mother saw the clothes the identification was established. There was no doubt that the dress and underclothing taken from the body were those of Helen Kuenlen.

The remains were in a state, when found, to indicate that they had been in the water ever since the girl disappeared. They will be brought home today.

Miss Kuenlen was missed on April 21, when she left the house ostensibly to take a trolley ride. She was seen two days later in Newark and then all trace of her was lost. Trail after trail, and clue after clue, all false, were followed in the succeeding weeks and the case had begun to assume the character of an impenetrable mystery.

The mother gave up hopes of seeing her alive weeks ago, and centered her prayers on the recovery of the body. There is scarcely any doubt that the girl committed suicide. She had been suffering from nervous depression for some time before her disappearance, and indicated a morbid interest in the question of the righteousness of self-destruction just before she disappeared.

MISS EDITH FISK WEDS.

Charming Daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk Becomes Mrs. Church.

Announcement is made by Mrs. Chapman Fisk of the wedding of her daughter, Miss Edith Fisk, and Arthur Church, of Narragansett Pier, R. I. The ceremony was a quiet one, only a few immediate friends of the couple being present. Mr. and Mrs. Church will live at Narragansett Pier for the present.

Mr. Church and his bride met while both were in Paris, where the latter had gone for the benefit of her health. Mr. Church was accompanied by his relatives, and the two young people saw much of each other. They met again on the steamer returning from Europe and their friendship ripened into love.

On account of the ill health of the bride, it was decided to have the ceremony performed quietly. Miss Fisk is one of last year's debutantes and is a great favorite among Plainfield's society folk. Mr. Church is a graduate of Harvard and belongs to one of the old Rhode Island families.

WOODHULL & MARTIN OUT

Largest Department Store Firm to Be Succeed by New Yorkers.

LEASE THE BUILDING

Purchasers a Corporation—Terms Not Stated—To Enlarge the Business.

Woodhull & Martin's department store is to pass into the hands of a syndicate of capitalists. The deal will be consummated today, at a meeting between the members of the firm and the purchasers. The present owners will sever all connection with the business.

News of the deal leaked out this morning. The members of the firm were not quite ready to make it public, but Floyd T. Woodhull, the senior partner, confirmed the report.

The names of the men in the new corporation have not been announced. An Atlantic City man is said to be at the head of it. The name under which the concern will do business has not yet been decided.

Woodhull & Martin will retain ownership of the building, when the deal goes through, leasing the store for a term of years. Enlargement of the stock is part of the plans of the purchasing corporation. It intends to add several departments to the business, making it a more complete department store. Men's clothes, hats, shoes, women's jackets and a millinery line will be placed in stock.

Floyd T. Woodhull and Edson C. Martin started the firm in this city in 1897. They had been in business in Morristown before that, leaving there to buy out Doane & Edsall, in the Babcock building store. Early in 1902 the big fire in the Babcock building occurred, and led to the erection of the present home of the business.

Owing to the fact that the property was part of an estate and the time of its rebuilding was rather uncertain, Woodhull & Martin finally decided to purchase land on East Front street, adjoining that of the building owned and occupied by Powlison & Jones and there erect a modern structure particularly adapted to the dry goods business. The building they erected is one of the most attractive business blocks in the city. This year the firm erected another building, adjoining the one occupied by them, with flats above and two stores on the first floor.

Both Mr. Woodhull and Mr. Martin say they cannot tell at present what they will do when the business passes out of their hands. Mr. Woodhull is a member of the Board of Education.

Since coming to Plainfield the firm has made a host of friends and by fair and upright dealing has done much to build up the dry goods business here. It is largely due to the efforts of the firm that Plainfielders have found out that they can shop at home just as well as in New York and at a saving of time and money. When the firm retires from business it will do so with the best wishes of its many friends and patrons.

Messrs. Woodhull and Martin will continue to reside here.

Another Driver Wanted.

Arrangements are underway whereby the fire and building committee from the Common Council will seek the appointment of an extra driver in the fire department. For the good of the service the committee has decided that an extra driver is a necessity for emergency, particularly when the other men are off for their meal hours. The committee met this week and considered several applications for the position and it is probable that a recommendation will be made to the Common Council, whereby Mayor Buckle will make an appointment. There is also a vacancy to fill by reason of the resignation of an appointee who refused to be stationed in the West End house.

SUPREME COURT HITS THE NEW POLICE LAW

DECLARES ACT FOR REVIEW OF POLICE BOARDS TO BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Trenton, June 28.—After five years of fighting for a law which would permit a review by a Supreme Court justice of the proceedings of police boards and police commissions in cases where police officers are charged with offenses and found guilty, the Superior Police Officers' Association of the State has met with defeat at the hands of the Supreme Court, although the law for which they strove for years was passed by the Legislature last winter, and only recently signed by Governor Stokes.

Supreme Court Justice Reed, in an opinion just handed down, declares this law unconstitutional because, he says, "it is an attempt to confer upon a statutory tribunal the prerogative right of the Supreme Court to review by certiorari the proceedings of the municipal board."

The decision affects every policeman in the State. It is sweeping in its nature and brings to naught the efforts of those who worked so hard for its passage. For five successive Legislatures this measure has been worked upon and fought about, and now when the jubilation of the police because of its passage is at its height the decision is announced which renders all their struggles vain.

The case upon which the act was taken to the Supreme Court is that of the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Brunswick against Randall McCann. McCann was a police officer of New Brunswick, and was tried by the police board on two charges; the first, which was dismissed, was misconduct, and the second charge upon which he was found guilty was his failure to make a proper report as required by the rules of the department.

McCann, by application to Justice Fort, endeavored to take advantage of the new police review act by securing an order for a summary review of his case. The order directed him to file a bond to secure payment of the costs, and fixed a day for a hearing in the matter before the Supreme Court justice. This is the order which was taken up to the Supreme Court by the mayor and council of New Brunswick on certiorari, and which Justice Reed, in his opinion, declares is null and void.

Will Make Them Pay Poll Tax.

Elizabeth, June 28.—Tax Collector John Farrell, of this city, is determined to make an example of those men who pride themselves "upon never having paid a poll tax" in this city. He has authorized his constables, who were sent out yesterday with their final warrants, to report to him any who refuse to pay their $1 tax, and he says that the full penalty of the law will be visited upon those who do not pay up. The law, he says, gives him the power to imprison those who do not pay their taxes, and he says there will be a number who will be made to realize that it is cheaper to pay up than go to jail.

Don't Want "Flirts" in Hoboken.

Hoboken, June 28.—"Young men having a mania for flirting with young women on public streets are not wanted in this city," declared Recorder Stanton in court yesterday, when he sentenced Michael Gassart, of Brooklyn, to sixty days in the penitentiary. Gassart attempted to force his attentions on the Misses Anna and Sallie Gibbons, of Washington street. They had him arrested.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY

The annual complaint over small boys who go in bathing at the white bridge in New Market pond with nothing on to hide their nakedness is being heard. They annoy boating parties, and the authorities are sharpening a bundle of switches for them.

Col. W. J. Downey, after careful consideration of the subject, pronounces the Colby movement "an invitation of Democracy in the interest of black Republicans who have not nerve enough to come over with the real people."

The entire work of improving the Evans farm has been completed. The task was ended this week with the repainting of all the outbuildings.

The nine has struck a fast stride, and the local fans are beginning to sit up and say prideful things. Capt. Fagley has a great combination.

A dime sociable will be held at the Presbyterian church tonight. Music, readings and refreshments will be on the programme.

H. S. Garretson and John Fenner are arranging a fishing party, for a day at Sewaren. The anglers will have a launch.

The Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school excursion will be held July 26. It will go to Ocean Grove.

Miss Jennie Graves, of Carbondale, Pa., has been spending several days at the home of N. F. Guyre.

John Mann continues to improve from his bullet wound. He will soon be as sound as ever.

W. S. Hasleton is on a business trip through the South. He will be gone some time.

Ellis Carman has come home from his school duties in Pennnsylvania for the summer.

Henry Sanders has been entertaining his brother, Edward Sanders, of New York.

Miss Lillian Fisher has returned from a visit to relatives in Flemington.

The condition of William Farrier remains unchanged.

The fire company will meet tonight.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Funeral services of Joseph Thys were held this morning from his late home on Terrill road at 8 o'clock, following a short service at the house. A service was held at 9:15 from St. Mary's church, Plainfield, where a requiem mass was said for the repose of his soul. Both services were well attended by his old neighbors and friends from here who have known the deceased during his many years' residence here. Interment was made in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery,

The parish of St. Mary's R. C. church, Stony Hill, held a picnic yesterday on Mountain avenue, near Terrill road. The day was an ideal one for an outing and the affair was well attended and one of the most enjoyable outings the parish has ever held. Dancing was one of the principal features enjoyed, but there was many other pleasures provided for the older ones who cared not for the two step or waltz.

The baseball diamond has been scraped and rolled and is now in as good a condition as the majority of diamonds. The many little knolls in the old diamond made the judging of a ground ball a hard matter for an infielder.

Manager Daab can hardly believe the Westfield team is a "hoodoo," so will try and play that twice postponed game Saturday afternoon at Crescent Oval.

Mrs. John R. Marsh, of Front street, who has been seriously ill for the past week, is reported as being somewhat improved.

Mrs. James Buckley, of Park avenue, is spending several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Woods, at Taunton, Mass.

The local ball team will play the Raritan team Saturday afternoon on the home diamond.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., meets tonight in the library rooms.

The Primrose minstrel parade will be held tonight in Plainfield.

GIRLS HELD UP AND ROBBED.

Two Young Women Stopped at Point of Revolver Near Old Bridge.

Spotswood, June 28.—While driving home Tuesday night from New Brunswick to Texas, near here, Miss Mary Quackenbush and her sister Grace were held up by two men, at the point of a revolver, and robbed of all the money and jewelry which they had. The robbery took place on the Englishtown road, between Old Bridge and Mill Bridge. The young women drove home after the hold-up and telephoned the story to this place.

In view of the two recent murders in this vicinity and the fact that the detectives were called off the Whitman killing case, only yesterday, the residents hereabouts are greatly stirred up over the robbery. An effort will be made to have the authorities take rigid action in the cases of any criminals who are caught in this vicinity.

Lake Submarine Missing.

Atlantic City, June 28.—S. B. Lake, father of the inventor of the submarine boat, is here, and is very much worried over thte failure of the boat to reach Atlantic City yesterday. The Lake submarine boat was on the way from Newport News, and should have reacher here yesterday afternoon. She has not been reported since she left Cape Henry. There are eight men on board.

REMEMBER THAW'S WIFE.

Formerly Lived in Elizabeth, Where She Had Been Artist's Model.

Elizabeth, June 28.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of the murderer of Stanford White in New York, is well remembered by a number of Elizabethans as a former resident of this city. She came here a number of years ago and for a time was employed by the Alfred S. Campbell Art Company as an artist's model. While here she stopped at the Burkely and later at a boarding-house kept by a Mrs. Clellan on Washington street. Among some of the pictures she posed for was that of "Beauty and the Beast." This picture showed her, then an actress, with her head resting upon the head of a white polar bear. This picture was copyrighted by the art company here and just previous to the first of the year was sold to a Pittsburg publishing company for the purpose of adorning the calendar issued by an enterprising butcher of that city.

The patrons of the butcher were among the exclusive set of Pittsburg and Mrs. Thaw, mother of the murderer, recognized the beauty in the picture as that of her daughter-in-law, whom she had been introducing into Pittsburg society as the bride of her son.

She raised a storm of protest and threatened suit against the offending butcher and the calendars were recalled. It created quite a furore among the society people of Pittsburg at the time. Among other famous pictures for which she posed was one of "The Japanese Girl," the "Bather," in which Mrs. Thaw was attired in a glove-fitting bathing suit, and several others, all of which have been widely circulated about the country on calandars.

Stone Roads in Hunterdon.

Flemington, June 28.—The special election held here yesterday to vote upon the question of building a stone road from Flemington to Ringoes resulted in a victory for the stone road advocates. The distance between Ringoes and Flemington is about six miles. It is expected that the freeholders will not take up the matter without delay and have the work pushed to completion before the winter sets in. The macadamized road between Ringoes and Lambertville, a similar distance, is about completed, and when the Flemington section has been built Hunterdon county will have twelve miles of stone road.

Runs a Pocket Saloon.

Asbury Park, June 28.—Policemen who do duty in the annexed district have received orders to round up an enterprising individual who is coining money by dispensing liquor at retail. The mysterious vender of the beverage has no settled place of abode, but carries his stock in numerous pockets in his clothing. His vest pocket saloon can supply half a pint of whisky for fifteen cents, or a bottle of beer for a nickel. He has a regular route, and his coming is anxiously awaited by the denizens who make up the greater part of the population on the west side of the city.

Sledge Amputates His Finger.

German Valley, June 28.—While at work upon a stone wall on the farm of Amzi Lake, one mile north of Naughright, recently, Manning Bunn, a stone mason, of this village, had one of his fingers on his left hand amputated by a blow from a heavy sledge. He and his son, John Wilson Bunn, were drilling a stone preparatory to placing it into the wall. Bunn was holding the drill and his son was doing the striking, when the sledge slipped, not only amputating the finger, but mashing the hand badly.

Instantly Killed By Fall.

Rockaway, June 28.—William Schader, thirty-six years old, of Denville, was killed by falling down an elevator shaft at the icehouses of the Mountain Ice Company, at Eftling Lake, yesterday. Schader, who was an employe of the ice company, was working at the top of the shaft when he lost his balance and fell head first. His head struck the rail of a track below and his skull was crushed, death being instantaneous. Coroner Sigmund Heller, of Dover, was notified of the accident.

Preparing for Hanging of Negro.

Long Branch, June 28.—Edward W. Brown, the negro who shot his common law wife in this city two years ago, will be executed at Freehold Friday morning at 10 o'clock. James Van Hise, of Newark, will be the executioner. Brown will be the first person to be executed in Monmouth county since 1894, when Samuel J. Harriett was hanged for the murder of Mrs. Leonard at Atlantic Highlands.

THE POWER OF STEAM.

Many May See But It Takes Genius to Realize.

When James Watt saw the steam causing the kettle lid to jump up and down he said "There must be power in that steam that it can lift such a weight."

There was.

Millions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery.

Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandruff, Falling Hair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which eats the life from the roots of human hair.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores the hair to its natural state.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

George Primrose and his big minstrel company, of black-face artists, will hold high carnival at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. Mr. Primrose himself heads the organization and has taken particular pains to surround himself with a company of comedians, singers, dancers and musicians of the first order. The second part of the entertainment will be a new departure in minstrelsy. Instead of vaudeville there will be introduced some very novel ideas, depicting negro life in Dixie, with song, dance and story. It opens with a typical negro sketch, wherein the pathetic as well as the humorous side of darkey life is shown. Then the scene changes to a field of snow white cotton in bloom, and bud, at sunrise, with the plantation quarters and a river which winds lazily toward the distant hills. In the next scene, that of the village parsonage on Sunday morning, the picture shows a quaint old church and cabins in the background, the corn stacked in the field, and a crop of golden pumpkins on the ground with the parson's cabin in the foreground. The final number of the performance is a magnificent spectacular transformation, entitled "The Evolution of the Negro," staged and produced by George Primrose. It is in five pictures, opening with the Darkey in the Moon, changing to an African Jungle, Darkey Life "befo' de wah," the Old Kentucky Home, The Emancipation, Darkey Heaven and the Birth of the Rose.

CANNOT FIND HIS WIFE AND ONLY CHILD.

Knows No Reason They Should Not Return, So Seeks Aid of Police.

Charles Kirschman, an electrician, who has been boarding three weeks at the Commercial Hotel, Academy and Washington streets, Newark, reported Tuesday to the police that his wife, Elizabeth, and their five-year-old daughter, had disappeared.

Kirschman said he last saw his wife and child Monday of last week, when they left Newark, in company with Mrs. Kirschman's cousin, Miss Rusher, of Brooklyn, to pay a visit to his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Rusher, of Old Bridge, in Middlesex county.

The parting was entirely friendly, Kirschman declared, and his wife promised to return to him last Saturday. When she did not do so, he said, he telegraphed to his father-in-law at Old Bridge and received the reply that—

"Libbie (his wife) took the 3:20 Pennsylvania train Saturday afternoon."

Learning that Miss Rusher left Old Bridge with his wife, Kirschman telegraphed to her and the answer was that Mrs. Kirschman and her daughter left the train at Newark.

Kirschman went to Broolyn and saw Miss Rusher. She told him, he said, that his wife seemed anxious to rejoin him, and when they parted on the train at Newark, her cousin stated her intention of going at once to the hotel at which her husband was stopping.

Kirschman obtained additional evidence that his wife had come to Newark and also that she was there as late as the morning of the day before yesterday. She had kept a small sum of money on deposit in a local bank and he learned that she had gone to the bank on Monday morning and drawn this money.

"The absence of my wife and child is unaccountable," Kirschman said. "We have enjoyed a very happy life together since our marriage in 1899. We never had a quarrel and we both have idolized our daughter. I have been frequently compelled to travel from city to city, because of my occupation, but heretofore we have never been separated more than twenty-four hours without communicating with each other."

The Ancient Sect of Sun Worshippers

These Ancient Writs Now Proven to Have Been a Health and Not a Religious Ceremony.

THE MODERN PISO DOCTRINE.

Recent advances in the reading of picture writing and deciphering of ancient hieroglyphics go to prove that thousands of years ago the ancients set as much store by the germ killing, strength giving and invigorating influence of the Sun's rays as we do today, it being one of the principal factors in the cure of tuberculosis. This is the doctrine that the Piso Co. has been spreading broadcast and free over the land. Their opinion is shared by every advanced scientist and was fully endorsed at the Tuberculosis Congress recently held abroad and with representative from nearly every country in the world.

Sun, pure air, nourishing food, exercise and cheerfulness have, with the use of a good, proven remedy like Piso's to heal and strengthen the lungs, saved the life of many a consumptive.

FIRST FREE CIRCULATING LIBRARY IN STATE CLOSED.

Final Scene in Career of New Brunswick Institution Marks End of Controversy.

New Brunswick, June 28.—The trustees of the New Brunswick Free Circulating Library have formally turned over to the trustees of the Free Public Library 9,423 books, which were the property of the former institution, and thus ended a long-standing dispute. The gift is worth about $3,000. The chief factor in the transaction was James Neilson, who last week made a munificient gift of land to Rutgers College. Mr. and Mrs. Neilson sailed for Europe Saturday.

The Free Circulating Library was established here on March 27, 1883, and was the first in New Jersey. It was supported by bazars and private subscriptions, Mr. Neilson being the chief benefactor. On April 1, 1891, the Free Public Library was established by act of the Legislature, which allowed one-third of a mill on the assessed valuation of the city for support of the library, amounting to about $3,500 a year. The books of the Circulating Library were placed in the Public Library, but the Circulating Library trustees retained title to them. For over ten years Mr. Neilson was president of both boards.

Then Mr. Neilson became somewhat unpopular by refusing to aid in an attempt to secure a public library building from Andrew Carnegie. It was understood that Mr. Neilson intended to endow one himself. But some hotheads hanged Mr. Neilson in effigy, and he withheld his beneficence. In 1902 Mayor Viehmann ousted Mr. Neilson from the public library board and proceeded successfully to get a building from Carnegie.

It was hinted at the time that the Circulating Library would withdraw its books, owing to the feeling aroused, but no such action was taken. In 1903 Mayor Viehmann's party was ousted, and since then a majority of the Public Library trustees has been composed of friends of Mr. Neilson.

The Circulating Library's present gift does away with all possibility of future controversy and puts the Circulating Library out of existence. The Public Library now has a clear title to 21,499 books.

LABOR LEADERS TO MAKE PLANS FOR LEGISLATION.

The twenty-eighth annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor will meet in the Assembly chamber at the State House, Trenton, at 10:30 Monday, August 20, concluding August 21. The call was issued Saturday.

Every affiliated trade organization or labor union in the State is invited to send delegates, the basis of representation being two delegates for every union having 50 members, three delegates for unions having 100 members and one additional delegate for every additional 100 members.

The State Federation of Labor contains the largest possibilities of benefit to the movement in general, by strengthening the weak points within the State, by agitation for the various forms of union labels and union cards, by fostering and promoting short hour movements and by giving attention to the matter of State legislation. Almost all labor legislation secured is the result of the earnest efforts of the State Federation. An important field of work in legislative matters, in which the State federation has exercised a great influence is its ability to defeat the passage of anti-labor laws. It can and does exercise a most powerful opposition to measures determined to the interests of labor, as well as exercise influence in favor of the passage of the measures which they desire.

Somerset's Historic County Buildings Are to be Razed.

A BIT OF HISTORY

Court Structure a Model of Dutch Architecture—A Record From Early Days.

The ancient Somerset County Court House in Somerville, one of the finest specimens of old Dutch architecture in New Jersey, which has been sold to Hyman Kline, a junk dealer, for $120, is to be removed in a few weeks to make way for a handsome white marble structure that will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000. Owing to its historic interest an effort was made to preserve the old building, but the plan failed to win the approbation of the people.

The old brick jail, which in its time was the scene of a number of hangings, was sold to the same man for $700, and will be removed. In the rear of the old jail already there has been erected a handsome jail building, and this will be connected with the new court house by an underground passage. Work at razing the buildings will be started as soon as the new jail is ready for the transfer of prisoners.

The county was formed May 22, 1688, and was set off from Middlesex. Former Justice A. P. Sutphen, who for many years has been clerk of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders, has gathered much data relating to the different places where court was held in Somerset county.

In 1714 an act was passed, providing for the erection of a court house "at such place as the major part of the freeholders who inhabit there shall agree." The selection was made at Six Mile Run, a lot was purchased, and the court house and jail were built, probably in 1717. The site then selected was called "the Point," it being the most southerly point of the Harrison tract of 10,000 acres, and was located about 300 yards east of the present Franklin Park Reformed church.

This court house, together with the jail, were burned in 1737 and the records destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown at this day. By an act of Assembly at Perth Amboy the same year a new court house and jail was authorized to be erected at Millstone, "for the use of the inhabitants of Somerset county." A plot of ground was procured in Hillsborough township, southwest of and near the present iron bridge across the Millstone River. On this spot a court house and jail were built, called the Somerset Court House, at Hillsborough.

This building was used until October 27, 1779, when it was set on fire by the British Dragoons, known as the Queen's Rangers, during the Revolutionary War. All the county records were destroyed, excepting four books of mortgages dating from 1760, and the record of roads from 1732.

On June 5, 1780, an attempt was made to locate a new court house and jail in this city (then known as Raritan), such an act passing the General Assembly and providing for an election to be held by the residents for the purpose of selecting a proper site. This election was held and Raritan selected.

At the annual meeting of the Freeholders and justices in Hillsborough May 10, 1780, "it was agreed that the sum of 125 pounds five shillings be paid unto Cornelius Lot for hiring and paying men to collect iron and bricks belonging to the county, found on the site of the old Court House that was burned by the enemy." On April 10, 1781, a meeting of the Freeholders and justices was held at the house of Cornelius Tunison, inn-keeper at Raritan, for the purpose of raising money to build a jail. A motion to raise money "and to erect and build a jail at or near Tunison's Tavern, the place proposed, by a vote of the county agreeably to law," was lost. At a meeting held November 22, in the same year, Peter D. Vroom, High Sheriff, made the following protest: "Whereas, the court house and jail of the County of Somerset were burned by the enemy some time ago, since that time the county has been destitute of both jail and Court House, the subscriber, Sheriff of said county, protests against the said county for want of a jail."

This seems to have brought the matter to a head, so that, inside of two months, on January 14, 1782, by a general vote of the inhabitants the Freeholders "agreed to building a jail and court house at the place selected near Tunison's Tavern, and appointed Derrick Middagh and Richard McDonald managers, empowering them to procure the conveyance of two lots of land for the jail and court house, the jail to be built of squared timber 26 feet long, 18 feet wide and 8 feet high from floor to floor, and to contain three rooms, the roof to be covered with cedar, and under the floor beds of large stone be laid, and that the sum of 10 pounds be paid to Cornelius Tunison for 20 perches of ground whereon to set the jail, and the said Tunison gives gratis the quantity of 40 feet of land whereon to build the court house."

On September 6, 1782, "Peter Wyckoff, Major McDonald and John Simeson were appointed a committee to unite with a committee from the consistory of the Church of Raritan, and the board voted to join the Raritan congregation and build a court house, allowing the congregation to worship there under certain stipulations to be entered into at a future day."

At a meeting held October 14, at Hillsborough, it was voted that "money should be raised for building a court house in conjunction with the congregation of Raritan." Prior to this, however, on May 30, 1782, Cornelius Tunison had deeded, according to resolution, two lots of land for the court house and jail to Derrick Middagh and Richard McDonald.

The court house was erected in 1783, and was used as a court house and church combined until 1788, when the church people drew out under the terms of their agreement, and the building was used as a court house only.

This continued until the erection of the present court house, in 1799. The land upon which the present court house is located was purchased by the Freeholders of John Bryan on May 11, 1798, and in the year 1799 the main part of the present building was erected. It first stood sixty feet front and forty feet depth, with jail of three cells and the sheriff's office on the ground floor, the courtroom proper on the second floor and the grand jury room in the attic, the stairway leading up from the first floor inside, and not on the outside, as at present. For fifty years it stood thus, practically unchanged, but in the year 1849 it was remodeled and another story added.

The present county jail, in the rear of the court house, was erected in 1870 at a cost of $15,402.03. All the property at the corner of Main and Grove streets was recently acquired by the Board of Freeholders.

hope of the young valedictorian, who has spoken for her classmates the words of farewell to school and its happy surroundings. These young people look as all graduates do into a future whose problem they feel competent to solve, whose obstacles they are determined to surmount. Full of the noble zeal of youthfulness, ready to expend the talents they possess for the betterment of their fellows, they see not the clouds that overhang the distant horizon, for their desire is to be 'Up and dong'—

"'With a heart of any fate.'

"Yet not without hope do we trust them to the conflict. They go not unequipped, for they have been taught that the future is in God's keeping, that no matter what it may hold for them, truth and sincerity are the strong wings that shall lift them over low things. They have been taught that religion is the vital element in character, that knowledge indeed is effectual only when it is loved and believed in, and held to be a ground for hope, that if they are brought up to look to material things as the chief good, their higher faculties will be stunted. If to do rightly rather than to think keenly is man's business here upon earth, then the virtues that spring from religion are more important than those that follow from developed intellects; for to think is to be unresolved, whereas to believe is to be impelled in the direction of one's faith. They have been taught that the essential element in human life is conduct, and conduct springs from what we believe vastly more than what we know. Society's ruin is from lack of virtue, and not from lack of knowledge. We trust them to the contest with the future, hopeful that the principle of religion will work in fellowship with the powers of intellect, that thus seeing truth in all things, they may lend their best efforts to its claims. The day may come, God avert it, when the spirit of Christian patriotism may be called upon to infuse its strength into the sacrifice they have been taught willingly to make for the best interests of our beloved country. Their reverence for our country's flag is next to their reverence for Almighty God. The flag has been lifted with a deeper significance above their hearts. They have been taught that a disinterested love for their country is the truest evidence of patriotism. I trust you, my young friends, to the contest which the future holds, with the reasonable hope that you will not be found wanting, and that you will hold yourselves ever a credit to the principles given you for your future guidance."

The following pupils earned the maximum percentage, 100 per cent., for attendance and punctuality and were awarded a prize: Margaret Flatley, Elizabeth Casey, Ella Lappin.

Also for having held first place the best part of the year: Elizabeth Brown, Mary McKenna, Mary Powers, James Smith, John Guinnee, John Henry, Mary McMann.

St. Elizabeth's College, Convent Station, offered a four years' course scholarship for the most successful competitor among the eight grade pupils of the Parochial school of the State of New Jersey. Competition to decide the excellence of the applicants for the prize thus offered was held at St. Mary's Academy, Newark, on Monday morning of this week. "It is with great pleasure and allowable pride that I announce the victory for St. Mary's school in the person of Miss Mary McKenna, who has won the scholarship," said Father Bogan.

Miss Elizabeth Jeanette Brown was the valedictorian of her class, and her essay was as follows:

"Since the years of our early childhood, we have taken our part in the closing exercises of our school, each successive year joining with our companions in the joy of anticipated freedom from books, study and classroom discipline. Year after year winter had passed, the spirit of spring had cast its spell on field and meadow, and the glory of summer days sang its siren song, oh; so charmingly. We remember the joy of those days. How eagerly we awaited them! How completely we enjoyed them! How lavishly we spent the wealth of the glorious vacations that followed them! In all those years our path of life has led us through many pleasant places. Simple desires found ready satisfaction. The joys of companionship, blessed by happy innocence, have been with us on our way. Guided by faithful hands, allured by devoted hearts, ours has been an upward way. At times the ascent was toilsome, and the difficulties trying, but 'finis coronat opus" the end crowns the work. But now, my classmates, we have come to an eminence on our journey, whence we may look back with lingering fondness, and forward with our first real sense of responsibility. To those happy years, we vainly call. They can return no more. Fond memory, handmaid of the past, long be our companion. We trust those happy days to thy faithful keeping, that we may not be lost forever. With fear and hope, we turn to the unknown future; ah! the mystery it hides. How bright the prospects! How fair, how alluring the promises! And yet, we face that future with eager, hopeful hearts. As the door of our first school closes behind us, the future opens her portal and bids us learn from her the lesson of our destiny. Of a new knowledge, this is indeed our commencement day. Yet not unequipped are we. We bring to her hall of study a desire to be a service to the community. We have learned that mere knowledge is not education. We have been taught, and reverently we have learned the lesson, that Virtue is of greater and more lasting good than mere knowledge. We approach the future, dear classmates, with hearts true to the past. 'Let us then be up and doing with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait."

Judgment for Belcher's Brother.

Paterson, June 28.—A. W. Belcher, of Kingston, N. Y., brother of former Mayor William H. Belcher, who fled from Paterson about a year ago after a career of fraud and embezzlement, yesterday obtained a judgment of $2,000 against the Manchester Building and Loan Association, of which Belcher, the plaintiff, was a shareholder. He sent his dues regularly to his brother, who was counsel for the association and managed the affairs of the organization. When the counsel became a fugitive the Kingston man found that he had drawn his money from the association four years ago. It was claimed for the association that Mayor Belcher acted as attorney for his brother, but, in the absence of any proof to that effect, Judge Heisley directed the jury to find for the plaintiff.

Divorce for Mrs. McClelland.

After awarding a decree for divorce yesterday in Newark to Mrs. James Verner McClelland from her husband on the ground of desertion, Vice-Chancellor Pitney grasped the woman by the hand and told her that he wished she would get a good husband, as she was a true woman. The unusual proceeding came after the vice-chancellor had descended from the bench and Mrs. McClelland had approached him as if to thank him for the divorce.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 1: "Christian Citizenship"—Ps xxii, 28; I Pet. ii, 13; John xix 12-16; Acts xxiv, 26, 27; Mic. iii, 1-11; Est. iv, 13, 14; I Kings xxi, 17-19; Prov. xi, 10, 11.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Never before has the nature of civil government been so carefully studied as during the past few years. Never have the rights and duties of citizenship been so thoroughly discussed as now.

The cause of this is not far to seek. The old forms of government where the will of the one or the few prevailed gave no opportunity for the mass of the people to develop in citizenship. Their place was to obey without question the commands of their superiors.

In recent times the government by the whole people has necessitated an entire readjustment of the theory of government and in consequence a different conception of the civic rights and duties of the individual. Many wild schemes have been proposed and many fantastic principles propounded. Out of all the confusion order is gradually emerging. But it would be premature as yet to say that the really Christian nation has appeared. It is in process of formation, but has not yet come.

In our own land the duty of every young person, whether male or female, to know the true nature of our government and the duties of citizenship is pressing. Our leagues should make this a subject of special study, as much as they study missions and revivals.

The shaping of the future destiny of the world lies considerably within the power of our own nation. This is no wild or fanatical dream. The events of the past two years have shown it to be a very sober and momentous fact.

The shaping of the course of our nation lies in the hands of our young people. That sounds familiar and is commonplace, but it should not be passed as empty platitude. That also is very solemn and momentous truth.

If our young people find the proper ground of human government, learn how to embody in man made laws the eternal principles of righteousness and then succeed in putting in effective operation these same right enactments and statutes and themselves live according to divine law of supreme love to God and equal regard for fellow man, then is the future of the nation and world bright with promise. If they fail in any particular, no power can avert a disaster to which the destruction of San Francisco shall seem trivial.

God rules, and human government must be a reflex of the eternal will and nature of Jehovah. This is basal, immovable truth.

Iniquity of rulers against even the poorest or oppression and corruption by the rich and powerful will wreck the nation. This is inevitable.

Neglect of performance of duty by any person risks the destruction of the whole fabric of government. Each must do his share or all shall suffer.

Much light has come to us; more will come if we seek.

Much of true patriotic sentiment has been born in us. It needs larger and more vigorous growth.

Much of loyalty to God is felt and willed by us. Greater depth of devotion to God and man is needed to develop the highest Christian citizenship.

Prayer to Gain the Final Victory.

God of all patience, help me, I pray Thee, to be patient with myself. When temptations conquer me, again and again, help me not to give myself up. When my endeavors fail, again and again, maintain my courage and confidence. When sorrows gather thickly around me be Thou my abiding sunshine. Endow me with Thy perseverance. May I never abandon myself while Thou dost not abandon me. May I rise undismayed from every fall, rising into Thy loving, outstretched arms. Not to grow carelessly secure, resting too easily in Thy forgiveness. Not to become deadened against sin, forgetful how Thou dost hate it, but only to have strength to fight, only to get on my feet again, and yet again and always again, till in Thy strength and by Thy grace the final victory comes This I ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.—Gilbert Fairchild.

Saints.

It takes all of the sun to make a plant and all of Christ to make a saint, though the sun makes countless myriads of plants and Christ makes of saints "a multitude that no man could number."

Gems In Brief.

He who carries a cup of cold water to a thirsty world finds his way leading beside the still waters.—Henry F. Cope.

The most gladsome thing in the world is that few of us fall very low; the saddest that, with such capabilities we seldom rise very high.—Barrie.

Cherish ideals as the traveler cherishes the north star, and keep the guiding light pure and bright and high above the horizon.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

The face is made every day by its morning prayer and by its morning look out of windows which open upon heaven.—Joseph Parker.

Cleanse us from folly and self seeking, and let us draw back from no experience that shall be needful for Thy purposes of help among us.—Isaac O Rankin.

Love does not aim simply at the conscious good of the beloved object. It is not satisfied without perfect loyalty of heart. It aims at its own completeness.—Romola.

It is the part of wisdom to spend little of your time upon the things that vex and anger you and much of your time upon the things that bring you quietness and confidence and good cheer.—Henry Van Dyke.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Everett Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Axienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 1.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Humility, the foundation of virtue.—Matt. xx, 20-28; I Pet. v, 5.

The foundation of the Christian's life is faith, and faith is a gift of God. "By grace ye are saved, through faith, and that [faith] is not of yourself; it is a gift of God." Upon faith the Apostle Peter declares that the Christian is to build his character by adding one Christian grace to another until he reaches the supreme grace of charity or of love. The first thing to be added to faith, according to the apostle, is virtue. "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue." The Greek word translated "virtue" does not mean purity, but courage, valor, manly strength. The necessity of adding virtue in this sense to our faith is apparent. Faith is frequently tested. Our God is an infinite God, and cannot be fully comprehended by the human mind, which is finite. Christian faith in all ages has been the subject of attack by skeptics, infidels and atheists. Courage must therefore be linked with faith. Otherwise faith itself may be lost or we may be overwhelmed and tormented by doubt and mistrust. The Christian needs to be strong. In the face of all doubt and unbelief he must be able to stand firm and unshaken, believing in God, though he cannot solve all the problems of God's being or understand the dealings of God's providence with him, or "justify the ways of God to man." If our knowledge of God and His ways were full and complete, faith would be no element in our religion. Knowledge eliminates faith. But in religion faith is the all essential element. "We walk by faith and not by sight." And walking by faith requires courage, strength, valor or, as the apostle puts it, virtue.

Since virtue is so essential to faith and life, based upon faith, whatever conduces to virtue is of great importance to us. The topic suggests that humility is the foundation of virtue. The truthfulness of this position cannot be denied. The truly humble man is the strong man. He is strong with God. In pride the Pharisee exalted himself in prayer, while in humility the publican exalted God and debased himself, yet he "went down to his house justified rather than the other." Jesus warned James and John that high place in the kingdom was to be attained only by humility. Human pride cannot force an entrance into the kingdom of God or receive its honors. Humility is necessary for entrance into the kingdom, and he that "humbleth himself shall be exalted" is a law of the kingdom of Christ. The humble man is strong with his fellow men. Sincere humility gives a man strength in relation to men so far as his faith is concerned. Humility is not disturbed by assaults upon its faith. It bows before God in submission and seeks not by presumptuous understanding to search out God. Humility makes a man strong in himself. "When I am weak," says the apostle, "I am strong." The realization of personal weakness sends us to God, in whom is all strength and from whom we derive our strength. Therefore "serve the Lord with all humility of mind."

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xv, 33; xviii, 12; xxii, 1-4; Isa. lvii, 15; Mic. vi, 8. Matt. xviii, 1-4; Luke ix, 46-48; xiv, 7-11; Phil. ii, 1-11; Jas. iv, 6.

A State Convention Chairman.

The next biennial convention of the New York State Christian Endeavor union is to be held in Brooklyn on Oct. 9, 10 and 11. William R. Hassell of Brooklyn has been chosen as the chairman of the convention committee, and he will have much to do with shaping the plans for this convention, which promises to surpass the best of its eighteen predecessors. Several thousand delegates will be in attendance. Mr. Hassell is an Endeavorer of long standing, having served for three terms as the president of the Brooklyn City union, one of the largest local unions in the country.

WILLIAM R. HASSELL.

Christian Endeavor's Principles.

First.—Deep religious devotion. There is no such compelling and attractive power as this. "For Christ and the church" has always been the motto of the society.

Second.—Service for all and all for service. "No impression without expression," the latest word of the psychologist relating to adolescent youth, has been practically wrought out in Christian Endeavor methods.

Third.—"Fellowship with fidelity." "Brotherhood with all, loyalty to one's own"—these are the watchwords which are heard in Christian Endeavor circles all over the world and which, incarnated in deed, have given the society its power.

What of the future?

Let the historian of the fiftieth year of the society prophesy after the event, but it can be said in a general way that the outlook was never so bright as today; the society was never winning its way so rapidly in all lands; its critics were never less destructive or more helpful; its supporters were never so numerous and courageous, and, with augmenting ranks, increasing flexibility, enlarging scope and variety of service and a firmer grasp than ever on its fundamental principles, it is entering upon its second quarter century with more than the vigor, hope and determination of its earliest youth.—Dr. Francis E. Clark in Outlook.

NEW JERSEY SEASON AT SEA GIRT CAMP.

Col. Collins Issues Information to Second Regiment Men.

Before it was decided by the military authorities to send the First Regiment, of Newark, and the First Troop of the same city to Mount Gretna, Pa., to take part in the regular army encampment at that place it was arranged that each regiment would have its rifle practice while in camp. Since the change has been made it has been arranged that hms First Regiment and First Troop will both go to Sea Girt for rifle practice the week of July 2. The Third Regiment will open the State encampment on July 7.

General Bird W. Spencer is well pleased with the work of the men who are trying for a place on the State team, which will represent New Jersey in the various matches that will be contested in August and September. As usual, nearly one-third of the riflemen are from the First Regiment, of Newark. Among those who have been hard at work are Major Arthur Rowland, Captain M. A. Rice, First Lieut. W. A. Tewes, First Lieut. T. L. Smith, Sergeant-Major R. W. Evans and Corporal Theodore Gabriel, all veterans from several years' contests.

Colonel D. F. Collins, commanding the Second Regiment, has issued a circular for the information of his regiment relative to the contests for the different medals for which the regiment will hold competitions. The regimental trophy will be awarded to the campany qualifying the highest percentage of marksmen. The Collins medal will be awarded to the enlisted man making the highest score on the day when his company is ordered to Sea Girt for rifle practice. The National Rifle Association medal will be awarded to the man who makes the best first two strings of five shots in his qualification score.

Lieut. Albert S. Jones, the secretary of the National Rifle Association, has competitions. The regimental trophy received numerous inquiries from National Guard teams throughout the country asking for information relative to the national matches and other matters connected with the big rifle tournament. Lieut. Jones is confident that there will be more riflemen at Sea Girt this year by several hundred than there were last summer, and the accommodations at the disposal of New Jersey will be taxed to the utmost.

DR. KRAUSS STILL MUST STAY IN JAIL.

Vice-Chancellor Pitney Refuses to Grant Order of Release of Doubly Divorced Man.

An unsuccessful effort was made yesterday to secure from Vice-Chancellor Pitney, sitting at Newark, an order releasing Dr. Gustav A. Krauss, a former prominent physician of Jersey City, from the Hudson county jail, where he has been since last January, in default of bail.

Dr. Krauss was sued for divorce by his wife Emma, three years ago. A decree was granted to Mrs. Krauss, and an order was issued compelling Dr. Krauss to pay the costs of court.

Instead of complying with the order Dr. Krauss abondoned a medical practice in ersey City and went to South Dakota. There he sued his wife for a divorce, notwithstanding the New Jersey decree in her favor. The Dakota case was decided in his favor, he afterward married again.

Dr. Krauss returned East and took up his residence in New York. Soon afterward he became involved in a complaint made against him by a woman. The latter tried to proceed criminally, but the action failed. She, therefore, instituted a civil action, and on the authority of a civil capias Dr. Krauss was placed under arrest and taken to Jersey City, where he was lodged in jail.

LITERARY.

In Success Magazine for July, David Ferguson explains the evils of irresponsible financiering which center around "Dummy Directors." Mr. Ferguson is one of the newspaper men of New York who got at the first details of the scandal in the Equitable Life Insurance Company. The "dummy director," Mr. Ferguson says, is not a modern creation, but has existed for a long time in various forms, being brought to its full development in this country in the form of professional dummies, public men who loan their names for a consideration, other men's aents, and those who enter a directorate upon someone else's stock. As it is an impossibility for a man to know intimately the details of many large concerns, it is obvious that among financial men who hold many directorships the proportion who are actually dummies is very great. In "Thompson and His Hippodrome" Samuel Merwin gives us a vivid picture of this great New York amusement palace, and sums up the character of Frederic Thompson in describing him as a mixture of dreamer, an artist and a whirlwind,—"a man who feeds on the impossible."

Railroad Engineer to Speak.

William Cary, the railroad engineer evangelist of Newark, will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mr. Cary will be assisted by John Le Maity who was his companion on the railroad before both of them became Christian men. They will both give an interesting testimony. Wm. C. Leek will be the soloist.

PRESENT METHODS HINDER ISSUING STATE REPORTS.

Dissatisfaction Shown Because Stokes Vetoed Morgan Act—Tables Ready.

The vetoing by Governor Stokes recently of the Morgan act, requiring all reports from state departments to be furnished by at least ten days before the opening of the Legislature, has caused careful inquiries to be made, and the result of this quest shows that many departments are hindered by the present method of contracting for the state printing.

While it is true that such departments as the department of banking and insurance cannot furnish their reports until some time in February of the following year, it is also true that departments with lots of tabular work are hindered during the year in not getting their work set up ready for printing.

For instance, the department of health has now ready 40 or 50 tables, which will lie idle until after the printing bids are let, some time after November 1. With these bids in now, this work could be gotten out of the way as a matter of weekly routine, greatly facilitating the getting out of this valuable report when the year's business is closed up. This department is necessarily one year behind in reports, and made in 1906 the report for the year 1904 now. If they could get their tables set up during the year current the report would be then only one year behind. As it is figures of value to the people of the state do not make their appearance in a form in which they can be studied until late in the summer. The report for 1905 could all be published this fall if bids were taken ahead of time and the work proceed as it is gathered.

While this department is almost unique in this regard, the other departments have matter on hand now for their 1906 report, which could be put into type so that the reports could be hurried from the press in the months of November and December, thus getting before the people by the opening of the legislature the greater mass of the reports.

As the method now is, bids for the printing of the state reports of 1906 will not be advertised for until the beginning of the next fiscal year, in November. By that time most of the state reports will be in the hands of the governor and they will be dumped on the printer, who will be swamped with work. Then the trouble will commence. Proof sheets have to be sent from parts of the state to the departments, and in many cases the departments do not return these proofs early. All these things necessitate delay and cause the people to grumble, and occasions vexatious delay in getting information which should be ready at the close of the fiscal year, or a short time thereafter.

AN ODD FRANCHISE DOWN AT ELIZABETH.

Public Service Gets It for Peculiar Reasons and Under Unusual Conditions.

The Elizabeth Council at its next meeting will very likely grant one of the most remarkable trolley franchises in the history of that city or of the State. It will give permission to the Public Service Corporation to construct a trolley line from the southern terminus of its present Broad street-Morris avenue line to the doors of the John Stephenson Car Shops, but after the Public Service Corporation puts up the poles, lays its tracks, strings its wires, and in other ways gets the line in operation, the city will take over the ownership of the tracks, the trolley poles and ties, as well as the right of way.

The reason for this is that several years ago the cofpany endeavored to secure a trolley franchise to the Stephenson Car Works. The city decided to demand certain concessions from the company. This the company refused to accede to. It withdrew its application and the trolley line has terminated at Bayway. A year ago the city, in order to accommodate the car works, which had been given considerable patronage by the trolley company, with the intention of securing from the city the franchise, finally, upon the ground that it was hindering the development of a local industry, consented to the laying of a horse car line to the works to connect with the present trolley line.

Then the trolley company gave orders for such large cars that it was found impossible to drag them over the steep grades with horses. Next came the application for electric power. This application was made at the last meeting of Elizabeth Council.

The proposition of Elizabeth Council to take over the ownership of this property was not received with much favor by the car works officials at last night's meeting, because they believed that it would seriously hinder the work of laying the rails while the city and the trolley company fought it out. The cars, all of a new type, the heaviest and finest on any line in this vicinity, and capable of high speed, will be ready for shipment by July 14. It is necessary that the tracks be laid before that time. These are the only conditions upon which the city will grant the franchise.

—The Plainfield Board of Assessors expect to complete its work here by July 10, when the books will be presented to the Union County Board of Taxation for inspection.

The menu cards were handsomely engraved folders, in two tones. A half-length photograph of Mr. Fisk, an excellent likeness, faced the menu.

Of itself, as a social affair, the dinner was delightful. A purely stag affair, a note of informality was struck as soon as the diners sat down, and as the evening wore on the spirit of joviality became more manifest.

A high class vaudeville show ran through the courses, and between and beyond the speeches. A group of late-arriving guests made the hit of the evening in the entertainment line. They were six of the star vocalists and funmakers of George Primrose's minstrel troupe, headed by the king of minstrels himself and Manager William J. Counihan. They came in quietly after 10 o'clock, by a side door, and in a lull after a burst of handclapping they broke suddenly into a splendidly-rendered medley. The diners greeted them with cheers.

Maze Edwards formally introduced them to the assemblage, and more cheers welcomed them. It was as old friends of Mr. Edwards, and as a mark of friendship for Mr. Fisk, that Mr. Primrose and his stars came to the dinner. The minstrel chieftan was personally introduced to Mr. Fisk and the distinguished guests at the speakers' table. He sat down to dinner at Mr. Edwards' table, with City Clerk MacMurray and Postmaster Bird on the opposite side of the board. The vocalists in his train were Charles Reinhart, Will Oakland, Clarence Marks, Emile Subers, Walter Brower and David Irwin. They were regaled with some birds and more bottles.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, the toastmaster, opened the flow of oratory when the demi-tasse period arrived, with an eloquent appreciation of Mr. Fisk. He climaxed his speech with the presentation of a silver goblet to the guest of honor, as his personal gift.

In opening, Mr. Gilbert said that he felt assured the diners all shared with him in kindly feelings toward the guest of the evening, and the banquetters made the hall ring with cheers as he brought out Mr. Fisk's name. The way to encourage merit and meritorious work, Mr. Gilbert continued, was to recognize and appreciate merit whenever it was seen. That was the spirit and the sentiment that brought them together. In speaking of the guest of the evening, he had inadvertently referred to him as "Mr. C. J. Fisk." He wished to withdraw that. Whoever spoke of "Mr." George Washington, "Mr." Thomas Jefferson, or "Mr." Abraham Lincoln? It was, always, simply George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and, sometimes, even "Abe" Lincoln. That mark of greatness belonged to Mr. Fisk. He has always known him, and everybody always referred to him, as Charley Fisk. He would call him that from then on; it was the sign-mark of his popularity.

They all knew, the speaker continued, that Charley Fisk was not a saint. The best of it was that he didn't pretend to be a saint. He was just plain and simple Charley Fisk. But he had a lot of good machinery aboard; he knew how to do things. That sort of man was a public benefactor, a standing pillar in society. The community in which such a man lives has a selfish interest in wishing him a long life and unbroken prosperity, and they all certainly wished it to Charley Fisk.

Such men, Mr. Gilbert continued, were the burden-bearers of society. They direct and control the machinery and keep it working properly. They were the public-spirited men, with active interest in charity, in religion, in public morals and politics. They were the warp and the woof of society, and stood for all that was good in the social organization.

Plainfield had been blessed with good public servants in the past, but Charley Fisk stood second to none of them. His 15 years of work in this city gave him pre-eminent standing as a useful, public-spirited citizen. He had come to Plainfield in 1888, and two years later he was in the Council, at which time the speaker had had the honor to be mayor. It was a serious time for the city; big matters awaited adjustment, and strong men were needed in the council. Charley Fisk had forged straight to the front in the important work of the body, and during the six years of the speaker's terms as mayor, he had been a strong right arm to him. He had always been ready to give of his counsel, his money and his work. His counsel was almost always good, his donations of money were always large, and his work was vitalizing.

How was such a man to be rewarded? The speaker wished that the city might have a thousand men like Mr. Fisk. If it had them, it would be, not the first city in the State, but the first city in the land. What could a community do for a man like Mr. Fisk, who wanted no office, wanted no money? There was one thing he did want, and that was to know he was entrenched in the hearts, and the minds and the affections of the people. That Mr. Fisk had, and the gathering marked the fact.

Mr. Gilbert closed with the presentation of the goblet. He poured wine into it, and offered the toast that is engraved upon it: "I propose the health of our fellow-townsman, Charles Joel Fisk, a man who plans, and works and gives for the community in which he lives." The toast was drunk standing. Ringing cheers and a chorus of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" followed it.

After presenting the goblet, Mr. Gilbert gave Mr. Fisk a souvenir menu card, bound in Russia leather, signed by all the diners.

More cheers broke out as Mr. Fisk arose. He spoke briefly and with evident feeling.

It was no small honor that had been conferred upon him, he said. It was surely not necessary for him to say that he appreciated, and thanked his friends for, the demonstration. He didn't think it was right, however, to take all the good things that had been said to himself, without giving credit to others who had shared in the work. C. J. Fisk had been only a small man in the crowd. There were splendid men in the council when he entered it, and credit was due them for their work at a time when good men were needed if they ever had been.

He had simply turned in to help, continued Mr. Fisk. In a number of instances he had been pushed forward to carry out things planned by other men, and credit should go to those who had done the planning.

He could name many who had served the city only for the good of the community. It was because of the number of such men with which Plainfield had been blessed that the city stood high. Every man who strove to better his city he sought to help. Bank clerk, laborer, or millionaire, so long as he worked for the community would have C. J. Fisk behind him.

Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, Mr. Fisks' pastor, spoke on public spirit, as evinced by the guest of the evening. He had heard of Mr. Fisk before he came to the city, and he knew him as a man of rare value in public works.

The exercise of public spirit was to be commended in the strongest terms, Dr. Zelie continued, and citizens in general should strive to waken it. It was too easy to think tht public spirit came by nature; it might be cultivated, and should be. Public-spirited men were readier to do things nowadays than they were a generation ago, and expressions of appreiation from the people were commoner.

Dr. Zelie spoke of Mr. Fisk's readiness to work for the good of the community and his friends at all times; of his gladness in the service he performed. Mr. Fisk, he said, thought in terms of the city, not only of his own household or his own friends.

It was a fine thing for Plainfield, the speaker said, that it could be moved to make such a recognition of merit. The city seemed ideal to him, and he congratulated Mr. Fisk on winning the tribute of its people. There was nothing better to be had.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh spoke after Dr. Zelie. He dwelt on Mr. Fisk's readiness to offer himself and his belongings for the good of the city. He didn't call Mr. Fisk perfect, he said in opening, he could get mad. Anybody who saw him in wrath over cruelty to a dumb beast or a child would realize that.

Mr. Fisk, he continued, was a man of achievement. He had fulfilled the prophecy of his first years here, and he was honored in his own country as a prophet who had made good his words. Mr. Marsh told how Mr. Fisk was always seeking laws for making the city better. How, when the press of a crisis made protective action necessary and no law covered the case, he never hesitated to risk his personal fortune in taking the steps he thought necessary. Mr. Fisk was no service seeker after popularity, Mr. Marsh said. He never allowed a thought of popularity to influence him when the community demanded what he was convinced was not good for it.

It was men like C. J. Fisk, the speaker said in closing, with which the city had been blessed, that made it a notable municipality, and not so much the natural advantages which the first thought usually springs when the secret of Plainfield's prosperity and reputation is sought.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed was the last speaker. He was brief, and spoke in a light vein. He felt impelled to take up the other side of the Fisk case, he said, and pointed out that, according to unchallenged statements and facts, Mr. Fisk had butted into office two years after coming to town, had remained in office ever since, was head of the machine, a politician and a Wall street magnate. "Why, he's everything that the writers of the Treason of the Senate" and such things "all bad," exclaimed Mr. Reed. The diners greeted Mr. Reed's sallies with much laughter.

Closing in a serious vein, Mr. Reed said Mr. Fisk was just the sort of man the masses loved to follow. He was a mixer—he knew how the common people felt; no man who did not have the faculty, could gain their fealty.

"If we had men like Charley Fisk over the brook," said Mr. Reed in conclusion, "the town would grow, and consolidation would come, and the name of the new city would be North Plainfield."

The North Plainfielders at the table cheered delightfully.

Much credit is due the committee in charge for the success of the dinner. It required a lot of work, and the committee members had their hands full arranging the function and getting it under way. They were Alexander Gilbert, chairman; O. T. Waring, Lewis G. Timpson, George A. Beaton, oseph M. Shellabarger, Henry L. Hall, Benjamin Wood and Frederic W. Butler.

JERE DUNN FAMOUS GAMBLER IS DEAD

HE HAD KILLED TEREE MEN AND DIES A NATURAL DEATH HIMSELF.

Jere Dunn, the old-time "sport," died yesterday at his home, 350 Chilton street, Elizabeth, N. J., of cancer, from which he had been an acute sufferer almost a year. Dunn was 63 years old last Sunday.

Dunn left little money of his own, but his wife is the owner of considerable property in Elizabeth and is said to be in very comfortable circumstances. She was rich in her own right when Dunn married her.

Dunn had been reported as dead a dozen times. Every newspaper office has in its files that many "write-ups" of Dunn that were compiled on reports of his death. Sometimes they came from Texas, again from San Francisco, at another time from Chicago. The reason for that was the nature of this disease.

Gambler, young "tough," killer of three men, backer of prizefighters and of race horses, associate of burglars, street car thieves, and all kinds of doers of evil in the sight of the law, ex-convict, friend of politicians —was the life of old Jere Dunn. Yet many good men found enough in him to like well. Barrymore when making up for Captain Davenport in "Alabama" said that he would wear only one kind of whiskers, and they were just like Jere's. The actor said he liked Jere because he never talked about himself and never told a lie.

Dunn was in this city when a young man and he was considered a fair sample of New York toughdom. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted with Ellsworth's Regiment, the Fire Zouaves.

In 1864 he killed his first man. He was then acting as a recruiting officer in Pennsylvania, and his victim was a negro bounty jumper. Jere said the killing was in self-defense, but he was convicted and sentenced to prison. The Governor pardoned him, saying that he should not have been convicted. Returning to New York, he said something about a bank burglar named Logan having been got out of prison through a corrupt judge. That brought on a fight; Logan was the victim.

Dunn went West, and quickly. For years he was a familiar figure in the gambling houses of Chicago and St. Louis. Then he came back to New York and he was sent to Sing Sing. A special law hustled through the Legislature got him out of prison in short order. He went West again, and in 1883 killed Jimmy Elliott, a prize fighter, in the Tivoli saloon, after thirty minutes fighting with pistols and fists.

Elliott had said he wanted to fight John L. Sullivan. Dunn arranged for the match, spending some money for advertising. Elliott backed out, and Dunn "went broke." He called the big fighter a cur. Elliott went further West, but was so taunted for not having fought Dunn that he went back to Chicago, saying that he would kill the smaller man. They met, but Dunn got the first shot. After a long tussle on the floor of the saloon, Dunn killed Elliott. He was acquitted on the ground of self-defense.

Coming again to New York, Dunn was ordered to leave by Byrnes, Superintendent of Police. He sent word to Byrnes that he would be at the St. James bar that night, and that he didn't believe he would have to leave New York. He didn't leave. After that he went on the turf, owned some horses himself, and maintained a training track at Elizabth, N. J. He was in San Francisco a few weeks ago.

'OPEN HOUSE' WAS GREAT

Somerset Club's Affair Proves One of the Pleasantest Ever Given in the Borough.

FULLY 500 GUESTS

Minstrel Men Provided Entertainment and Reception Committee Made Everyone Feel at Home.

"Open house" in every sense of the word prevailed in the rooms of the Somerset Club on Somerset street, last night, when the organization gave its first formal affair since it sprang into being. Without exaggerating a particle, is was one of the pleasantest and most unique affairs that has ever taken place in the borough and as a result the club bounded high in estimation and numbers. There was any quantity of wholesome refreshments, vocal and instrumental music and a chance for young and old to get acquainted and enjoy social talks.

Invitations to the affair had been sent out and it is estimated that there were 500 responses. The men began coming early in the evening and there were representatives from every part of the city and borough. As Dave Carney's invite card suggested, they "came a-foot and on hoss-back, came in automobiles, came on Maud and other horseless wheels." They were met at the door by a reception committee and directly they crossed the threshold they were made to feel at home.

There were easy chairs, attentive waiters to bring something for "the inner man" and expert instrumentalists extracted harmony from the piano. During intermissions a concert phonograph was operated by Joseph Colburn until the arrival of eGorge Primrose's minstrels. The number included Charles Reinhart, leading tenor singer with the troupe, David Irwin, bass singer and Clarence Marks, "coon shouter." Despite the fact that they had just returned from a tiresome parade the boys sang as though they had thousands for an audience instead of hundreds and responded repeatedly to encores. Reinhart made a big hit with "When the Whip-poor-Will Sings, Marguerite," and Irwin shook the floor beams with "Asleep in the Deep."

When the guests had seen and heard enough upstairs they were escorted downstairs where there were tables loaded with an abundance of cake, sandwiches, various vegetables and lemonade and they were invited to "help themselves." They didn't have to be told twice but the supply was unlimited.

The decorations were something wonderful and everyone who entered the rooms was compelled to make congratulatory remarks. It was all done by John Shroop and from appearances he must have worked day and night for a week. Flags and bunting were everywhere, palms and potted plants were set about so that every room was almost a bower and Director Shroop had so placed rugs and rockers that it was like the cosiest of homes. The windows facing on Somerset street were an attraction in themselves and extended a second invitation for those outside to "come in."

During the evening, a committee circled among the guests and explained the aims and objects of the club, thus securing sixty new members. It was made plain that the organization does not seek to advance anyone's political interests but desired to have a respectable meeting place in the borough where young and old could spend a few hours gossiping and getting acquainted with neighbors. Pool tables have already been installed and this winter there will be innocent games in abundance.

The committee which had charge of last night's affair consisted of David J. Carney, chairman; Mayor N. B. Smalley, Robert Trewin, John Shroop and Edward P. T. Smith. They were assisted by the officers of the club as follows: President, W. L. Smalley; vice president, Peter A. Emmons; financial secretary, H. M. Cook; recording secretary, John P. McCullough.

Garnishee Proceedings.

Following up an attachment issued by Justice Ritzler, of Englewood, Charles M. Young, of this city, has instituted garnishee proceedings in an effort to collect $180, claimed on a note given by Mrs. Louise M. Bacon, of Englewood. The garnishment is aimed at money due from J. A. Westervelt, of Englewood, for property purchased of Mrs. Bacon. The proceedings were instituted just in time to prevent the payment.

REV. HENRY A. PEARCE WEDDED AT SCHENECTADY CEREMONY WITNESSED BY A LARGE GATHERING OF RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

In the First Presbyterian church at Schenectady, N. Y., last evening, the marriage took place of Miss Viola Walker, of that place, and Rev. Henry Arthur Pearce, son of Frederick Pearce, of Essex street, this city. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. Myron A. Hempstead and was witnessed by a large gathering of relatives and friends, many of them from Plainfield and vicinity.

Miss Walker was attended by her sister, Miss Harriet Miller Walker, as bridesmaid, and she was given away by her brother, William Walker, of Westfield, Mass. The groom had for his best man, George W. Hitt, a classmate at Union College, while the ushers were Lewis T. Hunt, Union College, 1903; Bert W. Roy, Union, 1903, and Rolland B. Smith, Union, 1906. The best man and ushers are also members of Mr. Pearce's college fraternity, Delta Upsilon. Miss Helen Madeline Jeffers and Master William Walker Jeffers, niece and nephew of the bride, acted as flower girl and page.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home and later Mr. and Mrs. Pearce left on a trip. The former was recently admitted to the ministry, following his graduation from Union Theological Seminary and will probably accept a call to take up religious work among the Tennessee mountaineers.

Mr. Pearce is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and he has a host of friends in the city and borough. His course at Union College was marked by constant excellence in studies and prize winning. For many years he has been a valuable assistant at Hope chapel and his first sermon was preached before its congregation. His bride is but little known in Plainfield but enjoys a large acquaintanceship in her native city.

WILL ASK HEALTH BOARD TO CONDEMN TREES

ENEMIES OF ALANTHUS TREE STIRRED BY SMELL TO ACTION.

Residents of East Second street in the neighborhood of Washington street have joined in the complaint against the alanthus tree, and demand its general condemnation and proscription. A big alanthus tree on the block is said to be making life a burden to every one living within smelling distance of it, on warm days. The odor is said to be unusually sickening, and the East Second streeters are getting all worked up.

Steps have been taken to organize a general anti-alanthus tree society, and to urge the Board of Health to condemn the trees as nuisances and order them down wherever found. It is charged against the alanthus that it spreads malaria, and as much as possible will be made of the charge by the crusaders in their effort to have the tree put on the proscribed list.

This is not the first time that aggravated complaint has been made against the alanthus, but plans for organization and a crusade against the tree have never been formulated before. It begins to look as if the alanthus had the fight of its life before it.

The tree is said to have been introduced from the West Indies. Some people esteem it for its flowers, but the people who don't esteem it say the flowers are far, far from being a counterbalance to the smell.

Mrs. Entwistle Disappears.

Justice S. C. Mundy and Miss Holly, of the Organized Aid Association, yesterday completed the making out of papers for the purpose of taking Rosie Fisk away from her mother, Mrs. John Entwistle, recently fined $75 for abusing her. They were to have been served today but the authorities learned last night that Mrs. Entwistle had suddenly departed from the city and that the child had gone with her. An effort is being made to locate them as Mrs. Entwistle was under bonds, furnished when she appealed from the fine imposed by Justice Mundy.

Wants Additional Carriers.

Postmaster E. H. Bird expects a visit soon from the postal official in this district relative to increasing the local force of letter-carriers. Mr. Birding is hoping that at least three extra men will be allowed him and he is making a strong bid for that number. Then he will be able to give Plainfield and North Plainfield a satisfactory delivery service, which is not possible under present conditions.

SCHEME FOR FIRE HOUSE

New Structure in East End if Common Council Takes Expenses Out of General Fund.

ONLY $4,000 IS NEEDED

Better Fire Protection Sorely Needed In Netherwood Section—Members Favor the Improvement.

The question of erecting a new fire house in the East End of the city, as proposed from time to time, to give adequate protection to that rapidly growing part of the town, may be accomplished this year, if members of the Common Council are successful in having the city water rentals for hydrants transferred from the fire fund to the general fund. This amounts to about $4,000 a year and would be sufficient to erect a suitable fire house.

It is understood that the Common Council now has the right, by a recent act of the Legislature to transfer the hydrants rental to the general fund and it is possible that it may be done this year. In case it is the fire committee, it is said, would feel warranted in undertaking the improvement.

Within the last few years the East End of the city has developed very fast and it is almost too much to expect that the fire apparatus at fire headquarters can adequately protect the property there. Houses are constantly being erected in that part of the town and the residents claim that they are entitled to as much protection as the West End of the central part of the town. Last year's fire committee realized the condition, and this year's committee is in accord with the general opinion that something should be done in the matter.

To some parts of the East End it is a long distance from fire headquarters and much valuable property could be consumed before the apparatus arrived. A member of the fire committee, in speaking of the situation, says that it is only a question of time when a house will have to be erected in the East End of the city and equipped with apparatus similar to that in the West End. This would give ample protection and allow the apparatus at headquarters to take better care of the property within the central part of the town. This same member says that if the committee can get rid of the hydrant rental, it would be an easy matter to make the improvement.

The hydrant rental from the first has been charged up to the fire department fund and it has always proved a serious handicap in the way of making additional improvements. From time to time various committees have tried to have the account transferred without success. Now there is a law giving the Common Council the right to do so and it is believed that not much time will be lost in bringing the matter before the Common Council.

SOCIAL AND LECTURE AT BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Prof. Willis Tells How People May Be Judged By Noses and Ears.

The students of the Plainfield Business College held the biggest reception of their social season last night. It was an unqualified succcess, and the 125 guests enjoyed it to the full. The hall was decorated in red and white, the college colors.

A special feature of the evening was a lecture on "The Human Face and What It Indicates," by Prof. A. E. Willis, a phrenologist and physiognomist, of New York. His address was unusually interesting and amusing. It was illustrated by blackboard drawings.

Prof. Willis drew different types of noses, and told how the observer could read character by the different lines. He touched on the shape of the hands, the color and shape of the eyes, the formation of the ear, and what they all meant to those who could read the signs. He touched also on the walk and the laugh.

After the lecture selections on the piano were played by Miss Ethel Summers, of South Bound Brook, the students sang a chorus, and phonograph selections were played by Robert Cuzen. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge was made up as folllows: The Misses Lillian Kennedy, May Shotwell, Mary Foreman, Mabel Field, Addie Merangh, Edith Runk, Emily Guerrier, and Clyde Burgess, Harry Porter, Barton Davis, Russell Davis and George Cubberly.

—The concrete walk is completed in front of C. W. McCutchen's building on Park avenue, and as soon as the pipe connections are made to the adjoining property the walk will be continued to the railroad.

MOTHER GOES TO N. Y. TO GET DAUGHTER'S BODY

HELEN KUENLEN WILL BE BURIED TOMORROW—SUICIDE TRIP PLANNED.

Mrs. Marie Kuenlen and her son, Charles, went to New York this morning to bring back the remains of Helen Kuenlen from the New York morgue. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The interment will be at Bound Brook.

Detective Fogarty, whose investigations led to the identification of the body, will receive the $500 reward offered by Mrs. Kuenlen. The offer was for the recovery of the girl dead or alive, and the New York officer's claim to it is clear.

Among the things found on the body was a westbound half of an excursion ticket for Plainfield to New York. Its presence indicates that Chief Kiely's first information, that the girl was seen going toward the station the day of her disappearance was correct, although later clues made it appear as if she had ridden eastward through the county on the trolley.

It is said now that the girl made several trips to New York just before her disappearance which was unusual with her, and it is believed she had planned the suicide journey several weeks before she finally took it. The other trips, it is supposed, were taken in a tentative spirit, her nerve failing at the critical moment. She kept going into the city until there came the day when her courage reached the point of desperation.

CENTRAL WORKMAN KILLED AT FANWOOD

FAILED TO NOTICE THE APPROACH OF A BLUE LINE EXPRESS.

Frank Yacop, a member of the New Jersey Central's park gang, was struck and instantly killed in front of the Fanwood station by a Blue line flyer at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He had been picking weeds alongside the west-bound coal track and failed to notice the approach of the express which was running on it because of a blockade on the regular track. Yacop raised his head just as the engine was upon him and he was almost decapitated.

The body was picked up by fellow workmen and later brought to Cole's undertaking rooms in this city. The funeral will be held from there at 8:30 tomorrow morning and interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Yacop came to this country from Austria one month ago and went to work for the Central on June 8. He made his home in Jersey City at 47 Ash street and friends there took care of the funeral arrangements. He was twenty-six years old and leaves a widow and one child, who are in Austria.

Mixner—Bray.

Miss Alice Bray, daughter of Lawrence Bray, of Plainfield avenue, and Harry C. V. Mixner, also of this city, were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's rectory, by Father Bogan, pastor of the church. The couple was attended by Lawrence Bray, Jr., as best man, and Miss Margaret Bray, as bridesmaid, brother and sister of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Mixner left immediately afterward for a trip to Niagara Falls. They will reside in this city, where the groom is employed at the Manganese Safe Works.

Reception to Graduates.

The Alumni Association of St. Mary's Parochial School gave a reception in the school hall last night to this year's graduating class, at which time the graduates were received into the membership of the association. The programme of the evening consisted of recitations, class songs, several essays, after which the fascinating two-step was enjoyed until a late hour.

RUNYON OPENS CAMPAIGN

"New Idea" Candidate For Assembly Speaks at Mass Meeting in Elizabeth.

MR. COLBY ALSO TALKS

Record There Too—City Judge Says Reformers Are Good Sincere Republicans.

Considering the warm weather, a good sized audience gathered at Jacobs' theatre, Elizabeth, last night, to hear the apostles of "the new idea" expound their political doctrines, among the speakers being Judge Willliam N. Runyon, of this city, president of the Union County Republican League for Equal Taxation, under whose auspices the meeting was held. In the audience were a few prominent Elizabethans who have heretofore been allied with the regular organization.

Robert B. Cissell was chosen chairman after Thomas Debevoise, of Summit, vice president of the county league, called the meeting to order. The speakers in addition to Judge Runyon were State Senator Everett Colby, of Essex county, head of the reform movement, and Corporation Counsel George L. Record, of Jersey City, a candidate for United States senator.

Judge Runyon was given a hearty and spontaneous ovation. He spoke as follows:

"On the old principle that a child should be seen and not heard, and because my connection with the new idea is of such recent origin, I purpose saying but a word tonight.

"As I stand here, my mind travels backward two years, to another mass meeting held in this very hall, when I as the machine chairman of the meeting had the pleasure of introducing as the principal speaker of the evening, the machine elected Assemblyman from Essex, Everett Colby. Within those two years have come many and great changes, but no one can call Senator Colby any the less a Republican because of what he has done for the people, and neither do I feel myself any less a Republican for having espoused the principles for which he stands as champion.

"There are those who cry abroad that personal ambition is the motive of Colby and Record and Fagan—that they are not sincere in preaching peoples rights, but to all such I reply that I do believe them absolutely sincere and honest and that is why I'm willing to follow where they lead.

"I'll admit the reformers this year are out after the offices. They want everyone they can get. The time has gone by when the reformer delivers himself of a few glittering generalities and makes no further effort to right things. He has become more practical and is therefore decidedly more unpopular with the machine.

"I do believe in the sincerity of Colby and his associates. I believe that as Roosevelt has been raised up by Divine power for a great work in behalf of a whole nation, as La Follette has been brought forth in Wisconsin, and Folk in Missouri, so have Colby, Record and Fagan been raised up for a magnificent work in New Jersey and deserve the support of right thinking citizens.

"I ask you to hear their story and weigh the facts. If you will but do so, I believe Union county this fall will be found registered on the right side of the column and in favor of new idea."

The speech of Senator Colby was along the lines of the one he delivered in the Plainfield theatre some two weeks ago. He reiterated his declaration made at Jersey City when George L. Record's candidacy was launched by Mayor Mark Fagan that he would esteem it his high privilege and his duty to his constituents to lend his vote, his voice and his influence in behalf of Mr. Record when the Legislature chooses a successor to Senator Dryden next winter. He extolled the virtues of the Jersey City man. Among other things he said that Mr. Record was the first apostle of the new idea in politics in New Jersey and that he was working for reform in government when those who are now enlisting in the cause were totally unmindful of the duties they owed to the county and State. He emphatically declared that the present movement was not made up of men who considered themselves to be of the "holier than thou" type of citizens anxious to get the other fellows out to get jobs for themselves, but of men who believed that it is high time to rescue the Republican party from men who are using it for their own selfish gain in a way detrimental to the people and to the State government. Although not mentioning him by name, Senator Colby had some caustic remarks for R. V. Lindabury, the corporation

MAYOR BUCKLE WILL NOT ACCEPT RENOMINATION

Announces That He Favors Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk as His Successor.

NEW BOOM LAUNCHED

Organization Firm For Second Term For Buckle Until He Positively Declines to Run Again—Now Support Mr. Fisk.

Contrary to the accepted custom, Mayor James F. Buckle will not be a candidate for a second term. Furthermore, it can be stated to a moral certainty that former Mayor Charles Mayor James F. Buckle.

Joel Fisk will be the regular Republican nominee provided he can be prevailed upon to run. This is reliably reported to be the programme of the regular organization since Mayor Buckle has let it be known to intimate friends that he preferred to retire from the office.

In the event of Mr. Fisk consenting to take the nomination, a new phase will be put on the complexion of local politics. It is not at all certain that he will receive the support of the Colbyites, although the leaders in the "new idea" movement openly assert their esteem for him. From what can be learned, the Colbyites will place an entirely separate ticket in the field for the primaries. Henry L. Hall has been prominently mentioned as the likely man to be named by the anti-organization Republicans.

It is well known that he and Mr. Fisk are close personal friends. So also are Judge Runyon, president of the Union County Republican League and the chairman of the regulars. Whether Mr. Hall will consent to head the Colbyites ticket if Mr. Fisk is the choice of the regulars is not positively known. The faction with which Mr. Hall is identified claim that principles not men are the issues of the present propaganda. Therefore while they declare that they have confidence in Mr. Fisk as a man they cannot support his candidacy while he is allied with those whose ideas in politics they bitterly oppose.

Mayor Buckle has authorized The Daily Press to announce that he will not accept a second term. At the same time he desires it to be said that he is deeply grateful for the loyal support given him by the subordinate officers of the present administration and to the public generally. He has also authorized this paper to say that he considers former Mayor Fisk the best equipped man for the place, stating in addition that he will use all influence he has in the councils of the Republican party to bring about the nomination of Plainfield's "First citizen."

In conversation with a representative of The Daily Press, Mayor Buckle said last night: "I want you to say that I will not be a candidate for re-election. I feel that I have served in public office for a long time and I intend to retire when my present term expires."

Continuing, Mayor Buckle said: "Mr. Fisk is the man I would like to see as mayor. He is broad minded, liberal, and able and represents more than any other man I know the highest and finest type of citizen. Beyond all question there is not another man in the city who has given of his time, his knowledge, his labor and his means for the promotion of all that is good and best for the place. He is an ideal citizen and Plainfield would be very fortunate in having him as its chief executive. For my part I intend to do all I can to see him nominated and elected as the next mayor of this city."

It can safely be said according to one among the powers that be that

SCHOOL APPROPRIATION WAS PASSED.

By Vote of 32 to 10 Borough Board Authorized to Borrow $3,325.

By a vote of thirty-two to ten, the borough Board of Education was authorized by the citizens, last night, to appropriate a total of $3,325 for various improvements to the Somerset street school buildings and grounds. As can be seen from the number of ballots cast, but little interest was manifested in the meeting, yet the opposing votes caused some surprise. The board is authorized to borrow the money and provide for the payment of it by issuing the notes of the school district in such amounts and for such terms of years as the members deem best, but for no longer than four years.

The money is to be spent as follows: Repairing and painting the Somerset street school, $1,800; improving the Somerset street school grounds by the erection of a flagstaff, $850; improving the school grounds further by laying a sidewalk, $675.

Through Snowy Passes.

J. V. N. Willis, of the borough, has received an interesting note from B. F. Coriell, on a souvenir card mailed from Meiringen, Switzerland, on June 17, when Mr. Coriell and his two companions were there. In his message Mr. Coriell speaks of a mountain journey, through passes piled high with snow. "We walked for miles on snow," he says, "and it was piled up from 25 to 40 feet on each side of us."

MEN ARE POWERLESS

To Fight Against Disease Unless They Strike at the Underlying Cause.

To treat Dandruff, and Falling Hair, with irritants or oils on which a parasitic germ will prosper, is like scooping water from the ocean to prevent the tide from rising.

You cannot accomplish a satisfactory cure without having a right understanding of the fundamental causes of the trouble.

You must kill the Dandruff Germ.

Newbro's Herpicide does this because it is specially made to do that very thing.

When the germ is removed, the hair has no choice but to resume healthy growth and beauty.

"Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

MOVING TIME IS HERE.

Many people who have been dissatisfied with their apartments during the past winter would like to move to better themselves, but cannot afford to.

Why not come in and talk with us? If you owe a little back rent or grocery bill or the doctor or coal man, or you need money for rent in advance, it might possibly be an advantage to get a small loan, say $10, $25 or possibly $50, of us, and then pay it back in small amounts, either weekly or monthly, to suit your convenience. We loan from $10 up—any sum—any time. The possession of household goods, piano, or horse and wagon, are sufficient evidence of your ability to pay. A postal will bring us to your door.

PRIMROSE PARADERS CHEERED BY HUNDREDS

BLACK-FACE ARTISTS ACCORDED A GREAT PERSONAL DEMONSTRATION.

Amid the cheers of admiring hundreds and a blaze of red fire, George Primrose's big minstrel troupe made its first local appearance, last night, and incidentally began the season of 1906-7 by giving a big street parade. The black-face artists have made hosts of friends during the time that they have been in the city rehearsing and all along the line they were accorded an enthusiastic reception. At many points great quantities of rockets and firecrackers were set off and as Mr. Primrose remarked, "It was the greatest demonstration his troupe ever received." In front of the Somerset Club building in the borough the entire line was cheered to the echo and pyrotechnics lighted up the street for blocks. The bells in the engine house were rung and Mayor Smalley led in three cheers for the "King Bee of Minstrelry."

The parade was headed by Mr. Primrose, while positions of honor were accorded Manager "Bill" Connihan, who suggested the night procession, and Thomas M. Muir, of the local Gold Medal minstrels. All the artists were in line together with the Primrose band of twenty pieces and J. J. Hefferman's "one man" dum corps." The latter was mounted on a wagon and was a big novelty. It is composed of six bugles, twenty fifes and thirty snare drums, all operated by Mr. Hefferman with the aid of compressed air and electricity. It was invented by him and was first seen by Mr. Primrose last year at Salt Lake City, where Mr. Hefferman has been a newspaperman for twenty-two years.

At the close of the parade, the troupe formed a circle in front of the Hotel Iroquois and the band serenaded Proprietor Leary. The latter in turn made everybody in sight hold up a red fire torch and the end was veritably "amid a blaze of glory."

The first performance of the troupe for the season will be given in the New Plainfield theatre tonight and from indications there will be a big house. Tomorrow the company goes to Manhattan Beach for a two weeks' run and after that it goes on a tour of forty weeks that will take it to Oregon.

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED WITH ENTERTAINMENT

MUSICAL AND LITERARY AFFAIR AT TRINITY CHURCH PLEASES.

The musical and literary entertainment given in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, last night, for the benefit of the Sunday-school library, was such a success and was so pleasing to all that arrangements have been made for the return of the artists for another entertainment in the fall. There was a large audience and all were delighted with the programme and the work of those who presented it.

The entertainment was given by Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley and Miss Justine Roberts, who gave piano solos and duets and recitations and Miss Lidie Appelgate, soprano soloist. Miss Roberts gave the recitations, as well as playing with Mrs. Smalley in the duet selections.

Mrs. Smalley was heard at her best in the rendition of "Rigoletto" op 3, Litsz, and in two numbers, "Valse de Concert," Wieniawski, and "Com'e Gentil," Smith, the last number being played entirely with the left hand. Her duet work with Miss Roberts was also of the highest order. Her execution of the difficult numbers was perfect and it was a pleasure to listen to her. She was repeatedly encored and she responded generously.

As an elocutionist, Miss Roberts won a distinct triumph. It is seldom that one so satisfactory is heard. She also was obliged to respond to several encores. Her first selection was "When Love and Duty Meet," and in part second, a monologue, "Up the Aisle at the Wedding," with musical accompaniment by Mrs. Smalley, and "Christmas Gifts," were especially good.

As a soprano soloist, Miss Appelgate was well received. Her first number was "Because I Love You Dear." Afterward she sang "Good Bye," and "May Morning," together with several encores. She possesses a voice of much strength and sweetness and in her higher notes she showed perfect control.

The excellent programme was as follows:

Duet, (piano)—"Arena," Op. 608, Englemann, Miss Justine Roberts and Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley; soprano solo, "Because I Love You Dear," Hawley, Miss Lidie Appelgate; recitation, "When Love and Duty Meet," May Ellis Nicols, Miss Justine Roberts; piano selection, "Rigoletto," Op. 3, Litsz, Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley; soprano solo, "Good Bye," Tosti, Miss Lidie Appelgate; recital, "Christmas Gifts," Miss Justine Roberts; piano selections, "Valse de Concert," Wieniaswski, "Com'e Gentil" (left hand, Smith, Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley; soprano solo, "May Morning," Denza, Miss Lidie Appelgate; monologue, "Up the Aisle at the Wedding," Miss Justine Roberts, assisted by Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley; duet (piano), "Martha" DeFlotow, arranged by Sydney Smith, Miss Justine Roberts and Mrs. Ida Randolph Smalley.

The entertainment was arranged by the library committee, of which Fred Dunavan is the chairman, and a considerable sum was realized as profit for the library.

LETTER FROM MR. BROSS.

He Says He Regrets Publicity Given Through Divorce Case.

New York, June 28, 1906.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In regard to the Torbert divorce notice and the Torbert-Eggerding wedding notices published in your issue of the 25th inst., I regret to see that you went out of your way to make a sensational article out of it, which was wholly unnecessary and which has brought suffering on innocent people.

I do not know where you got the sensational features of that article from, but so much of it is in excess of the strictly legal divorce notice and statement of my reasons for publishing that notice, I did not authorize, and therefore repudiate the same.

I request that you publish this letter in your next issue.

ANDREW BROSS.

[The article to which Mr. Bross refers was published, with an interview with Mr. Bross, in the New York Times, the Brooklyn Eagle and other clean and reputable newspapers before it appeared in The Daily Press. "The suffering brought on innocent people" was caused no doubt by Mr. Bross's insertion of the divorce advertisement in this and New York papers.—Editor.]

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Don't fail to see the game of baseball tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock between the rival teams of Plainfield and Westfield. A hot contest is anticipated as Plainfield beat the last game and Westfield is seeking revenge. Phil. Smith has won every game played at the oval this season and will will pitch tomorrow.

On Sunday next quite a number of young people from here will attend the picnic at Bellewood Park, a beautiful resort on the top of a mountain in northern New Jersey. Train leaves South Plainfield 9:40 a. m. Returning will leave Bellewood at 5:30 p. m.

The picnic to be given on July 3 by the Good Government Club at Hamilton Park, opposite Lehigh Valley depot, bids fair to be a great success. A fine dancing pavilion has been erected.

Quite a number of young men who do business in New York city and commute are obliged to leave on the early train, 6:50, which gives them an unusually long day.

David Kellogg is home from South America and will spend the summer with his parents at their summer home here.

MAYOR BUCKLE TO RETIRE

there is not one of the regular leaders who would be elated over having Mr. Fisk head the municipal ticket. He is unusually familiar with city affairs. His experience in the Common Council and mayor for two terms has fitted him, it is argued, most admirably to administer the municipality's affairs.

Mayor Buckle has devoted his best efforts and a great deal of his time to the administration of the city's affairs. While his enemies have attacked some of his actions, no one has ever questioned his sincerity and his loyalty to the municipality's best interests. "Mayor Buckle has made an excellent record, one to be proud of," said a leading Republican today. "I think the city is under great obligations to him," he added.

Every man in the regular organization favored a second term for Mayor Buckle, until he positively declined to be the party candidate again. They feel that he has made a good record and is entitled to a second term, but the present incumbent would not listen to their pleadings to accept a renomination. When the leaders learned his decision the boom for Mr. Fisk was immediately launched, but as far as is known the prospective candidate of the party has not yet said that he will head the regular Republican ticket. Both men have strong personal friends among the Colbyites, notwithstanding the peculiar state of political affairs.

HAROLD A. NOMER WINS COLLEGE PRIZES

PRIZES AMOUNTING TO $65 AWARDED YOUNG PLAINFIELDER AT WILLIAMS.

Awarded high honors in college and class at his graduation, Harold A. Nomer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Nomer, of East Seventh street, received the degree of bachelor of arts from President Henry Hopkins at the one hundred and twelfth commencement of Williams College yesterday. On the platform with him, as his classmates in 1906, were Erwin Briant Leland, of Sandford avenue; Kerro Knox, of Rockview avenue, and Brockholst Kip Miller, of Watchung avenue.

Nomer was a graduate of the city High School in the class of 1902 and throughout his course at Williams has been prominent in college debating. He has won three gold medals as member of the Williams debating team in debates with Wesleyan and Dartmouth and is an officer in the Adelphic Debating Union of the New England triangular debating league. Yesterday in the award of prizes, Nomer received $65 in two prizes for public speaking. He won a commencement appointment, for scholarship higher than 85 per cent. during his entire college course and for excellence in delivery of his commencement address at the graduation exercises, he was awarded $50. He spoke on "Civil Service." Fifteen dollars, the second prize for excellence in college debating, was also awarded to him. Nomer will be remembered in town for his commencement address on the probationary system in this State given at the High School graduation exercises in 1902.

Popular in his class, Nomer gave the class day oration and the ivy oration on the occasion of the planting of the 1906 ivy plant at class day exercises Wednesday. At the alumni banquet held in Lasell gymnasium Wednesday, Nomer was called upon to respond to the toast "1906" for his class. This is the highest honor his classmates could bestow.

Leaving college, Nomer is planning to study law. He is also especially interested in a political career and was president of the Williams College City Government Club, a branch organization of the College Men's Civic Club comprising thirteen eastern colleges, and organized to house the interest of college men in municipal politics.

lawyer identified with the Prudential Insurance Company and the Public Service Corporation.

Corporation Counsel George L. Record delivered an eloquent speech in which he arraigned the State organization unmercifully. Like Senator Colby he paid an eloquent tribute to Judge Runyon and pleading for loyal and enthusiastic support of his candidacy. He made no denial of the fact that the Colbyites wanted the offices, stating plainly that no reforms could be brought about so long as the members of the Legislature were mere puppets of the machine doing what they were told without having the privilege of thinking for themselves or being allowed to truly represent their constituents.

Marshall & Ball Clothing
The Highest Type of Ready-to-Wear.

OF COURSE YOU ARE GOING TO CELEBRATE.

Who isn't going to celebrate the birthday of our Glorious Country? And the man or young man who has in mind a new suit for the Fourth hasn't time for much delay.

Most men will pick out a Blue Serge on account of its coolness and extreme dressiness. But Two-piece Outing Suits in gray mixtures will be a close second.

In either choice there's the greatest satisfaction in coming to the Marshall & Ball Store. Aside from the assurance of right materials, our long experience in tailoring Summer fabrics eliminates all chance of your suit losing its shapeliness.

We're equally well prepared for the fellow who wants White Duck or Flannel Outing Trousers to wear with his blue serge coat.

Blue Serge Suits ..... $12 to $25 — Two-piece Outing Suits ..... $10 to $14
White Duck Trousers ..... $1.50 — Flannel Outing Trousers ..... $3 to $6.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to use it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Axienza Cream, which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Axienza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Axienza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

"MARTY" O'LOUGHLIN OUT OF GOLF CONTEST.

Plainfield Professional Fails to Qualify On Chicago Links.

Much to the disappointment of his friends, "Marty" O'Loughlin, the professional from the Plainfield Country Club, failed to qualify in the first thirty-six hole play in the national open golf championship at Onwentsia, Chicago, yesterday. According to the rules of the United States Golf Association all contestants with score of 15 or more strokes over the first ten players drop out. This narrows the field today to fifty-five players. While O'Loughlin was not high man by any means, he returned a score of 168 for the thirty-six holes. His partner in this play was Percy Barrett, Lambton, who made a score of 156.

Alexander Smith, the Western title holder, who hails from the Nassau Country Club, led the players with 147 for the first half of the competition. Willie Anderson, Willie Smith and Alexander Smith tied in the first eighteen hole round, all getting 73 for the initial journey in the race for the championship.

You can't beat the West End for sport, said an old timer last night. Facts prove it in these few instances. The "culled" folks," three weeks ago had a tennis court fixed up on West Fourth street near John street, and have become red-hot devotees of the rubber ball and net sport; then there is Captain Feiring, who is practicing up auto racing with his new bubble; Bob Gow, secretary of the baseball association, is beginning to chirp about organizing a cricket eleven again; the most dramatic incident, however, of the past week was the announcement of former Councilman Stephen Higham to the effect that he has become a golfist—a real one too. He has joined the Westfield Golf Club and made his first appearance with the sticks Saturday and Sunday; now Arthur McVoy and former Tax Collector Lee are talking of forming a tennis club.

JUSTICE HAND QUITS.

Will Give Up His Office July 1 on Account of New Court.

Justice Hezekiah Hand will give up his office and active work as a justice of the peace on July 1. He has decided that the establishment of the district court takes away too much business to make it worth while to continue his court regularly.

The Judge has been conected with the courts in some capacity for the past twenty-five years. He has been a justice only five years, but before that he was a court officer at Elizabeth and a constable of Fanwood township. He was postmaster at Scotch Plains several years and a supervisor of roads. For the past two years he was the busiest justice in the city, and his retirement is peculiarly significant of the major effect of the district court.

PRIMROSE SHOW A HIT

Famous Black-Face Troupe Delighted Big Crowd That Braved the Heat.

ALL STAR ARTISTS

"King Bee of Minstrelsy" Scores With His Ever Popular "Lazy Moon" and Solo Dances.

Heat has no terrors for lovers of minstrely as was evidenced at the New Plainfield theatre last night, when the perennial George Primrose and his all-star company of black face artists opened their annual American tour. Despite the fact that the thermometer obstinately refused to take a tumble, the playhouse was practically filled and there is no doubt but what the "King Bee" and his men would have been greeted with a capacity audience had it been a little cooler.

But after all, it was not so frightfully warm and what heat there was stirring was forgotten in the absorbing interest directed toward the stage. To get right down to facts, the show is a "winner" and made one of the biggest hits of any attraction of its kind that has ever visited the city. The term of "all star" as applied to the artists, is no misnomer. There is not a dull moment in the whole performance and if the tour doesn't prove a whirlwind of success Plainfield is no judge of minstrelsy.

The curtain rises on an elaborate stage grouping representing minstrelsy in the days of 1843. There is a collection of old time songs, medleys, dances and jokes, after which there is a dark change and the company reappears in conventional evening dress and the setting of the refined black face show in its highest state of development. In the first part E. S. Allyn is interlocutor and the comedians on the ends are Mr. Primrose, Ed Mazier, Emile Subers and Eddie Horan. All made individual hits, especially Mr. Primrose and Eddie Horan, the latter giving a laughing song and eccentric dance that took the house by storm. The first part closed with a burlesque musical skit, "Madame Rascally's Recital," in which Ed Mazier convulsed the audience as the "Madame," directing a quartette of energetic musicians.

The second part opened with a burlesque of every-day hotel life, entitled "The Magnolia Hotel," after which Mr. Primrose, who has earned the title of "America's most graceful dancer," presented a melange of his world-famous dances including the always popular "Lazy Moon." In this he was assisted by sixteen "pickaninnies," all young boys trained by himself. When the head of the company stepped into the glare of the spot-light at the finish and gave his delightful "solo" dance it capped the climax to the whole show and the applause was deafening.

Emile Subers was next with a monologue that had local "hits" and was followed by another feature number, a drill of the Southern cadets. "The Silver Shower Clog," a terpischorean number by the Primrose champion dancers, was remarkable for the rhythmic motion of the men and the pretty costumes and proved the success that it has attained in former years. The show closed with a grand, spectacular transformation depicting scenes in the South, the effect requiring the heaviest set of drop scenery ever carried by a minstrel show. It was in six parts showing in order, "The colored man in the moon," "Dismal swamp," "Old Kentucky Home," "Down upon the Suwanee River," "The Emancipation" and "Darkies Heaven."

The company left today for Manhattan Beach where it remains for two weeks. It then visits some of the Jersey coast resorts and tours the East until late in the Fall, visiting Plainfield again in October. After that it goes straight across the continent as far as Oregon.

Thanks the Police.

August W. Kleinecke has written to Chief Kiely from Seal Harbor, Me., to express his appreciation to the police for the capture of Wilson, the negro burglar, who was nabbed after an unsuccessful attempt to rob his house Monday afternoon. Mr. Kleinecke wants Wilson to get the limit. He says too many burglars get away and the ones that are caught ought to get a heavy dose to throw a scare into the rest of the fraternity.

MUSSY BURGLAR ROBS E. SEVENTH ST. HOUSE

HE THREW THINGS WILDLY AROUND, BUT NEGLECTED VALUABLE LOOT.

A robbery that is puzzling the police occurred at the home of Mrs. Mary J. Hawkins, East Front street, last night. The police are perplexed because the crook went off with only a chip diamond and a woman's watch, with plenty of time apparently to gather much more valuable loot in plain sight.

The robbery occurred between 8 and 9 o'clock, while the family were out. Mrs. Hawkins was at the theatre and her son and daughter were attending a meeting at the Park avenue Baptist church. The son, Joseph Hawkins, was to have gone to the treatre after his mother, but before proceeding to the playhouse after the church meeting he went home to look over the house. Evidences of the burglary were all about him the minute he entered the door. The house was upside down. Closets had been rummaged, bureau drawers and chests emptied in all directions. Even the furniture was upset. Entrance had been gained through a window screen.

After a look over the mess left by the thief, Mr. Hawkins expected to find everything worth taking gone. An inventory disclosed the surprising fact that only a chip diamond ring of his own, and a small watch that his sister Florence had received last Christmas was missing. To emphasize the peculiarity, $40 in bills and a solid gold watch, lying in plain sight in a drawer, were undisturbed.

The police were notified and started on the case without delay. They could find no clues and had no theory to offer for the queer features of the affair.

ORGANIZATION MEETING IN SOMERSET DELAYED

ONLY A DOZEN TURNED OUT IN SOMERVILLE LAST NIGHT.

The expected organization meeting of the Somerset County Colbyites was not held at Somerville last night. Only about twelve people turned out, and at the suggestion of the temporary president, W. W. Howland, the meeting was indefinitely postponed.

The attendance at the meeting is no indication of the strength of the movement, according to those leading it. Former Assistant Prosecutor Pope said he had received over 100 applications for membership on the cards he sent out.

John S. Gibson and W. H. Parry, of Newark, spoke briefly to the faithful dozen last night, and cheered them with tales of the battle and its humble beginning in Essex.

PARTITION ENTIRELY REMOVED FROM POSTOFFICE.

New Fixtures to Be Installed and Other Improvements Made Before Middle of August.

The partition separating the postoffice from the corner store in the Babcock building, which was recently leased by the Government, was removed yesterday and the whole space was thrown into one room. The rear part of the new portion to be used has been shut off in front to keep patrons of the office out, but with this change one can get an idea of the greater facilities and advantage of the improvement.

When the new fixtures are installed about the first part of August, tney will contain new and larger private mail boxes, as well as those of the present size, but one improvement will be that they will be located at a proper height for the comfort of the owners. The private boxes now used are close to the floor and much inconvenience is experienced in getting mail out of them. With the removal of the partition greater light is secured for the convenience of the carriers and clerks and the ventilation is better, plenty of air being secured from the Madison avenue side of the building.

E. Vassar, of Elizabeth. It is expected that Baptist churches throughout Union county will attend the exercises. If the day should be stormy the exercises will be held in the present Baptist church building on Milton avenue.

FISK LIKELY TO ACCEPT

Organization Men Confident That He Will Consent to Run For Mayor.

COLBYITES' POSITION

Anti-Administration Men Are Non-Committal—The Local Situation.

Although no word has been received from former Mayor Charles J. Fisk since Mayor Buckle announced exclusively in this paper yesterday that he had decided to retire at the end of his present term in his favor, the statement made that there was every reason to believe that Mr. Fisk would accept a nomination is borne out by expressions on the part of party leaders. Mr. Fisk is at his summer home in Easthampton and is expected to return to his home here for a day or two next week. As city chairman he is keeping in touch with the political trend of affairs both in county and city, and has announced his intention not to absent himself for any long period until after the battle at the polls is over.

It is well known among Mr. Fisk's intimate associates that his wife dissuaded him not to accept a mayoralty nomination two years ago when the leaders were begging him to be the candidate. He was in ill-health at that time but today he is the picture of good health. Those who oppose a commutator for chief executive of the city find their argument fall short in his case for it is Mr. Fisk's custom to spend the larger part of the week at his home here.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith says that he believes Mr. Fisk will accept the nomination. He adds that the prospective candidate would be an ideal man for the place. In this he agrees with Mayor Buckle, whose views were quoted yesterday in The Daily Press.

The Colbyites are non-committal as to Mr. Fisk's candidacy. A few of them are said to oppose him on the ground that he is the present head of the regulars' organization, although they all agree that he is well suited for the position and would make an excellent mayor. A report in circulation this afternoon has it that the Colbyites are apt to endorse his nomination.

HARRY HANSON HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

MACHINE BROKE TWO RIBS AND INFLICTED OTHER INJURIES.

Harry Hanson, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hanson, of Lincoln place, was run over and painfully injured by an automobile belonging to F. G. Sherman, of Westervelt avenue, on Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon. When picked up the boy was unconscious and remained so for five minutes. He is now at his home, suffering from two broken ribs, several severe cuts and a bad shaking up.

Harry is employed by W. L. Smalley & Co., and had been delivering orders on a bicycle. He was wheeling down Watchung avenue on the right hand side going toward North avenue, when Mr. Sherman's auto came toward him from the opposite direction. Because of a crowd alighting from a trolley car to the right, the driver suddenly swung the machine to the left and it was upon the boy before he was noticed.

He was knocked from his wheel and fell beneath it, this fact probably saving him from being crushed to death. The automobile passed over both boy and wheel and some of its 2,000 pounds weight was borne by the machine. The boy was lifted up by Charles Lyman and taken to Cadmus' drug store, where temporary treatment was given by Dr. Gesswein and Frank Dencklau. Dr. Zeglio, the family physician, took charge of the case when he was removed to his home and states that the injuries will not prove fatal.

Chicken Thief Caught.

A large mink which hase been killing and eating many chickens in the vicinity of Green brook, was shot yesterday by one of the farmers in that neighborhood. For a long time the disappearance of chickens was a mystery to the owners, until the mink was caught yesterday in the act of running off with a small chick. Some of the farmers have lost as many as twenty-five chickens.

IRON GRILL CUTS OPEN A WORKMAN'S FOOT

IRA BOWERS SEVERELY HURT AT NEW TRUST COMPANY BUILDING.

Ira Bowers, a helper employed by the W. T. Kirk Co., was severely injured by the fall of a heavy piece of iron grill work that was being placed in one of the windows of the new Trust Company building on Park avenue, early this forenoon.

The iron work, weighing over 1,000 pounds, was being raised to a window on the Second street side of the building, when the derrick rope broke and the grill crashed down. It struck Bowers a glancing blow across the feet. His left foot was crushed aud cut, and the shock keeled him over. He was carried to B. J. Schreiner's pharmacy, where Dr. Long looked over his injuries. The left foot was cut open to the bone, and it looked as if the bone itself had been broken. The right foot was badly scraped and bruised.

Dr. Long advised Bowers to go to the hospital, but he refused to go anywhere except home. He was taken there in a carriage.

THREE MILES IN RECORD TIME.

Distance in 1 Minute and 50 Seconds by P. and R. Express.

Engine No. 6,000 of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, attached to the Philadelphia express, made a most remarkable run between Plainfield and Elizabeth Thursday night. The train is scheduled to leave Plainfield at 7:32 p. m., and is due at Elizabeth at 7:47 p. m.

The train left Plainfield on time, but its progress was retarded because of a delayed local being on the main track ahead. When Westfield was reached the express was five minutes late. Between Westfield and Cranford the local took a side track, giving a clear way to the express.

Full steam was put on, and the five minutes, which were lost, were made up, and the express rolled into the Elizabeth station on time, in fact, a few seconds ahead. The run from Roselle to Elizabeth, a distance of three miles, was made in one minute and fifty seconds, a record time for short distances.

COLORED BURGLAR IS AN OLD JAILBIRD

TWELVE YEARS IN SING SING PART OF OF HIS RECORD.

Henry Wilson, the negro crook captured after an attempt to rob the house of A. W. Kleinecke, was committed to the county jail yesterday, pending his indictment by the grand jury.

Chief Kiely secured Wilson's record in New York, and the crook will have the weight of two convictions for burglary against him when he faces the judge. He was arrested, and convicted of burglary, in New York in 1893, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for a year and fined $150. Convicted of burglary a second time in New York, in 1896, he was sent to Sing Sing for twelve years. That conviction followed a robbery of an apartment at 239 Central Park West, where he got $8,000 worth of jewelry.

Wilson tried to throw the chief off his trial by holding his tongue under examination, but the game didn't work. The New York police recognized his description and photograph immediately, and the chief learned all he wanted to know about him. He has travelled under the names of Johnson and Edwards, and is regarded as one of the most dangerous crooks in the business.

LANDLORD WON CASE.

Tenant's Damage Set-off Not Allowed by District Court.

Suing for three months' rent, James A. Francis secured a verdict in full against Martin Rose, before Judge Swift in the District Court yesterday afternoon. The money involved mounted to about $100.

Rose acknowledged owing the rent, but filed a set-off for damages resulting from the fall of a ceiling in the house. He held back the money, because Francis paid no attention to his first notification of the ceiling's bad condition, and only took action after a second and more serious fall.

The plaintiff contended that there was no specific agreement that he should make repairs, and the court ruled that where no express agreement of that nature exists, the tenant cannot hold back rent or act on lines consistent with such agreement. The defendant contended that there was an agreement, and held that the plaintiff acknowledged the existence of one in finally making repairs, but the court ruled that the existence of the agreement claims had not been shown.

W. A. Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, appeared for the plaintiff.

Herman C. Blanchard, seventeen years old, of this city, was saved from drowning by a heroine at Lake Hopatcong this week.

Blanchard was cut in a skiff, alone, when the boat upset. He cannot swim, and called for help as he struck the water. Miss Jennie Thorpe, of Paterson, was among the boaters on the lake who heard his cries. Miss Thorpe is an athletic young girl and an expert swimmer. She diver overboard at Blanchard's first call and reached his side in time to save him. Blanchard had sunk twice and was exhausted before Miss Thorpe got to him, and would undoubtedly have drowned but for the young woman's pluck and skill. He suffered from shock, but recovered after medical attendance at a hotel.

READY TO OPEN CAMP

Netherwood Fresh Air Home To Re-Open For the Summer on Monday.

MISS CURRY IN CHARGE

Alexander Gilbert Presents Natatorium and Summer House—Repairs and Improvements.

With repairs completed and numerous improvements made to buildings and grounds, the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp is all ready to open for its fourth season in Plainfield on Monday. A brother of Miss Curry has been living at the camp during the winter and a corps of house cleaners and gardeners has been at work fixing up buildings and grounds and this morning the finishing touches were put in, bedding and boxes unpacked and everything made ready for the formal opening on Monday. None of the New Yorkers have arrived, but Miss Sara Curry and a few of the mothers will come to Plainfield late this afternoon to spend Sunday at the home and make final preparations. Monday Miss Curry will return to New York and bring out the first delegation of mothers and children, probably abou thirty-five.

Among the improvements at the camp for this season, that which will bring most delight to the little New Yorkers will be the new natatorium—a gift of Alexander Morgan. This is a concrete swimming pool four feet deep for the use of the smaller children. It is situated to the northeast of the main building and measures 25 by 60 feet. It will be filled with water from the small lake, where the larger children swim. It is not yet quite completed, but will be ready by the latter part of the week. The natatorium is complete in itself, with six bath-houses at its edge.

Alexander Morgan has also arranged for a new pavilion overlooking the lake. This measures 20 by 40 feet and has just been completed. It is fitted with tables and benches for the younger children. The buildings of the camp have been connected by a covered roof walk, so that the mothers and children may pass from one to another in rainy weather. Several walks have been remade and and the swings have been replaced on the grounds.

Various donations of clothing, food and toys, together with some money has made it possible for the camp to open the season on a firm financial basis. Through the kindness of some of the friends of the camp, arrangements have been completed for a Netherwood camp wagon which will call at houses in city or borough for donations of clothing, food or toys from any who are interested in Miss Currys work.

As a result of the successful lawn fete held at the home of J. Wesley Johnson Thursday, $80 has been turned over to Dean Erskine M. Rodman for Miss Curry's work. Friends of Miss Daisy Robinson, who recently gave an entertainment for the benefit of the camp, have sent $1.50 to The Daily Press to swell the fund and "F. T." has donated through The Daily Press $3 for the same work.

Heicher—Hallock.

At the bride's home in Rochester, N. Y., Thursday evening, Miss Margaret Sutherland Hallock, daughter of Mrs. Adelaide Farnsworth Hallock, was married to Professor Merlo Wordsworth Heicher, formerly a teacher in the North Plainfield High School. The bridegroom has taught in the North Plainfield school until the close of the present term, but has been under appointment to go as a missionary to Japan, and the marriage was arranged with this matter in view. The bride also was a teacher in the North Plainfield school for some time, and there the courtship began. Professor and Mrs. Hiecher have gone to visit relatives in Pennsylvania, and will sail for Nagasaki from Seattle on July 25.

New Trolley Cars in Use.

Trolley car No. 1915, one of the first shipment of the new type received by the Public Service Corporation, made its initial trip over the main line this morning and is now in regular service. The car is forty-five feet long, can seat many more passengers than the old style car and is equipped with all the latest improvements. One noticeable improvement is that the heater is removed from the interior and the car will be heated from the front platform occupied by the mortorman. The rear platform is left entirely free for the use of passengers.

Miss Helen Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phillips, of Rockwell avenue, has returned from Providence, R. I., where she was bridesmaid at the marriage of her friend, Miss Reed.

COLBY LEADERS TALK ABOUT THEIR PLANS.

Discuss Situation in State and Look Over Field of Local Mayoralty Candidates.

Senator Everett Colby held a conference this week with some of the leaders in the "new idea" movement at the headquarters of the Republican League for Limited Franchises and Equal Taxation, Gardner Colby, president, and Lathrop Anderson, vice-president of the league; Sheriff Frank H. Sommer and Assemblyman William P. Martin were among those at the conference, and George L. Record, of Jersey City, who accompanied Mr. Colby to Englewood, was also present.

The present situation in the State was discussed and plans for continuing the canvass for the election of members of the Legislature pledged to the principles of the movement were considered. It was decided to hold a massmeeting at which Mr. Colby and other men prominent in the movement will speak in this city, probably on the night of July 12, either in the Newark theatre or a large hall, to be selected.

On the same afternoon will be held in this city a convention of all the State leaders of the new movement, at which views will be exchanged and plans for furthering the work will be discussed.

On the night of July 12 a meeting will be held either at Chatham or Hanover, Morris county.

The local men at the conference yesterday discussed the merits of some of the men who have been named in connection with the Newark Mayoralty nomination, but no definite conclusion was reached as to the availability of any particular candidate.

RUSHING WORK ON TUBERCULOSIS HOME.

State Hospital at Glen Gardner to Be Completed Before End of Year.

Trenton, June 30.—Work on the buildings that will constitute the State tuberculosis hospital at Glen Gardner is progressing nicely this summer, and the commission expects to see the completion of the building by the first of the year. Owing to the failure of the last Legislature to vote an appropriation for maintenance it will be impossible to open the institution for the reception of patients until May 1, 1907, at the earliest. While the Legislature will meet and probably arrange for a sufficient sum for maintenance early this year, the fund will not be available until May 1.

When completed and in running order the institution will be one of the foremost of its kind in the country. As the law now stands it will be free to indigent patients in the first stages of the disease, but in order to obtain admission patients will have to be vouched for as to their straightened circumstances, and will have to undergo an examination at the hands of official examiners to see that their cases have not progressed too far for admission to the hospital. It will cost the State about nine dollars a week to care for each patient admitted, and as the capacity of the institution is 108 patients, without counting those that may be cared for in temporary buildings, it can be seen that the burden of housing and giving medical attention to sufferers is a heavy one, and it is possible that the present law will be changed so that patients will be admitted only when able to pay something for their care.

There are 600 acres of land devoted to hospital purposes and the buildings are situated on the slope of a mountain in one of the most beautiful spots in the State. The elevation is 950 feet above sea level, and the buildings will be sheltered by heavy woods from cold winds, yet will be in the purest air to be had. The permanent buildings will consist of an administration building, servants' quarters and two pavilions for the open-air treatment of tuberculosis, each capable of accommodating fifty-four patients. One will be set aside for the men, the other for female patients. Besides temporary buildings, of frame construction, will be erected as occasion demands them, for use during the summer months. The permanent buildings are being constructed of iron and stone.

The commission in charge of the institution now consists of Dr. Charles J. Kipp, of Newark; Dr. Austin Scott, of New Brunswick; Dr. James S. Green, of Elizabeth; Dr. Elmer Darwis, of this city; Dr. William S. Jones, of Camden; and A. L. Beavers, of High Bridge. There are two vacancies on the board which the governor did not fill last winter.

Until they know positively what the maintenance appropriation will be, the commissioners cannot say definitely what will be done in the way of treating cases. The State has already spent $250,000 on land and buildings, or has contracted to pay out that sum, and has appropriated the sum of $30,000 for equipment. The hospital might have been running now had not the Legislature been backward in making appropriations. It is likely that physicians will be stationed in different parts of the State to examine applicants for admission to the hospital and save poor people the expense of the trip to Glen Gardner.

FOR ROOSEVELT IN 1908.

National Committeeman Says Voters Will Demand Renomination.

New York, June 30.—William L. Ward, National Republican Committeeman, announced himself in Port Chester Wednesday in favor of the renomination of President Roosevelt in 1908. Mr. Ward believes that the people will insist on the renomination of the President, whether he wants the office or not. Mr. Ward said:

"President Roosevelt is endeavoring to accomplish by the peaceable means of the ballot box and courts what the people might attempt to accomplish in a few years more by a revolution, the overthrow of powerful lawbreaking combinations of capital. President Roosevelt has undertaken a tremendous task, but he is the man to do it. I believe the people will give him an extension of time."

Mr. Ward is at the head of a manufacturing concern with $1,000,000 capital, and he says his business has suffered through the rebate system practised by some of his unscrupulous competitors.

It is said that the national delegates from Westchester county will probably be instructed for President Roosevelt. They were the first delegates in the State of New York instructed for him when he was nominated in 1904.

Killed by Insane Wife's Act.

Paterson, June 30.—Max Mausner, who was burned by a solution of potash thrown in his face by his wife while he lay in bed several days ago, died late Tuesday night in the General Hospital. Hausner had been blinded by the potash and his face and arms were covered with burns. The woman was not tin her right mind when she threw the deadly stuff at her husband, and she has since been removed to the Morris Plains Asylum.

CROSS AND NERVOUS.

Plainfield Sufferers from Kidney Troubles Often Become Very Irritable.

Cross, irritable people—the sort who fuss and mope and worry over trifles—are not always to blame for the annoyance they give to others. Frequently these traits are but the effects of kidney poisons on brain and nerves. Uric acid that escapes the kidneys irritates nerve centers and vital organs—causes backache, rheumatic and neuralgic pains—keeps you languid, all tired out—leads to Bright's disease and diabetes. Stop the trouble in the beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills. 'Twill cure the kidneys and remove the cause of all these ills. Recommended by friends and neighbors in Plainfield.

Mrs. K. C. Philpott, of 126 Plainfield avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Two years ago I suffered with rheumatism and also a severe excess of uric acid in the blood, but at any rate, the medicines I was taking did not stop the pains. I therefore resorted to the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say, in gratitude, that they gave me complete relief from my rheumatism and backache. I had no occasion to use any medicine for my kidneys since that time, until July, 1905, when I had not been feeling just right, and had been suffering sharp twinges of pain in my back. My daughter got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, and on using them they relieved me as before. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people suffering from backache and rheumatism, and I shall continue to do so."

:-NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE-:

WHAT HERPICIDE DOES.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys the tiny vegetable growth in the scalp that causes dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and baldness. Once this microbic enemy of the hair is destroyed, and kept out of the scalp, the hair is bound to grow as nature intended, except in cases of chronic baldness.

WHAT SUNLIGHT DOES.

Sunlight is nature's great germ destroyer and prophylactic. The effect of sunlight upon the scalp proves highly beneficial, if a complete plan of scalp cianliness is carried out. This cannot be done without the use of Herpicide, which prevents reinfection and keeps the scalp pure and wholesome.

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of Newbro's Herpicide than from all other hair remedies combined.

HOT WEATHER TROUBLES.

The perspiration that exudes in increased quantities during the summer months carries out poisonous and refuse matter that would otherwise clog up the pores of the scalp.

Incomplete elimination of this waste produces a hot and feverish condition of the sweat glands known as Prickly Heat for which Herpicide gives immediate relief. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Col. Thomp Burton, Member of the Board of Managers of the Ohio Penitentiary, writes as follows of Newbro's Herpicide:

"As to Herpicide I find it an excellent hair dressing as well as being the first and only absolute dandruff cure I have found. Upon my advice a number of my friends are using Herpicide, and the unanimous verdict is, that Herpicide is, in all respects, everything that its manufacturers claim for it."

How to Live Long

The Opinion of an Eminent Physician Who Is Talking to the Well.

The Piso Book, Sent Free, to Any Address, Tells the Consumptive How to Get Well and How to Stay Well.

Dr. G. F. Butler in an address to his brother Physicians of the Medical Society told them "how to live long."

"It has been said that it is better to be born lucky than rich, but to be born tough is better than either. When you have passed 50 don't retire from business but be satisfied to do a little less and do it better.

"Water is the greatest and best eliminant we have. Drink pure water.

"By the strict law of nature man should die as unconscious of his death as of his birth.

"Eat less. Play more. Indulge in less fret and fume and more fun. Get out of doors.

"Those of you that feel that the E string of your system is weak and is screwed up too tight must bring the rest of the instrument down to a lower key or get out of the orchestra for a while."

Sun, pure air, nourishing food, exercise and cheerfulness, with the use of a good, proven remedy like Piso's to heal and strengthen the lungs, have saved the life of many a consumptive.

The Piso Book—"How a Consumptive Ought to Live" will be sent free to any address.

GOV. STOKES WANTS CLEANER BEACHES.

Asks State Officials to Determine If Garbage Deposits Can Be Stopped.

Trenton, June 30.—Gov. Stokes took steps yesterday to have stopped the pollution of the New Jersey beaches with garbage from New York scows by calling the attention of Attorney-General McCarter and Dr. Henry Mitchell, of the State Board of Health, to the matter. The Governor's letters are as follows:

"Robert H. McCarter, Attorney-General.

"My dear sir:

"My attention has been called to the pollution of the waters along our sea-coast, especially at our seaside resorts in the upper part of the State, due to the deposit of sewage in New York Bay and vicinity. It is important that steps be taken to remedy the nuisance. I have written the State Board of Health requesting its aid in this matter. I wish your department would take such immediate steps as will prove most effective in this situation."

"Dr. Henry Mitchell, State Board of Health.

"My dear sir:

"My attention has been called to the pollution of the waters along our seacoast, especially at our seaside resorts in the upper part of the State, due to the deposit of sewage in New York Bay and vicinity. It is highly important that this matter be thoroughly investigated, a report made thereon and steps be taken to remedy the nuisance."

United States Senator Dryden has taken up the subject with the War Department, the Judge Advocate General of the Army and Chief of Engineers, who immediately took under advisement the subject of Federal authority in the matter.

The impression at the War Department is that the matter was for State action and for State officials to handle. It was said they have the power to procure an injunction against New York city and have the nuisance stopped by the courts.

INTER-STATE COMMISSION PLANS FOR THREE BRIDGES.

One Between New York and New Jersey and Others at Bergen Point and Elizabethport.

Hoboken, June 30.—Developments at the meeting of the New York and New Jersey Inter State Bridge Commission Thursday suggests very forcibly that the commercial interests of New York and New Jersey have interested themselves in the labors of the commission, and it begins to appear that when the commission gets through with its work, recommendations will be made for at least three spans; one connecting New York and New Jersey, and two connecting with New Jersey, at Bergen Point and at Elizabethport.

The Jersey Central advised the commission that it could probably make use of the Hudson River span if erected in a suitable location. Several sites on the New York side have been suggested to the commission, 129th street, 72d street, 59th street, 42d street, 23d street, Desbrosses, Chambers and Cortlandt street. Guttenberg seems to be a favored location on the Jersey side.

Auto Law Constitutional.

Justice Reed rendered an opinion in the Supreme Court at Trenton Wednesday declaring constitutional the old automobile law, which will be superseded July 1 by the new Frelinghuysen act. The suit was was brought up to the Supreme Court by Harry Unwen, of New York, who was arrested in Jersey City and convicted of violating the auto law by not having a license.

ARGUE ASSEMBLY DISTRICTING ACT

COURT OF ERRORS HEARS ARGUMENTS OF REDISTRICTING LAW CASE.

Argument to determine the constitutionality of the act of the last Legislature providing for the election of Assemblymen by districts instead of by counties was heard Wednesday by the Court of Errors and Appeals at Trenton, a test being made of the proceedings instituted by Harry F. Smith, of Trenton, against C. Harry Baker, county clerk of Mercer.

Mr. Baker, by a prearranged plan, refused to furnish copies of the new law as the act requires. Mr. Smith was represented by Attorney General Robert H. McCarter and Assistant Attorney General Edward D. Duffield, while Edwin Robert Walker, of this city, and Edward Q. Keasbey, of Newark, represented County Clerk Baker.

Mr. Duffield opened the case by declaring that the opinion rendered a few years ago by the late Chief Justice Depue, of the Supreme Court, to the effect that such legislation was unconstitutional had evidently been influenced by the circumstances under which the case had been presented to the Court's attention, the districting act at that time being regarded as partisan politics, passed for the purpose of giving the Democrats continued ascendency through gerrymander tactics. He claimed that both the district and the county practices of electing Assemblymen had evils, but instead that the district elections gave the people the best results.

He argued that the Constitution gave the Legislature the right to designate how its members should be elected.

Mr. Walker followed Mr. Duffield and argued that such legislation violated the spirit and the letter of the Constitution, in addition to being bad for the voters in general. He said the election of Congressmen by districts could not be taken as a precedent for the election of legislators for the State, the Federal Constitution being quite different from the Constitution of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Walker was followed by Mr. Keasbey, who argued much along the same lines. Attorney General McCarter made the final argument for the plaintiff, answering all of the contentions made by Messrs. Walker and Keasbey and re-enforcing the views of Mr. Duffield. The Court then took the case under advisement.

It is expected that an early decision will be rendered, inasmuch as the coming Fall elections of Assemblymen will be affected if the constitutionality of the act is sustained, as is generally believed will be the case.

RESUME INSURANCE PROBE.

Senate Committee to Hold Series of Sittings Beginning July 9.

Trenton, June 30.—The special committee of the Senate appointed to investigate life insurance will begin to hold a series of meetings in the Senate chamber during the week beginning July 9. The sessions will be continued from day to day.

The committee will call upon David P. Fackler, the actuary employed by the State; Commissioner David O. Watkins and the presidents of the several New Jersey insurance companies to give testimony before the committee.

One of the reasons why the committee has not held a meeting before is that it had by correspondence invited the people of the State to give their views and such information concerning the work of the committee, as they felt inclined to do. The date for receiving this information was set for July 1. As the national holiday comes in that week, it was decided to begin holding the meetings on July 9.

Fagan-Record Slate Out.

The Fagan-Record faction of the Republican party has decided to announce the city and county slate for next fall, so as to give the candidates ample time to make active campaigns. City Controller Thomas McEwan is slated for County Surrogate, James W. McCarthy, now president of the Board of Aldermen, has been chosen as the nominee for Representative in the 9th Congress District and Freeholder Thomas McManus and Appeals Commissioner William Harrison for Street and Water commissioners.

Dragged to Death by Cow.

Hackensack, June 30.—Patrick Cassidy, seventy years old, of this place, met instant death Wednesday morning while attempting to lead a cow out of the Irvine pasture on the heights. The cow pulled so strongly on the rope that the old man fell. He displayed rare pluck in hanging to the rope, but the cow bounded along at a fast rate. Cassidy's head struck a big stone and his skull was fractured.

Fall to Death.

Summit, June 30.—Wm. Shader, of Denville, was killed by falling down an elevator shaft at the icehouses of the Mountain Ice Company at Effling Lake yesterday. His head struck the rail of a track below and his skull was crushed, death being instantaneous.

Plainfield, N. J., June 30, 1906.

MAYOR J. F. BUCKLE.

The decision of Mayor James F. Buckle to retire at the end of his present term naturally caused some surprise among the politicians for it had been generally accepted that he would follow the custom in vogue here of being renominated. As a whole, his administration has been a creditable one and the belief was common that the party would again honor him. His determination to step down at the end of his first term puts an end to any such plans. On the whole, we repeat, the mayor has given creditable service to the city. In one or two instances we have found occasion to condemn some of his official actions, but whatever mistakes he has made came more from hasty judgment or probably ill-advice. There are many qualities in his official life to admire. He is the personification of frankness, honesty and generosity. His experience in the Common Council trained him well for the mayoralty and he has kept thoroughly in touch with everything that has been going on in the various departments, and his advice has been always for what he considered best for the whole people.

FISK FOR MAYOR.

Plainfield would be fortunate indeed should Charles Joel Fisk become its chief executive. There is no other single man in the community who could be depended upon to devote so much self-sacrificing and conscientious effort in the discharge of the duties of the office. He knows probably better than any other citizen the practical workings of the various departments and his continuous service in an official capacity would make him most invaluable. As a former mayor, as a councilman, as a member of the Board of Health and as a part of many of the commissions, he has had a rare schooling. Combinded with his recognized merit as a financier and with his ability to grasp a problem in a broad-minded, liberal and hearty manner, he would make an ideal mayor for progressive Plainfield.

Seventeen pieces of bone have been extracted through his nostrils in the other operations. He has stood all the cutting without taking anesthetics.

NEWARK IS READY FOR SAENGERFEST.

Business Houses and Private Residences Decorated with American and German Flags.

Newark is decorated from end to end—business houses in the main thoroughfares and private houses in side streets and even in strictly residential sections—in honor of the national saengerfest of the Northeastern Saengerbund, which will be formally begun tonight by a reception to the thousands of members of visiting societies. The visitors began to arrive in Newark last night.

In all decorative work the American and German flags are the chief features. Thousands of them of all sizes are displayed. Business men of all classes have made extraordinary provisions for catering to the hundred thousand strangers who are expected to be in the city from today to next Thursday.

All committees and sub-committees of those in charge of the various details of the big affair held meetings Thursday and last night, and everything was reported to be in readiness. Rehearsals by various singing societies were also held on both nights.

About 8 o'clock tonight a torchlight procession will be formed at the Market street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad to march to Olympic park. The participants will be members of the United Singing Societies of Newark, 1,500 or more members of the New York and Brooklyn singing societies, a large delegation from Jersey City, Hoboken and other places in Hudson county, possibly five hundred or more from Philadelphia and large contingents from Baltimore and Washington if they arrive in time.

Upon arriving at the park the singers will be welcomed on behalf of the city by Mayor Doremus and on behalf of the united singers of Newark by August Goertz, president of the organization. These exercises will be followed by a monster kommers, or summer night's festival.

Sunday afternoon the Saengerfest proper will be begun with a concert of 10,000 male voices in Olympic Park.

$9 to Niagara Falls and Return.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad will sell tickets July 3, limited for return to July 5 inclusive. Tickets good going and returning on all trains except the Black Diamond Express, within the prescribed limit. See Frank Rowley, Lehigh Valley Ticket Agent, 218 West Front street, for further particulars. 6 26 6

LITERARY NOTES.

Scribner's Magazine for July, in the series on The Railways of the Future, describes a great Canadian Railway project. The Grand Trunk Pacific is an all-Canadian line, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, and far north of existing railways. It will penetrate new territory in Athabasca and Northern British Columbia. Experts say that it will open up the greatest wheat-growing region in North America. Hugh D. Lumsden, chief engineer of the Government section, describes the work so far done on this part of the road, and outlines the engineering problems of the remainder. Cy Warman gives a graphic account of the varied regions through which the road will pass, and the tremendous resources which it will make available. The whole project is as romantic and far-reaching as any railroad scheme since the United States backed the Union Pacific. Another article of great practical importance is Frederic C. Howe's account of the workings of municipal ownership in "Glasgow." Much has been written about this city, but never before has such a complete popular exposition by an expert been made. The marvels of management which the people of Glasgow have achieved—a price for gas that makes our 80 cents seem extravagant, and street-car fares far below the standard of Tom Johnson—are expounded by Mr. Howe, a well-known lawyer of Cleveland, whose book on "The City" has become an authority.

The July McClure's is a good, hearty and satisfying literary meal—some good articles on new things the world is doing, some important ones on vital topics of the day, and a good share of brisk and entertaining stories; the whole well served with attractive illustrations, many in colors. Ray Stannard Baker's "New Music for An Old World," describing Dr. Thaddeus Cahill's marvelous instrument for producing music by electricity, the dynamophone, is full of suggestion and interest for both the musically and scientifically inclined. We have had many superficial descriptions of the San Francisco earthquake, but Henry Anderson Lafler's record of experiences and the impressions in "My Sixty Sleepless Hours" written on the spot, and at the time of the fire, touches the real heart of the event. The beginnings of the corrupt methods that resulted in the recent insurance scandals are interestingly shown by Burton J. Hendrick in the third instalment of the "Story of Life-Insurance" in which he tells the career of Henry Baldwin Hyde, the founder of the Equitable. The ninth instalment of Carl Schurz's "Reminiscences of a Long Life" contains some interesting impressions of Mazzini, the Italian patriot, and Kossuth, the Hungarian. Kipling's sturdy and imaginative stories of Old England continue with the life of Parnesius, the Roman legionary, telling how he was given commond of the forces on the Great Wall and fought successfully "The Winged Hats" (the Danes). Non-motorists and perhaps experts as well will have their first motoring sensations brought back to them vividly and amusingly by Julian Street's "My Enemy—the Motor." James Hopper has a story of the Philippines, "Caybigan," which is full of color and power.

Shakespeare began the season with Julia Marlowe and Mr. Sothern, and with Shakespeare the season ends at the Academy. These two artists, devoted to the highest ideals of the drama, are in a materialistic age like a breath of ozone in a marshy country. They give courage to the weak-kneed brethren who are ever praying for a speedy release from our depressing drama. Mrs. Fiske made a timely revival of "Becky Sharp," one of her best creations out to so many. Mr. Fiske must be credited with a splendid production of Maeterlinck's poetic drama, "Monna Vanna." And lastly that most energetic young actor, Arnold Daly, has made Bernard Shaw a household word. No, it was not such a terrifyingly evil season after all. Richard Mansfield was, as ever, a serious factor. The American dramatist hardly did himself justice, and his British cousin followed close suit. The sensation of the season was Shaw's "Mrs. Warren's Profession," incontinently snuffed out by a Calvinistic revenant; and there is no denying the cold fact that Barrie and Shaw carried off the honors from William Shakespeare. There is no moral attached to this statement. But best and sweetest remembrance of a variegated year is the loving benevolence of the men and women of the stage during the gripping need of San Francisco. Gentlemen! Charge your glasses! To the actors and actresses of America!—James Huneker in the July Metropolitan Magazine.

The lost secret of making Damascus steel is not the only mystery that ancient life has taken to itself. In 1796 a young Frenchman named St. Memin created a furore in New York when it had a population of $35,000 by turning out mezzotint portraits of photographic exactness and yet of artistic charm at the very low price of less than $3 a print. He called his machine the physiognotrace, and in the course of fourteen years finished some eight hundred portraits, many of them immortalizing the beautiful society women of a time when there were no photographers. Theodosia Burr, Miss Delage, Mrs. DeWitt Clinton, Mrs. Brockholst Livingston and Mrs. John Quincy Adams were among his sitters, and Appleton's Magazine for July reproduces their portraits in an interesting article concerning St. Memin's work. Other portraits reproduced in the same article are those of Miss Conyers, of Richmond, who perished in the theatre fire in 1808, and of Mme. Delacroix, who introduced ice cream to New York.

History is making faster in Russia than anywhere else in the world—and it is vital, deep-reaching history, too. Vance Thompson, in the July Everybody's, brings before you with wonderful art the scene and incidents of that great national drama. Mr. Thompson was in St. Petersburg for Everybody's when the Tsar ceded to the Duma its memorable privileges; he was an eye-witness of the death of autocracy; he describes each stage of the "Little Father's" visit to his capital. His story of a pageant and a revolution is distinctly the article of the month. Charles Edward Russell, who has also been at the other side of the world in the interests if Everybody's readers, contributes this month a highly important instalment of "Soldiers of the Common Good," dealing with the vigorous commercial policy of Japan. If you do not realize the extent to which governmental trusts tre springing up in that surprising country, don't neglect to read Mr. Russel's article. If you have shared the common fallacy that Japan is an imitative nation, learn of her great constructive feats in commerce and statecraft. There are important matters nearer home, one of which is the great bucket-shop evil, now under the searching fire of Merrill A. Teague.

A midsummer number of unusual excellence is offered in Good Housekeeping for July. It opens with a paper by Edmund Russell, orientalist, upon Sacred Sevres, wherein the absurdities of this beautiful ware are mercilessly scored. Dr. John D. Quackenbos, in The Psychology of Happy Marriage, drives straight and fearlessly at the heart of a great problem. "My Hardest Day's Work" is the subject of an entertaining symposium, whose contributors include Julia Ward Howe, Edward Everett Hale, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Anna Katharine Green, Judge Henry A. Shute and others. There is an important illustrated article on Certified Milk and Other Forms, by Joseph H. Adams, and an illustrated description of Shaker Industries by "Sister Marcia." A practical symposium deals with the timely problem, To Keep Cool. There are many other valuable articles and departments, some of them quite unusual. Fifteen cents a copy, one dollar a year. The Phelps Publishing Co., Springfield, Mass., New York, Chicago.

The July number of The Popular Science Monthly contains the following articles: "The Relations of Embryology to Medical Progress," by Professor Charles Sedgwick Minot; "The Largest American Collection of Meteorites," by L. P. Gratacap; "The Plane of Ether," by President David Starr Jordan; "Are the Elements transmutable, the Atoms divisible and Forms of Matter but Modes of Motion?" by Professor S. Lawrence Bigelow; "Pure Food Legislation," by Robert McD. Allen; "Wooden Flowers," by Dr. Orville Paul Phillips; "The Geological Prelude to the San Francisco Earthquake," by Myron Leslie Fuller; "The Typhoid Fever Epidemic at Palo Alto," by Edith V. Matzke; "The American Association for the Advancement of Science;" "The Boston Meeting of the American Medical Association;" "The New Harvard Medical School;" "Mr. Adams on the American College;" "The Causes of Death."

Patriotism breathes from both cover and contents of the July number of The American Boy. The front cover page is a reproduction of Willard's famous picture, "The Spirit of 1776." Further to stir the boys to love of country is another installment of "In Defense of His Flag," by Stratemeyer; "Reub," a story by Frank H. Sweet; "Where 'Yankee Doodle' was Written," by J. E. Boss; "Drums and Drummers," by J. C. Julius Langbein; "Fourth of July Among the Kiowas," by Ida A. Roff; and "How Washington Celebrated a Fourth of July," by Fred Myron Colby. "Shaggcoat," a serial about a beaver, ends with this number. Nathaniel Hawthorne is number nine of the "Boyhood of Great Americans series. Boys who love the life of the camp will find chapter three of "Four Boys in Camp," by J. L. Harbour, of exceeding interest. Another installment of "The Young Book Agent," by Horatio Alger, Jr., continues this story of a boy's road to success.

The cover of the July Burr McIntosh Monthly, which is now on all news stands, is a fine portrait of Fremstad, a grand opera singer in the character of Sieglinde, and is printed in attractive colors. One of the colors pastels represents two bare-feet urchins bashfully leaning against the post of a veranda with the inquiry "Who said lemanade?" Among the famous people portrayed this month are the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, Rubenstein, a pianist; Madam Sembrich, of Grand Opera fame; E. H. Harriman, the late Carl Schurz, the late Henrik Ibsen, Brig. Gen. Funston and Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese Ambassador to the United States. The exquisite landscape reproductions are nearly all of summer scenes, which will delight those who appreciate the beauties of pastoral life.

MRS. APPLEGATE WELL AGAIN!
"I have had a bruised leg and foot for several years, caused by the brass eyelets of my shoe, which became very sore and painful especially at night. It itched, burned and ached me till it nearly set me crazy. I used everything I found and was suggested to ease it and nothing gave me any relief till I found and applied Anzenza Cream, which I think is a wonderful remedy for all sores and inflammation of the skin. The hard knots on my legs were as painful as bee stings, with discolored and purple spots. A running sore on my instep size of a half-dollar; the top of my foot a seething sore clean around to my heel. The bone was sore for a whole year and very painful. I used five and one-half jars of Anzenza Cream and healed the sore all up. The foot remained tender and I continued to use to strengthen and toughen the skin until now it is entirely well." (Signed) Mrs. Hannah Applegate, Evergreen Ave., Avon, N. J., Sept. 3rd, 1905. 50 cents. Ask the druggist or by mail. Anzenza Specialties Co., Jersey City, N. J.

KILLS TWO GIRLS AT THEIR REQUEST

REMARKABLE TRAGEDY REPORTED FROM GERMANY.

TRIPLE CRIME WAS PLANNED

Music Teacher Tells How He and His Pupils, Melancholy Over Study of Wagner, Had Agreed to Die.

Berlin.—Carl Brunke, a young bank clerk, has just been sentenced to eight years' penal servitude here for one of the most extraordinary deeds in the annals of crime. Without hesitation he confessed to the police that he had murdered at their own request two sisters, Martha and Alma Haars, 22 and 21 years old respectively.

The self-confessed slayer had for some time been acting in the capacity of teacher of music to the young women, and expert alienists say that all three had been reduced to a state of extreme melancholy from excessive study of Wagner.

There is no doubt that the two girls did ask Brunke to kill them. Indeed, Martha, the elder one, gave him the money with which to buy the revolver with which the double murder was done.

When Brunke was arrested he said he was ready to confess and with the utmost calmness said:

"When I came back the two girls were awaiting me in my room, but our courage then began to fail us. Martha gave me $15 to buy three bottles of champagne, and after bracing up our courage with the wine we discussed all the details of our approaching deaths.

"First I fired a test shot and we all agreed that the revolver would surely do its work unfailingly. Both girls had put on white waists and black skirts so as to make a presentable appearance after death.

"By agreement I shot the younger sister first. The instant I fired she fell to the floor dead. We bent down over her body and Martha asked her if she was still alive, but received no answer.

"I DELIBERATELY TOOK AIM AND FIRED TWO SHOTS."

"Martha then stood up and pointed out to me carefully the spot on her breast at which she wished me to fire. I took deliberate aim according to her directions and fired two shots, both of which hit the mark and passed entirely through her body. She must have died instantly.

"I had agreed to turn the weapon on myself as soon as I had killed the two girls, but weakened at the sight of their lifeless bodies lying on the floor in front of me. Instead of shooting myself I decided to surrender to the police and make a confession."

Brunke turned over to the police letters apparently written by the two girls, in which they said that it was at their own request that he slew them.

The alienists who examined the prisoner decided that although he was suffering from a form of insanity, it was not sufficiently marked to render him immune to punishment. The eight-year sentence was imposed under a section of the criminal code which provides a minimum of three years' penal servitude from crimes of such nature. The courts cannot recall any case of this kind.

Child Drowns Baby Sister.

London.—"I put Dolly in the water. Dolly dead. Buy another Dolly." This statement was made by the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. Branch, of Nyanza street, Plumstead, to her mother. It was only too true; she had drowned her baby sister. The victim was the six-weeks-old child of Mrs. Branch, who told the Woolwich coroner that on Friday afternoon she left her infant in the kitchen with the older child. The latter came to her and remarked: "Sorry, mamma." As the little girl was in the habit of making this remark when she had done anything wrong, the mother did not pay any particular heed, but when she added that Dolly was dead the mother went to the kitchen and found the infant drowned in a tub. The jury returned a verdict of death by misadventure.

The Secretary—I find that your property in Swampville cost you four dollars a foot, sir. What price are you willing to sell it for?

The Rich Victim—Oh, I'll let it go for two dollars a gallon.—Life.

FILIPINO RAILROAD MEN.

Natives in Manila Take Readily to the Work of Operating Electric Lines.

The experiment made in depending solely on native Filipinos to man the cars of the Manila Electric railway has proved eminently successful. Although this kind of help was used exclusively in building the lines, which were opened to traffic last April, it was feared by some that a certain well-known tendency toward unreliability in the native character would manifest itself in the new work, more exacting than any natives had heretofore been called upon to perform in numbers since the American occupation.

"It is generally known," said P. E. Fansler, assistant to the president of the New York company, by which the system was built and operated, "that the natives are wonderfully quick to learn up to a certain point, where a childish unreliability has blocked further progress in the attainment of a thoroughly civilized status. That it is rather a matter of proper and well directed tuition seems to be the lesson in the present case. As was generally anticipated, the operating manager in Manila, Mr. Belden, met with instantaneous success in instructing the native mind in the technic of street car operation, but contrary to general anticipation the usual bete noir—instability—seems to have been quite thoroughly overcome.

"It is felt now that the native has lived up to the requirements of the job fully as well as the white man could have done under any conditions and probably better, taking the climate into consideration," said he. "It must be remembered that to operate a modern electric car in the crowded streets of an oriental city, where the traffic and pedestrians are absolutely at variance and unaccustomed to so foreign an element, calls for the full measure of steadiness and resourcefulness to avoid accident. It is a fact that under these trying conditions the Manila Electric railway is being operated with what may justifiably be considered a minimum of accident and that through the demonstration by the Filipino motorman of his full possession of those very qualities that the more cursory examiners have declared to be wanting. Fully to appreciate the peculiar demand for steadiness one must have had experience in trying to progress through the streets of a far eastern metropolis. Pedestrians use the roadway very often in common with vehicles and may generally be persuaded to make way only when their lives are actually in danger. A narrow escape from death is uniformly treated as a good joke, not only by the observers, but by the principal as well. Under the circumstances the almost complete freedom from serious accident in the operation of the line is decidedly noteworthy. The conductors, too, uniformly show the ability to live up to the requirements of their work. They perform their duties expeditiously and with tact and are, moreover, quite honest.

"These facts are significant of the possibilities in the native Filipino character when given just opportunity to display itself and will prove especially interesting to Americans watching the industrial development of the islands."

MORO BANDS' FANATICISM.

No Course But to Hunt Down and Kill Them, Says Gov. Scott, of Sulu.

Maj. H. L. Scott, governor of the Sulu archipelago, about to return to his post, made a parting call on the president. As he left the White House, says a Washington report, he said that he thought Gen. Wood's attack on the Moros at Mount Dajo would improve conditions in Sulu.

"I hope," he said, "that our soldiers will not again be campelled to give battle to the Moro bands. The chief of the band that was exterminated the other day is perfectly friendly to this country. He tried hard to keep the band from continuing their warfare against our government in the islands, but was unable to do so. They were determined on disobeying all law, on killing and acting to suit themselves, and they did not propose to surrender.

"They proposed death to surrender. See this hand?" and Maj. Scott held out his right hand, which showed two fingers missing. "Well, I tried 50 times to get the leader of the band that gave me these wounds to surrender. While I lay in the hospital three months I sent him word often, asking him to surrender and assuring him fair treatment. His name was Panglim Hassam. He disregarded every message we sent and returned defiant and insulting messages. Nothing remained but to hunt him and his band down and engage them in battle. He was finally killed. That is the sort of character we must deal with among these fanatical people. Not a soldier of this country wants to shed blood, and every soldier regrets the necessity for hostile action."

Negro Advancement in Hayti.

Yet in Hayti the negro has worn the epaulets for one century and one year, and there he proves that the negro as a race, when left alone, is incapable of self-advancement. No one can expect him to develop resources. Time is an unmarketable article. A day is not worth a banana. In his precious logwood forests, rather than cut only the timber that is ready, he strips it all, and burns over the hills afterward. To restore such useless waste of vast treasure nature must have 30 or 40 years. A provident man grows heartsick at the sight. Again, wherever a new industry rears its head, at once the negro's bludgeon falls.—World's Work.

ORDERS ARE OUT FOR SEA GIRT CAMP.

Orders were issued yesterday by Brigadier General Gillmore through Colonel Frederick Gilkyson, assistant adjutant general, for the details of the camp of the Second brigade at Sea Girt July 7 to 21.

They state that Major Charles W. Shelvers, Third regiment, is detailed as field officer of the day from the arrival of the Third regiment in camp until relieved July 8.

Major Horace M. Reading, Second regiment, is detailed as field officer of the day from the hour of the arrival of the Second regiment in camp until relieved July 15.

These officers will report for instructions to the brigade commander on the arrival of their regiments in camp.

The Second regiment will be in camp from July 14 to 21, inclusive.

The programme of military duty and list of service calls for each day will be ordered from brigade headquarters. All service calls will first be sounded by the bugler at brigade headquarters, and then repeated by the musician of the infantry guard from a position near the guard tent.

The orders further state that during the encampment the infantry guard to be mounted daily will be of the following strength: One first lieutenant, commandant of the guard; two second lieutenants, supernumerary officers of the guard; two sergeants, four corporals, two musicians, sixty privates.

The guard to serve July 7 to 14 will be detailed previous to the departure of the organization for camp, and will be employed to preserve order on the trains and to prevent the enlisted men from riding on the platforms of the cars.

The senior officer on each train will be responsible for the orderly conduct of all persons on his train.

First Lieutenant Richard F. Cross, Company C. Second regiment, is detailed as instructor of guard duty for the entire camp. Each colonel will detail an officer, satisfactory to lieutenant Cross, and who is junior to that officer, as his assistant.

There will be a preliminary guard mount held each morning on the ground east of the camp, where the important features of guard mounting will be rehearsed under the supervision of the instructor of guard duty.

WILL WELCOME AUTOISTS.

Mayor Hopes the Big Touring Cars Will Use Streets.

South Amboy, June 30.—While other Jersey towns are devising ways and means to keep big autos from dashing through their streets at top speed, South Amboy's Mayor, Dr. Ambrose Treganowan, favors inducing the machines to go through the main streets, believing that they will help business along.

Until now South Amboy has been off the automobile highways. But the opening of the Amboy bridge places the town on a direct route to the seashore. If the machines go straight through they will pass along the outskirts of the borough, on Stevens avenue, and some people want the machines directed that way. But Stevens avenue is poorly paved and the Mayor argues that if the machines take the longer and better paved route through the heart of the town they will save time.

A few days ago local autoists put up a sign directing the machines along Stevens avenue. The Mayor had the sign torn down. Public opinion seems to be divided as to whether the machines going through the main streets will benefit the place.

Auto Smashes Crossing Gates.

Rahway, June 30.—Early Wednesday evening a touring car owned and driven by H. L. Lamphear, of 171 Main street, came down Irving street at a rapid speed. When a few feet from the railroads crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad the gates were shut down for a passing express train. Mr. Lamphear was unable to bring his machine to a stop in so short a distance and the heavy car crashed in and wrecked the gate and broke the steering wheel in the hands of Mr. Lamphear. The machine was stopped and a serious accident averted.

Lands Forty-one Pound Bass.

Asbury Park, Jnue 30.—James B. Gentle, of New York, a member of the Asbury Park Fishing Club, received congratulations of his fellow club members Wednesday night. While fishing in the sea at 8th avenue Wednesday afternoon Gentle had a "strike," and after an hour's hard work and without assistance, landed the prize catch of the year, a striped bass which weighed 41½ pounds and measured 4¼ feet in length. The prize fish last season weighed only a quarter of a pound more.

No Appointment Before July 1.

Elizabeth, June 30.—Liquor dealers generally have been looking for the appointment of the Board of Excise commissioners by Judge Atwater before July 1 in the belief which many others have shown that the law called for their appointment before that date. Yesterday Judge Atwater said that he did not interpret the law in that way. "The present board," he said, "holds over until July 20. I will certainly not appoint the new board this week and probably not for two weeks."

—M. W. King, of Liberty Corner, has disposed of his property, and will move to Plainfield next week.

Baseball and General Sports

By Geo. E. Firstbrook.

DIAMOND DUST.

From the Tri-State League comes news that Pat Dougherty has come to terms with the Cincinnati Club. It may be necessary for Griffith to secure American League waivers on him once more, as more than thirty days have elapsed since the first releases were asked for. Garry Hermann has had an agent after Pat and he has raised his bids, it is said, until Long Pat at last nibbled at his bait. Hermann will have to pay Dougherty's fine to the National Commission before the player can go on the field. Dougherty is leading the Tri-State League in hitting.

Cy Seymour, who led the National League in 1905 with the fine average of .377, has slumped very badly, and is now twenty-second in the list of league batters with .281.

Baseball went hand-in-hand with the anti-gambling crusade in Boston Tuesday, when Brooklyn beat Boston by a score of 4 to 1 and the police made a raid on the right field bleachers to stop betting on the game. Two arrests were made by the blue coats and then the patrolmen had the fight of their lives to get their prisoners out of the grounds. Persons posing as baseball fans, but secretly in sympathy with the tinhorn gamblers, tried to free the captives. They were beaten back by the policemen, and in the confusion the game was interrupted by an outpouring of bleacherites to the field. Order was restored when the "sports" masquerading as sportsmen had been dragged outside the inclosure.

Baseball enthusiasts may be interested in the coming golf match between Senator Charles A. Reed, of the borough, also golf expert of the Park Club, and George L. Record, of Jersey City, if it takes place. It seems if Mr. Record is now challenging political ontaginists to debates he is issuing challenges to his rivals in the golf world. Before we go any further it might be said that Mr. Record is an expert golfist, so is Senator Reed.

While going to the Plainfield theatre on the evening of the Colby rally Mr. Record and Mr. Reed chanced to meet on the corner. "Hello Senator," exclaimed Mr. Record, and both shook hands cordially. "Doing any golf stick business now?" inquired Mr. Reed. "You just bet I am," answered the candidate for United States Senator, "I would just like to have a whack at you." "Well, Record," returned Mr. Reed, "can't we arrange a match for some day? Just give me an hour's notice over the telephone and I'll be ready for you." "I'll take that proposition up," replied Record. "I'll come out here to Plainfield and give you such a trimming that you will not feel like facing your friends on the street."

It fitting climax to the argument on the links would be a debate between the two politicians for the benefit of Somerset county voters. "Bob" Fitz could also take a part in the ceremonies to help draw the crowd.

For the first time he started in the Sunday baseball business Manager Burke, of the Elizabeth Stars, will have real opposition tomorrow. Adam Neubeck has made good his ante-season predictions and has succeeded in getting together a strong aggregation, the first game to be played tomorrow with the Philadelphia Giants. Neubeck has named his team the Invaders, most fitting and appropriate under the circumstances. It is said that the clash between Burke and Neubeck is apt to create such a feeling which is apt to result in the stopping of ball games in Elizabeth on Sundays.

Manager Daab received applications for jobs this week from the Cosgrave brothers—both Dick and "Wally." Dick boosted the proposition by informing Mr. Daab it would be quite a novelty to have the two brothers on the team.

Local fans should remember that there will be but one game played here on the Fourth of July. That contest will take place in the morning between the Trentons. Ray Egner will probably pitch for the Capitol city team and Smith for Plainfield. The Plainfields will play in Trenton in the afternoon. The morning game will start at 10:30 o'clock sharp.

The first game of the series for the amateur championship of Union county, will be played this afternoon on the Clinton avenue grounds between the Clinton Avenues and the All-Americans (colored). The game will be called at the usual hour. The line-up: Clinton Avenues—A. Scott, lf; O'Loughlin, c; J. Martin, ss; Giles, 2b; Nelson, rf; Emery, 3b; Barnes, 1b; Burgley, cf; J. Scott, p. All-Americans—Warwick, ss; Kline, 2b; Blanchard, 1b; Larner, c; Brokaw, p; Carter, lf; Miller, 3b; Bollard, rf; Mitchell, cf.

The Loraine Baseball Club, of New York, members of the Inter-City Baseball Association, has the morning of July 4 open and would like to book in and around New York, or in New Jersey. The club plays Wortendyke in the afternoon. The club also has a few Saturday dates open in July. Will play for a reasonable guarantee. Address A. R. Hilsinger, 63 Morningside avenue, New York City.

The Clinton Avenues will play the East Millstone team at the latter place on July 4.

Nassau Professional Now Holder of Eastern, Western and New York Championships.

Alex Smith, the Nassau County Club professional, won the open championship of the United States Golf Association yesterday over the links of the Onwentsia Golf Club, near Chicago. He went round today in 73, 75-148, which, added to his first day's play of 147, gave him a total of 295 for the 72 holes. This lower the record for the tournament by four strokes. He led his nearest competitor, Willie Smith, the open champion of Mexico, by seven strokes, while Willie Anderson, the title holder last year, had to be content with fifth place.

Alex Smith has now won the triple crown of the galfing world. LIGHTNING STRIKES STEEPLE OF PARK AVE. BAPT. CHURCH.

Hits a Corner That Has Suffered Similarly on Three Previous Occasions.

During the heavy thunder storm that passed over the city shortly after 12 o'clock last night, lightning struck the steeple of the Park Avenue Baptist church, exactly where it has hit it three times before. One corner was torn away and the sides nearest it were slightly damaged. It will cost several hundred dollars to make repairs as it is almost as costly to erect a scaffold to reach the point as it is to restore the corner.

In the midst of the sterm, a tree was blown over at Front and Albert streets, breaking the fire alarm circuit. One blast was given on the fire gong, leading many to believe that the lightning had started a fire. In many parts of the city limbs were torn from trees and a large number of fuses were burned out at the telephone and telegraph offices.
